AIR CRAFT for Business Use

THE adaptability of aircraft to practical business purposes has become an established fact. Business men are coming to look on this swifter, cleaner method of travel as essential in the operation of a successful, up-to-date organization. The reason for this acceptance is the proven DEPENDABILITY of the more recent types. The NAVY, through the stress and strain of War, has learned valuable lessons which, incorporated in the construction of seaplanes and flying boats, have produced marvels of DEPENDABILITY. They are offering several hundred of these latest model seaplanes, many of them still in the original packing cases, at phenomenally low prices. These seaplanes and flying boats, having passed rigid NAVY inspection, are probably the most dependable type of aircraft in the world. They are not toys nor experimental jobs, but are similar to the types used by the NAVY today. They have low fuel cost per passenger mile, long flying range, and are able to withstand the waves and weather. These 'planes are
