Walter Smallwood, who spent the early part of the year getting Huggins' sluggers in shape to bust the American league fences, tolled for the Figers. A giance at the box score would indicate that Portland splintered Smallwood from start to finish with heavy smashes, but the kind of baseball played behind Smallwood made Bill Essick weep large, salty

Vernon only made two boots, but one of these accounted for four runs and the chances overlooked by the Tigers would fill out a column of figures that would shade the census of old New York. Not that Walter would have won, but with anything but loose-leaf fielding behind him he would have wound up with a respectable score against him instead of the 2-to-2 beating that Portlanders have on his noble brow. hung on his noble brow.

Dick Cox pulled a great running catch of Devormer's line drive to right in the third, while Maisel knocked the natives cold with his sensational snag of Alcock's hard poke to center in the fifth, sliding on his face after the catch. There were other similar stunts pulled bewere other similar stunts pulled be hind Slats, who mixed some strong pitching with this support and won in

All Devormer was banished from the stage in the fourth. With Koehler on second, Siglin singled to right. Koehler fell down 15 feet from the plate and Devormer got the ball just as Koehler crawled to his feet and started on home. He took a tag at Koehler well up the line and the Beaver backstop staggered on over the rubber, apparently out. Holmes called him safe and Devormer delivered a great speech to the umps. The umps came back with one finger aimed at the clubhouse and Devormer.
