WARDEN TELLS OF WRECK

W. G. EMERY IN PORTLAND TO ATTEND GAME MEETING.

Trickery Frowned On in Making Arrests; Friendliness Aim for Best Results.

William G. Emery, deputy game warden and former correspondent of The Oregonian at Newport, arrived in Portland last night to attend a meeting of the deputy game wardens with Captain A. E. Burghdoff, recently appointed game warden.

While giving a story of the conditions of fish and game in Lincoln county in the Oregonian office, it was learned that there was a wreck at Bertha, and Mr. Emery accompanied several reporters to the scene of the wreck and assisted in caring for injured and obtaining facts for The Oregonian.

That fish and deer have never been more plentiful for many years than they are at present is the assertion of Mr. Emery, whose territory embraces 3000 square miles, which he has overseen for six years.

"I served under John Baker years ago, and with my present service I have come to believe that the best way to preserve fish and game is to protect them and to win the friendship of the persons living in the locality of hunting and fishing grounds," said Mr. Emery. "It is impossible to catch men this way, the state makes so many enemies when the deputies employ such methods that it is soon impossible to obtain a conviction, as such procedure arouses the antipathy of everybody."

"My plan is to see that sportsmen are informed and try to get them interested in protecting game and fish by showing them where they may be found; treating visitors from elsewhere the same as the home boys."
