

KENTUCKY KICK SPURS SENATOR

Factions Start Contest at Onset of Gathering.

COMPLETE TICKET CHOSEN

Vice-Presidential Victory for William T. Vaughn Predicted by Judge Oglesby Young.

Wilson and Chamberlain democrats staged a terrific political battle to a draw at the annual nominating convention of the Kentucky Kick, held Saturday night at the Mulkey building. When the smoke and gas barrage was lifted at the close of the meeting, it was found that neither George E. Chamberlain nor Harvey G. Starkweather had won the Klick indorsement for the democratic senatorial nomination, so, in the interest of inter-party harmony, both names were placed on the ticket selected by the Klick.

The bitter fight for the Klick indorsement was started by the opposing Chamberlain and Starkweather forces at the outset of the meeting and was continued until the bitter end.

Major Hopkins of Newport placed Mr. Starkweather in nomination for the organization's indorsement. "The man I present to you for the nomination for United States senator is a Wilson democrat who is for the league of nations and world peace and opposed to compulsory military training," said the major in presenting his candidate to the convention. "And if nominated he will be elected by the largest majority ever given a democrat in Oregon. His name is Harvey G. Starkweather of Clackamas county." (Applause.)

L. M. Travis Puts Up Chamberlain. Leo M. Travis of Eugene, on behalf of Oswald West, ex-governor, presented the name of Senator Chamberlain for the Klick indorsement.

"On behalf of my chosen friend, Oswald West, who was born and bred in the dominion of Canada and in by reason thereof ineligible to membership in this opaque and esoteric organization, I therefore in his stead and behalf nominate George E. Chamberlain for incumbent, to succeed himself as United States senator for Oregon," said Mr. Travis.

"In doing this on behalf of my old friend, Oswald West, I pronounce Senator Chamberlain a dyed-in-the-wool bourbonian democrat." (Continued applause.)

13 Ballots End in Tie. When nominations were closed, 13 consecutive ballots were taken, each resulting in a tie vote for the two candidates. T. G. Thornton and Edward A. McPherson, Chamberlain followers, demanded the president cast the deciding vote, which he refused to do. Thereupon, Major Hopkins, in the role of peace-maker, moved that both candidates be placed on the Kentucky Klick ticket, and this suggestion was adopted.

William T. Vaughn, a charter member of the Klick, was nominated for vice-president of the United States by Judge Oglesby Young who presented his action with these words: "The man whose name I have the pleasure of presenting to this convention is too well known to need introduction to the delegates here assembled. He has been the foremost and fast advocate of democratic principles and his name is William T. Vaughn."

Vaughn of Southern Blood. "Mr. Vaughn is of pure southern extraction, his forebears settled in the wilds of Tennessee when that land was the hunting ground of the Chickasaws, Choctaws, Shawnees and the Six Nations, and known as 'Frankland'."

"Mr. Vaughn's people were the true pioneers of Tennessee, and long before the war operated the cotton gin region by General Andrew Jackson, who drove the barbaric Seminoles through the malarial everglades of Florida, then the wilderness east of the valley of the Cumberland and the baffling jungle of the Appalachians were trodden by the foot of his maternal ancestry. There was the first flint-lock to flash the fire of death in warning to the autochthonous Indian of the coming of the white man." (Loud applause.)

Vaughn Victory Predicted. "If nominated and elected here tonight, Mr. Vaughn will upon the first ballot taken at the San Francisco convention carry Oregon and Washington. On the second ballot he will sweep every state from the Rockies to the Pacific, and upon the third call of delegates a solid south will be his, and upon the fourth ballot he will be acclaimed the vice-presidential nominee of the democratic party for 1920." (Great and continued applause.)

Indorsement of Richard W. Montague for the democratic congressional nomination for this district was an unexpected blow to the supporters of both Dr. Esther Pohl Lovejoy and Mrs. Alexander Thompson, but a majority sentiment of the convention was against the indorsement of any woman for any public office.

ALASKAN spirit rather than Alaskan scenery dominates in the Rex Beach production, "The Silver Horde," now in its second week showing at the Majestic theater. It will be followed by Mack Sennett's latest five-reel comedy, "Down on the Farm," featuring Louise Fazenda.

"The Silver Horde" shows Alaska during the early days, presumably in '88, when Rex Beach, its author, was among the miners who thronged the gold-shot beach. His story, however, is not concerned with the search for gold, but of the rivaling asset, fish. It shows the salmon run, and these scenes are particularly interesting this week, when Portland's own stream, the Sandy, is teeming with smolts.

More interesting than the physical and natural resources of Alaska depicted in "The Silver Horde," is the delineation of character for which the other serves as a rich and massive background. The hardness, determination of fair-playing pioneers in contrast to scheming, bribing ways of certain eastern concerns where honesty is more or less important, is conspicuous in the theme of the story. Its hero is an easterner who is not inclined to fight for the west until goaded into it by Cherry Malotte, who was first introduced in the novel and screen production of "The Spoilers."

LESS TAX FOR POOR THAN RICH IS URGED

Redistribution of Burden Is Favored by M'Adoo.

Ex-Secretary Says Those Who Live in Idleness Should Pay More Than Workmen.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Ex-Secretary McAdoo, replying as a "private citizen" to the questionnaires issued to all candidates for presidential nominations by the National Board of Farm Organizations tonight outlined his position on various propositions being agitated in the pre-convention campaign.

Present tax laws, Mr. McAdoo declared, should be simplified and the burden of taxation redistributed so that the men who earn their incomes by the sweat of their brows and with their brains, should not be required to show throughout the United States, and in foreign countries under the title of Portland, Or.

The most pretentious mansion in Pasadena, the home of millionaires, was used as a location for an entire week for Harry Carey's current photodrama, "Crossed Claims." "Afternoon tea stuff" is out of Carey's regular line of work, but this play will remind theater-goers that Harry Carey was a successful stage actor long before he became a cowboy.

The drift of the times in almost all lines of industry is toward aggregation in production, but in the motion picture field an evolution is taking place in a directly opposite course.

Women's Activities
 An entertainment embracing many novel and attractive amusements of a professional and amateur character is announced for the Auditorium Tuesday evening, May 18, by the Ladies Aid society of Cathedral parish, of which Mrs. M. The entertainment is given for the benefit of the Jeanne Dore residential hall for employed women.

The Daughters of Isabella, one of the largest and most active young women's organizations in the city, have leased a cottage at Seaside for the purpose of affording all of the members and their friends restful outing by the sea at the minimum of expense. The cottage is on the boardwalk and will accommodate 50, and by opening June 1 a large number of girls can be accommodated, as the average vacation period is two weeks.

Charles Ray's dog Whiskers held up the work at the Ray studio for a few hours while he was taken to the dog hospital. Something was said to have gotten into his ear. Whether it was a flea or a rumor of the size of the matter, Whiskers became horribly temperamental for a few moments.

The fact that Beatie Love was born in Midland, Tex., and that her first independent production is "The Midlanders" from the novel by Charles Tenney Jackson, gives the coincidence a peculiar interest.

 OVERALLS CAUSE BATTLE FOR LIFE BY TWO ARMEAN.
 Clothing, Blown From Cockpit, Lodges on Rudder and Sends Plane Into Queer Acrobatics.
 ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 25.—(Special.)—A pair of khaki overalls brought about a thrilling aerial battle over this place this afternoon and crowds along the boardwalk saw two lieutenants in a struggle against death hundreds of feet above them. A big DH-4 plane used in coast patrol work, moving at great speed, caught the eyes of thousands below, when it suddenly went into a dizzy spin, following a flash of something from the cockpit that caught on the rudder. The pilot brought the ship out of the spin only to go into another. The aerial acrobatics continued for several minutes, then the craft went into a wide circle, more tumblings and straightened out into a forward landing at the Curtiss airport at Albany avenue. Lieutenants Galey and Martin of New York were aboard. The crazy evolutions of the airplane had been caused by the overalls which were lifted from the cockpit by the wind and caught in the rudder, jamming the control and giving the fliers a bad few minutes as the khaki wrapped itself around the rudder beyond their reach. Neither the men was injured and the patrol was continued as soon as the overalls had been removed.
