

UNMARRIED COUPLE AIR ROW IN COURT

Judge Declares Separation
Needed Right Away.

MAN IS USED AS BOUNCER

Defendant Says Just Got Out of Army and Doesn't Mind Being Abused by Woman.

Reno was out-Renoed yesterday morning in municipal court when Judge Rossmann instituted an innovation by "divorcing" an unmarried couple.

The case came before the judge as an assault and battery hearing against Carl Lacy, proprietor of a soft drink establishment at 54 Second street. The complainant was Mrs. Neva Wickham, pretty proprietress of a barber shop on Madison street near Second. The two admitted that they had been "keeping company" for some time but that the path of love had often been made thorny by love quarrels, culminating in a "bottle royal" Tuesday, which took place where the two were adjoining apartments at 300 Jefferson street. Lacy accused the other of taking the initiative in the "bottle royal" which they averred occurred at that time and the quarrel broke out afresh before the judge.

Quarrelling Starts Too Soon.

"Here you are not yet married and you are fighting like cats and dogs," declared Municipal Judge Rossmann when he had a chance to get in a word. "What you need is a separation before this goes any further." The judge announced that in order to make certain that Lacy would stay away from the girl he would keep the $100 bail which he had up until such a time as the court considered the separation had proved to be an accomplished fact. In case Lacy did not leave the girl alone the judge announced that he would be arrested and additional proceedings would be started against him which might land him in jail. The girl was also admonished to leave Lacy alone.

"That big boob wants to get you under his control and for no good reason," declared Judge Rossmann. "I am giving you a chance to be free. But if you go back to him in spite of it all, you will get no further help from the authorities."

Just what occurred during the alleged "mix up" Tuesday was difficult to determine from the varied accounts given by the two parties to the affair. In court, Lacy declared that the other "started it."

Lacy declared that the girl was all right but that she had broken three umbrellas on him in the past.

"And I'm always the goat because I have to buy new umbrellas," he said.

"She has been beating you up that way and yet you allow her to back to her again?" demurred the judge.

Lacy doesn't mind abuse.

"Yes," was the reply, "we always made up again. I don't mind a little abuse. I just got out of the army not long ago."

Lacy declared that the girl used him for a bouncer. He said he had moved to the apartment adjoining her as a man had been following her around and she wanted his protection.

"Then Monday when she was sick I got her breakfast, cleaned up her room and rubbed medicine on her chest," he continued.

"And this is what I get for it," he declared turning to her. "I am arrested the next day."

"I am a different caliber of man than you are accustomed to dealing with. You're a lady barber and you are accustomed to working with easy marks."

"Judge, everything he said is a dirty lie," declared the woman in the case.

She also declared that Lacy had taken her away from her former husband.

"He made me run my husband out of town," she said.
