If management had achieved nomince, after Wood, Lowden and Johnson were out of it, he would have been Sproul of Pennsylvania. Penrose wanted him and was diligently setting up the pins for him at Chicago. It is likely enough that Penrose's personal preference was nox, but Pennsylvania was not for ox. It was for Sproul and had dged itself to the governor, until not Penrose, should release the elegation. Therefore Penrose, wise nd wily boss that he is, was for proul, not half-heartedly, not temporarily, but genuinely. He knew better than to play tricks with the great Pennsylvania delegation.

Pennsylvania Aids Harding. nd not before, went in a body for Harding. Penrose may have had, probably did have something to do with it, but he did it through Sproul, not in spite of him, nor in any sort of bad faith toward him. The convention was running wild for Harding. There was nothing else for Sproul to do. of course, Penrose had a hand in the Harding stampede. It was the solution which suited the wishes and tempers of the delegates. There is convention psychology which your ader seeks to interpret, to foster, id to use. There had to be a dark and there had to be agreement about him Every state leader had his own ideas and they differed from the others. The convention was left to its own devices all of Saturday morning through four more ballots. On the fourth ballot (the eighth in the two days) the Harding boom was under strong headway. He got a few new delegates here and there and all the other candidates were either stuck or were steadily declining. The pre-monitory signs of the Harding stam-peds were too obvious at noon Satur-day to be neglected. Undoubtedly the leaders had contributed to it by passing the word around. But so far it was the convention's affair. A little after till 4 o'clock was hastily taken.

Lowden Decides to Withdraw.

The candidates were seen and Lowden knowing he was beaten, decided to withdraw. Wood refused. So did Johnson, It was said that Wood called for Johnson during the recess and it is known that Wood and Lowden took a brief automobile ride together. What happened at these momentous interviews may not be precisely known. But Lowden went to the Coliman for the factory to be built at Chehalis by the organization, detailed the proposed construction. It was needless. They were releasing them-selves, though Illinois and probably some others awaited direct word from Lowden. The convention was called to order about 5 o'clock, the stampede occurred and the rest is history.
