KIWANIS PROGRAMME FOR TODAY

8 A. M.—Start on automobile trip over Columbia river highway from Grandland, Fourteenth and Morrison streets. 11:30 A. M.—Box luncheon at Estelle creek. 12:30 P. M.—Inspection of government fish hatchery, Bonville. 1 P. M.—Return to Portland via Base Line road.

Selection of J. Mercer Barnett of Birmingham, Ala., as international president and of Cleveland, O., as the next convention city brought to a close yesterday the fourth annual convention of the International Kiwanis club, which opened in Portland last Wednesday. Though a banquet in honor of the delegates was held last night at the city auditorium and the visitors were taken on an automobile trip out the Columbia River highway this morning, the business sessions closed yesterday.

Portland was honored in the election of George A. Lovejoy, general chairman of the convention committee for the local Kiwanis, to an international vice-presidency in the organization. The vote of thanks given Portland for its hospitality was adopted with a round of rousing cheers.

Rose Fulkerson of Washington, D. C., former trustee of the organization and editor of the Kiwanis magazine, was elected first vice-president of International Kiwanis. Though at the time his name was being greeted with thunderous applause he was undergoing a major operation in a hospital of Portland. His recovery is expected.

Election Is Unanimous.

Edward Howell of Oklahoma placed the name of Mr. Barnett in nomination for president, and seconds were by Dr. Samuel Greene of Atlanta, Ga., and a delegate from Orleans, Ill. His election was unanimous.

After Mr. Fulkerson and E. J. Turner of Chester, Pa., had been nominated for vice-president, Dr. M. S. Barnwell of Birmingham, Ala., placed before the delegates the name of Mr. Lovejoy of Portland, "the hand back of this successful convention." As Dr. Barnwell had stormed against the selection of Kiwanis officers for sectional reasons in the address of the day on Friday, he explained that he was nominating Mr. Lovejoy because he is a son of the golden west or because he comes from the Pacific slope, but he said that he has done and of the things he stands for.

Carl A. Barrett of Boston, Mass., seconded the nomination of Mr. Lovejoy, in a speech in which he said that while Boston was known as the convention city of the world, it was something of a hospitality from Portland.

The three vice-presidents were elected with Mr. Fulkerson first choice, Mr. Turner second vice-president, and Mr. Lovejoy third vice-president.

Russell E. Ward of Jackson, Mich., former trustee of the organization, was unanimously chosen for treasurer. Benjamin V. Delahunt of Milwaukee, Wis., cashier of the merchants' and manufacturers' bank of that city and international treasurer of the Kiwanis for four years, was nominated for re-election, but after a second reading of the nomination of Mr. Ward, with the result that there was no second to his own nomination.

Edmund F. Arras of Columbus, O., James E. Pearson Jr. of Louisville, Ky., M. N. O'Brien of St. Paul, Minn., and Harry E. Karr of Baltimore, Md., were unanimously elected international trustees for a two-year term.

Feeling Runs High.

Feeling ran high over the selection of the 1921 convention city. Fort Worth, Tex., was the first city to be nominated for the honor, followed by nominations from Cleveland, Ohio, Cleveland, O., Fort Worth, Wis., and from the race in favor of Cleveland. The adoption of Cleveland was in the use of individual, state, provincial and national resources was urged in a resolution adopted yesterday. With economy was recommended the encouragement of increased production along with the discouragement of inordinate speculation, the observance of sound business principles and the practical carrying out of the resolution.

The resolution was introduced by Mr. Arras, a district governor of Columbus, O., chairman of the resolutions committee.

Support and hearty co-operation of Kiwanis were expressed in resolution to the incalculable in citizens of loyalty, sympathy and respect for all constituted authorities, national customs to the end that peace and prosperity may prevail.

The resolution which received the longest and loudest ovation was that in which the delegates assembled expressed their appreciation of the hospitality of Portland. It follows: "Whereas: The delegates and visitors attendant upon the first annual convention of the Kiwanis Club International have been the recipients of the extreme hospitality, warm cordiality and magnanimous spirit of Portland, the Rose City. Be it resolved, that the Kiwanis club of Portland, and their ladies, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks No. 142, Progressive Business Men's club, Portland Chamber of Commerce, Better Business Bureau of the Portland Ad club, various city officials, state officials, and all other citizens, that they have won, not only our gratitude, esteem and appreciation, but our hearts as well.

"Words and time will not permit the description of our wonder and enthusiasm with the grandeur of the scenery along the great Columbia highway, which William Cullen Bryant has so vividly described in 'Thanatopsis.' Then too, the extent of the boulevards and parks, and the beauty of the city.

"We have feasted at your tables, communed with the spirit of the great northwest and contrived a debt of everlasting gratitude."

Boy Scouts Indorsed.

To settle all questions as to the classification of membership in the Kiwanis, a resolution was passed fixing four classes eligible. The first was a person in any business which could be classified definitely, the second and a manufacturer or producer of any specific commodity; the third, one who furnished any kind of expert service; the fourth, capitalists or retired men. The memberships were ruled to be entirely individualistic, not the property of the firm or business to which the member belonged.

The boy scout and campfire girl movements were indorsed by the convention by resolution. Greetings were sent to the international association of rotary clubs, which are to be convened at Atlantic City, N. J., next Monday, extending the pledge of cooperation in attaining the high ideals of citizenship, to which the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs were said to subscribe mutually.

A vote of appreciation for the work of international headquarters of Kiwanis in Chicago, and O. Sam Cummings, international secretary, was given, and a similar resolution of cordial thanks to Henry J. Elliott of Montreal, Canada, retiring president, was adopted on the motion of Victor M. Johnson of Rockford, Ill., president of the board of governors of Kiwanis.

Six Resolutions Adopted. Six resolutions covering internal policies of Kiwanis were adopted. The first provided for uniformity in the keeping of attendance records, so that contents would be based only on those actually present for local clubs as recommended as well as standard by laws.

Recognition of an amendment that mail for visiting Kiwanians would be delivered to convention headquarters today, but from then on to the office of Harold C. Jones, local Kiwanis secretary, 205 Concord building.

Reconsideration of an amendment to the constitution of the International Kiwanis, at the morning session, brought the defeat of a proposal to authorize the issuance of provisional certificates to clubs having less than 50 members.

Under existing provisions of the constitution charters will not be granted to any club unless such club has a minimum of 50 members. It seems the consensus of opinion among both international officers and delegates that Kiwanis should cover the field thoroughly where clubs with 50 or more members could be obtained before an invasion of smaller cities was launched.

Associate Memberships Voted.

This amendment was proposed by the trustees of the Kiwanis district of Indiana and, at the conclusion of discussion against adoption of the amendment, the trustees of the delegation announced that they would vote against its adoption at this time.

Classification of membership in Kiwanis clubs, as well as numerous other classifications, in an amendment proposed by the international board of trustees was withdrawn by that body with the explanation that it was not desired to forestall any such classification until the organization had gained greater strength.

Co-operation of the Kiwanis with the vocational training of disabled soldiers being accomplished by the government was asked by Brigadier-General William C. Day, Camp Lewis, morning speaker at the convention. They could help, he said, in finding lucrative employment for the veterans in providing for their training and by exercising patience with the men under training.

The speaker urged military training and the teaching of Americanism in the schools as a vital need of the country. He pointed out that at the beginning of the late war America had only 6000 officers, 25 per cent of whom were inexperienced, and 125,000 soldiers, 50 per cent of whom had not been in service two years. He emphasized the fact that the allies provided a bulwark of bodies while Americans trained at home and in France.

"Every young man owes service to his country and he should have an opportunity to gain some experience before he is called upon for service," declared General Day. "Teaching of the children of the country the respect due the flag and due constituted authorities avoids much disloyalty in later life."

Villa "Agent" Scatters Bills.

El Paso, Tex., sprang into the limelight when it was announced that a message from Francisco Villa would be delivered to the assembled delegates by "Don Samuel Gillette." "Gillette" rode to the platform, resplendent in Mexican chaps, vest and sombrero, and delivered an impassioned speech in Spanish. When he concluded he was introduced as Sam Gillette, president of the El Paso Kiwanis club, and delivered an impassioned speech which was distributed among the delegates.

El Paso delegates announced they regretted they could not ask for the next convention, but that hotel accommodations were being reserved for thirty Americans, due to the presence of "wet" Juarez just across the border.

WATER BILL FINALLY SIGNED

Signature Affixed by President Within Time Limit.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The water power development bill, 10 years in the making, finally has become a law. Announcement that President Wilson had signed the measure today at the White House is an interesting story which gives credit to a law, as I trust it may, I assure you that as chairman of the commerce committee of the senate it will gladly introduce a bill in the opening of the next session of congress to repeal this provision of the act and do all in my power to get it passed. We have congress will act promptly and favorably upon it.

"I trust that with this assurance you will feel justified in withdrawing your objection and urge the president to sign the bill." The objection was withdrawn, clearing the way for the president's signature. It was found in examining the record of congressional enactments that there was only one precedent for signing a bill after an adjournment and for years both congress and the president had taken it for granted that an unsigned bill was dead when congress finally closed a session.

President Lincoln, wiser than many before him or since, it was discovered, signed one bill after adjournment and its legality was never questioned.

GEORGE W. PERKINS DIES AT SANITARIUM

Noted Financier Succumbs to Brain Inflammation.

FUNERAL TO BE SUNDAY

End Comes Unexpectedly as Family and Friends Believed Malady Would Be Thrown Off.

NEW YORK, June 18.—George W. Perkins, financier, died this morning in the Stamford Hall sanitarium, Stamford, Conn. Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon from the Presbyterian church at Riverdale, a suburb. The body arrived here tonight and was taken to the Perkins suburban home, where it will lie in state until Sunday.

Interment will be made in Woodlawn cemetery. The services will be private. The honorary pallbearers will be Cleveland H. Dodge, Frank A. Munsey, Elbert H. Gary, J. P. Morgan, George F. Baker, Sr., Richard V. Lindsbury, Lewis L. Deland and Thomas A. Buckner.

Nervous Exhaustion Complete. Mr. Perkins was taken to Stamford about 10 days ago, when his son, George W. Perkins Jr., announced the change was made to afford his father a complete rest and seclusion from his friends who sought his counsels during the political campaign preceding the Chicago convention.

The affection to which Mr. Perkins succumbed is believed to have been the result of influenza and pneumonia contracted while serving with the Y. M. C. A. in France during the war.

A statement by the dead financier's physicians given out at Mr. Perkins' office gave the time of his death as 2:15 this morning. Death resulted from an attack of "acute inflammation of the brain, the result of complete nervous exhaustion due to intense and continuous overwork," the announcement said.

The death of Mr. Perkins was particularly unexpected, it was said at his offices, on account of his having recently survived a very serious heart attack, after which his family and friends believed his constitution sufficiently robust to throw off the malady.

Distress Expressed by Friend. Distress over the loss of an old friend was expressed by J. Pierpont Morgan when he was informed of Mr. Perkins' death. He said, "I am deeply distressed at the news of Mr. Perkins' death. He was a friend for more than 20 years and a very active partner for ten years."

With Mr. Perkins at the time of his death were his son, George W. Jr., his daughter, Mrs. Edward Freeman, and his sister, Emily Perkins.

George Wallbridge Perkins was born in Chicago, January 21, 1862, a descendant of Jacob Perkins, an English banker who settled in Boston in 1821. His father, George W. Perkins, long engaged in the shipping business in Buffalo, was later a pioneer in the life insurance field. The son entered the insurance business in Chicago when 15 as a clerk, became a bookkeeper, an agent and subsequently manager of a Cleveland office. He went to Denver and in 1892 was made vice-president of the New York Life insurance company. His achievements attracted the attention of the elder Morgan and in 1890 he was invited to become a member of the Wall-street firm. In his capacity he negotiated a number of big foreign loans. He remained with J. P. Morgan & Co. until 1910, meantime becoming a director of numerous large corporations, including

An ideal dairy country
Evergreen pastures, pure mountain water, temperate climate make Tillamook ideal for dairying.
The summers—when most of the cheese is produced—are pleasantly cool, of a temperature about the same as the old spring house on the farm where grandmother kept her butter and milk.
Tillamook dairymen are constantly improving their herds. They asked to have a special law enacted for Tillamook County, which makes necessary the regular, rigid testing of every cow for health.

the steel and harvester companies, a number of railroads and the International Mercantile Marine company. Retiring from business a few years later as he said, "to devote myself to other work of a public and semi-public nature," Mr. Perkins wrote and spoke frequently on the subject of industrial justice and when Colonel Roosevelt became progressive candidate for the presidency in 1912 he became chairman of the national executive committee of the party. Previously he had been a republican.

Mr. Perkins married in 1889 Miss Evalina Bell, a daughter of Flamen Ball of Cleveland, O., to whom two children were born, Dorothy and George W. Perkins Jr., the latter of whom was a lieutenant in the American expeditionary force.

VILLA SENDS GREETINGS TO KIWANIS GATHERING

Personal Representative, Sam Gillette, Reads Message and Distributes Currency to Fellow-members.

PANCHO VILLA'S personal representative, in the person of Sam Gillette, president of the El Paso (Tex.) Kiwanis club, visited the Kiwanis international convention Friday and distributed pieces of Villa's currency to all of the delegates and their wives.

During the morning session Norman Walker, ex-Associated Press staff correspondent in Mexico, read a personal letter from Villa expressing his regret that he was prevented from attending the convention but he was sending his personal representative, "Don Samuel Gillette." To the music of the tesorero song from "Carmen," President Gillette entered the hall wearing a complete Mexican costume. He made a speech in Spanish, and closed with an invitation to visit Juarez, Mex., opposite El Paso, Tex., and spend the money he had brought for the delegates. International President Elliott of Montreal, received a big bunch of the Villa money and promised to spend it in Mexico next year.
