Meeting Large and Jovial. The meeting was the largest annual Lehlbach civil service retirement assembly in the history of the cham- measure, which the house promptly ber, and was jovial to the point of passed after Chairman McArthur made hilarity. There were the routine reports, all indicative of the growth and usefulness of the chamber, but these speedily gave way to entertainment numbers of genuine merit— decisions were prompt and just; he words of Broadway and Morrison decisions were prompt and just; he words of Broadway and Morrison decisions were prompt and just; he words of Broadway and Morrison decisions were prompt than has expendent of the deviation of Broadway and Morrison during the day. All sorts of individuals were asked for their choice and vocal and instrumental. The hit of the evening, perhaps, was the singing of olden songs by the assembled business men, led in admirable fashion through the genius of Walter Jenkins. And when "Bly" Montgomery stood by the piago, cigar in hand, and sang "My Daeling Nellie Gray," there wasn't a vice in the house that didn't join the borus.
