

BRAKEBERRY'S SHOT SUSPECT CAPTURED

"Little Ole," Georgia Negro, Surrounded by Posse.

SLAYING IS MOST BRUTAL

Otis Mayes of Portland Killed on Special Train at Station Near The Dalles.

HOOD RIVER, Or., June 24.—(Special)—Otis Mayes, 122 Graham street, Portland, brakeman on extra train No. 117 of the W. R. N., was shot and killed last night about 9 o'clock and the body thrown beside the track at Chatfield, a flag station about 13 miles west of The Dalles.

Negroes Are Surrounded

Homer Rogers, host at the resort; Sheriff Christian of Wasco county and other members of a posse surrounded the negroes in a thickly wooded plot. Except for Ole, who carried a small pistol, presumably the weapon used last night, none of the blacks was armed.

Two white boys, Tom Burr, aged 13, of Centralia, Wash., and Burt Mitchell, 21, of San Francisco, and two other negroes were captured here last night.

Mayes was not missed by fellow members of the freight train crew until the train reached here. Pools of blood were discovered on the floor of a gondola car. A man whose name was not learned by local authorities, hearing the conversation of the train crew, gave the alarm when he saw the two young whites and the two negroes in the local freight yards. The quartet was immediately arrested by Night Officer Hunt. Quick action by the officers and train crew drew out the story of the shooting.

Clothes Blood-Stained

Harry Allen of Kansas City and Council Oliver of Norfolk, Va., were the names and addresses given by the negroes captured last night. Oliver's right shoe and his overalls were blood covered and it is thought that he may have assisted in throwing the body of the brakeman from the train. He says, however, that the blood was smeared on him as he crowded between the sides of the train and the bolters with which the gondola was loaded. Allen claims that Mayes was collecting fares on the train. When the trespassers on threat of making them jump from the moving train, he declares that he had paid himself and another negro and was proffering a fare for a third, when the black called "Little Ole," who had no money, drew his gun and fired it into the brakeman's mouth.

Pieces of silver found on the floor of the car led to the arrest of Mayes when the train slowed down for Hood River, according to Allen's story. Ole urged all the blacks to join him and flee to the mountains. The white boys were in another car. They state that they heard the shooting but did not see Ole fire the fatal shot.

Body Is Found

Accompanied by Dr. J. W. Sifton, local physician, and the stranger, who gave the alarm that led to the arrest of the boys, the train crew and officers ran a locomotive and caboose slowly over the track between here and The Dalles in search of the body. It was first sighted near Chatfield siding, just east of Mosier, by Hugh G. Hall, local newspaper man, as he stood on the steps of the caboose. The white boys, all the negroes and the stranger will be held at The Dalles as witnesses.

Both Sheriff Christian and Sheriff Johnson of this county were in Portland this morning. City Marshal Frasier took charge of the local end of the case. He was arranging for having bloodhounds brought from Salem by automobile when motorists arriving from the upper valley reported sighting the blacks near Mount Hood, 20 miles from the city. Immediately on the arrival of Sheriff Christian a posse was rushed to the upper valley in automobiles.

Mrs. Mayes Goes to The Dalles

Otis Mayes made his home at 122 Graham avenue with his wife, Mrs. Mayes was notified of the death of her husband by railroad officials yesterday and left immediately for The Dalles. He is also survived by a sister, Mrs. T. Vaughn, of this city.

Shriners Poach on Honor Through Lack of Vest

Too Late for Parade, Syrians Take Stand by Arch and Are Mixtures for Dignitaries by Dignitaries.

THIS is the tale of how almost the entire line of the Shriners' big night parade Wednesday came to pass in review before two nobles of Syria temple, Pittsburgh, Pa., and of how they received more adulation and salutes than would ordinarily befall anyone short of an imperial potentate. It happened because Harry E. Spilker couldn't find a white vest. He and Lloyd L. Shaffer were "dolling up" in their dress suits preparatory to falling in with Syria temple when Spilker discovered the calamity. The vest wasn't in his grip, it wasn't in his trunk. It wasn't to be found, that was all.

"Great Scott!" said Spilker to Shaffer. "I can't march with the boys like this. Now where the dickens is that vest, anyway?" Shaffer was sympathetic and joined in the search. It was useless. They couldn't find the vest. "Well," said Shaffer. "I'll lend you mine." And he did. Somewhere he dug up an extra waistcoat for himself and Spilker proceeded to don the Shaffer garment. It fit all right except in one particular. It was rather loose amidship. However, he comforted himself that it was a good banquet vest, being made to allow plenty of room for dinner, and presently he and Shaffer were ready. They set out to find Syria temple.

The hunt for the vest, however, had taken a lot of time. The result was that Syria temple had marched on to form for the parade and they couldn't find their crowd at all. In fact, the parade had started. Spilker and Shaffer got as far as the arch at Sixth and Alder streets, where Shaffer suggested that they might as well stop and wait for Syria temple to pass them, whereupon they could fall in. As they stopped there under the arch, Spilker in his own dress suit and Shaffer's vest, and Shaffer in his own dress suit and vest, they were variably the class of fashion and the mold of form. And moreover, mightily distinguished looking men. The head of the parade swung around the corner at Sixth and Morrison and moved on down the street to the arch. Chief Justice J. W. Morrison, two distinguished Shriners standing there, looked again, and saluted. The policemen saluted. The two stately returned the salutes.

Mayor Baker came along in his big car, saw these nobles at their post, and saluted them. The nobles of Al Kader temple saluted as their long contingent passed. Along came Governor Olcott, marching with Al Kader. He, too, saluted. Spilker and Shaffer returned all through the parade. Syria temple was a long, long way back in the line, and a long, long time in coming. Spilker and Shaffer stood by the arch and returned salute after salute. Even some of the dignified handmasters in bearskin shakos, seeing them there, gravely saluted. When a handmaster salutes it's because he's sensing the main thing in the world saluting. Spilker and Shaffer accepted all these honors modestly and returned the salutes. As a matter of fact, they never did get to march with Syria temple. After about two and a half hours of the parade they passed by some of their friends in Algeria temple and fell in with them. But before they fell in, they had decided that it is always well to go to a Shrine convention minus at least one dress vest.

MAYOR EXTENDS THANKS

CO-OPERATION OF CITIZENS IS DEEPLY APPRECIATED.

Shriners and Committees Grateful to AH Contributing to Great Success of Convention.

Co-operation of Portland citizens in entertaining the nobles of the Mystic Shrine, perhaps more royally than they have ever before been entertained, is deeply appreciated by those who had charge of the great three-day programme, according to announcement made yesterday by Mayor Baker. The mayor's expression of appreciation follows:

"To the public: Portland people have done many big things, but never before have they co-operated so generally and so generously as they did during the past week in making the Shrine convention a success. Because it is impossible to extend thanks individually to all those who are entitled to thanks, I take this means of expressing the gratitude felt by the Shriners and the various committees in charge of arrangements to all who contributed to the reception and entertainment. It has demonstrated to the world that Portland and Oregon are made up of live wires, who put the final finishing coat of brown on anything and everything they undertake, regardless of size.

"Only by the generous co-operation of the entire public was it possible for Portland to send her thousands of visitors away thoroughly satisfied with their treatment, their entertainment and our courtesy. And Oregon has been well repaid by being presented with a wonderful performance by the visitors.

So again in behalf of those who had the responsibility of the reception and entertainment, I extend sincere thanks to every man, woman and child who contributed time or effort in any one of the thousand activities necessary to our great pleasure in saying that this takes in about every man, woman and child in the city of Portland.

GEORGE L. BAKER, Mayor.

ARE WE SOON TO BECOME A RACE OF BALD-HEADED MEN?

PROF. JOHN H. AUSTIN

Bacteriologist, Hair and Scalp Specialist of Chicago. Who Now Has Offices at The Owl Drug Co., Talks Most Interestingly About the Hair.

He says baldness is increasing rapidly among men and points out some of the reasons. Prof. Austin is probably right in saying that only about one man in every hundred ever thinks about his hair at all, except to comb it two or three times a day. If it falls out he looks anxiously at the falling hair and then promptly forgets it until the next time he uses a comb.

A man will give the utmost attention to his teeth, because he knows that when trouble arises he will have more trouble and probably lose his teeth if he doesn't go to a dentist promptly. But his hair doesn't ache, it just gradually dies, and when it is nearly gone and the roots are dead he anxiously tries a dozen different remedies at once and then resigns himself to baldness.

Prof. Austin says the use of dandruff cream, massage, colds and hot tonics is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure. The particular trouble with which you seek to get rid of the must be known before it can be intelligently treated. Prof. Austin examines the roots of your hair with a powerful microscope. He finds out just what is the trouble with YOUR HAIR, and then he tells you what to do for the trouble.

FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION of the hair and scalp - both men and women invited. Free of charge at The Owl Drug Co., Broadway and Washington, Hours, 10 to 12 and 2 to 4 - Adv.

DANIELS INSPECTS BASE

Rotarians Told U. S. Must Provide Great Navy.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 24.—The United States must continue providing for its navy and keep it great, said Joseph Daniels, secretary of the navy, in an address to the Rotary club today. The secretary's speech was part of a programme which kept him busy all day.

Much of his time was devoted to inspection of the great marine base, on which work is proceeding fast, of the navy hospital and training station to be built here and of the naval air station on North Island. In his talk to the Rotary club, Secretary Daniels said:

"We must provide a great navy. Whatever else we may disagree upon, we must never go back to the days when to transport American goods we had to call on the ships of foreign countries." The marine barracks to be built there, Secretary Daniels said, would be the finest in America.

PARENTS FIGHT FOR BODY

Peculiar Point of Law Raised in Court Action.

A legal battle between two divorced parents to obtain the body of their dead son yesterday raised a peculiar point of law when the father filed a demurrer, claiming that the dead son is not now personal property, but real property. The mother, Mrs. Harriet Billups, not long ago filed a complaint in which she sought to obtain the body interred in River-view cemetery by the father last January while she was ill. The defendant in the case of George A. Rail, father of the late Delmar Rail, who died in the navy.

Rail and Mrs. Billups had been divorced since 1914 and Mrs. Billups custody of the child, then 16 years old. Rail's attorneys said he would carry the question of ownership of the body into the supreme court, if necessary. About 300,000 mines and their accessories were produced during the war, and of these 130,000 were laid by British forces. The maximum rate of production attempted in England was 10,000 a month, and involved the em-

EQUAL RATES ADVOCATED

Eugene Man Represents Western Lumbermen at Hearing.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Equalization of railroad passenger fares with freight rates in order that the burden may be distributed among all classes of the public was urged before the interstate commerce commission today by A. C. Dixon of Eugene, Or., representing the West Coast Lumbermen's association.

Western lumbermen, Mr. Dixon asserted, objected to the increase of 24 per cent in rates asked by the roads of that territory and opposed any advance on a percentage basis. Valuation of the roads on the basis of their property investment accounts is inadvisable, he said.

Further rate increases on lumber would have the opposite effect from what is desired by the carriers. Mr. Dixon told the commission, because many mills would be forced out of business and there would be less traffic resulting in less revenue rather than in the larger returns sought by the roads.
