

PLATTFORM BUNDLES CLASH OVER ISSUES

Prohibition, League and Irish Question Up.

LONG JOB IS EXPECTED

Finished Product Probably Will Not Be Ready for Convention for Three Days.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—The fight over prohibition, the league of nations, the Irish question and other subjects which have troubled democratic leaders in pre-convention discussions was centered tonight in the conference rooms of the committee on resolutions. As the committee sessions began, some of the most experienced in the ways of platform building predicted it might be three days before finished product would be ready for submission to the convention and that even then there probably would be minority reports bringing the prohibition issue at least into a fight on the convention floor.

All elements were represented on the committee, which had one member from each state. There were ultra wet and ultra dry, league advocates and opponents and representatives of nearly every other shade of opinion on many other public questions.

Bryan Fights for Plank

W. J. Bryan was there to lead the fight for a bone-dry plank and James H. Nugent of New Jersey, was the field marshal of the wet, in the treaty fight, the administration representatives included Senator Glass of Virginia, and Secretary Colby of the state department, while in opposition to the administration stand were Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, with several others who voted in the senate to take the republican reservations.

W. Bourke Cochran of New York, was the leading advocate on the committee of an Irish independence plank.

Besides these, the committee's roster, included ice-President Marshall and ex-national Chairman Vance McCormick.

Many Suggestions Received.

One complete platform, many partial platforms, and enough loose planks to last the party for many years to come were on file as suggestions when the committee met. The platform submitted in its entirety was the one adopted by the Virginia democrats, endorsed by President Wilson and brought to San Francisco by Senator Glass. The other suggestions came from many sources within and without the party.

There was so much material depending in use in some form that the platform fashioners soon abandoned hope of following the advice of Vice-President Marshall and writing the platform on a postal card. It was regarded as likely that before final decisions were reached on any issue the committee would give interested individuals and organizations an opportunity to present their cases in public hearings.

SIX CONVENTIONS LISTED

VANCOUVER TO BE MECCA FOR CROWDS FROM WASHINGTON.

Elks of State Will Convene in Annual Session for Three Days in August.

VANCOUVER, Wash., June 28.—(Special.)—Vancouver is becoming a popular convention city for the state, and promises to grow more so from year to year.

The Washington state association of druggists physicians is holding a three days' convention here now, and have been joined by Oregon members. On July 1, 2 and 3 the Radcliffe Chautauqua will hold forth. On July 5, Vancouver will have a Fourth of July celebration, in charge of children, and it will be a real children's celebration. They will even put on the parade.

July 26, 27 and 28 are the dates for the Red Men's state convention. August 19, 20 and 21 the Washington state Elks' convention will be held and elaborate plans are being laid for handling a crowd of 16,000 on the last day of the convention, when several thousand Elks and friends from Portland will spend the day here.

September 16, 17 and 18 the second annual prune harvest festival will be held.

September 28, 29 and 30 the State Woman's Christian Temperance union convention will be held.

Already the Washington State convention of Eagles has held forth here, a few of the delegates still remaining in the city.

June 22 the Shriners came here, 15,000 strong, to launch the Antinous, 900-ton ship, for the republican convention of New York, built by the G. M. Standtler Construction corporation.

Mrs. Ellis Lewis Garretson, wife of the new imperial potentate of North America, was the sponsor.

BOSSSES RUN CONVENTION

publican national committee, is a far-seeing public man, who recognizes that times have changed. He advocated having the republican convention do its work in the open and so it was run. Newspaper men were admitted to the conferences of the state delegations and to all of the important committee hearings.

At this convention the old-fashioned caucus, designed to conceal from the folks back home what their delegates are doing, is in full swing. The Idaho delegation this morning furnished one of the examples of the archaic caucus which always worked in the dark.

Idaho Caucus Exclusive.

When the delegation was called to order by Senator John F. Nugent there was a visible nervousness on the part of several delegates. Beecher S. Hitchcock of Sand Point, Idaho, prominently made a motion to exclude "everybody but Idaho democrats" from the room. Delegates seen after the secret session said they could not reveal what went on inside, but the story is that one of the big bosses had a message to communicate to the delegations.

The Washington delegation held the same kind of caucus Saturday afternoon and everywhere somebody is whispering to somebody else. Secretary of State Colby, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Secretary of Agriculture Meredith and Postmaster-General Burleson and approximately 1900 federal office holders are here working to nominate McAdoo.

Public Pays for Session.

Another 1000 federal office holders are here trying to nominate Attorney-General Palmer, and don't overlook the fact that while these government servants are here devoting themselves to keeping a member of the Wilson family or administration in office, the public is paying their salaries and some of their traveling expenses. Secretary Daniels is understood to be hanging his expense account on an inspection of the navy-yard at Mare Island. Well, it would be a shame if Mare Island were not inspected right now.

A few days ago some of the disappointed supporters of Hiram Johnson were threatening to bolt the republican party. They came down and looked in on the preliminaries of this convention and got over it. Senator Johnson himself is understood to be getting ready to come out for Harding and Coolidge.

He spent one day around the Palace hotel, where delegates and politicians congregated, and it is said that he has gone into a quiet retreat to do penance for some of the unkind things he said about certain men in this republican party.

WOMEN YET IN FIGHT

TENNESSEE DELEGATION WILL BE CALLED UPON.

"Wanton Delay" of Vermont and Connecticut Governors Cause of Some Criticism.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Woman suffrage advocates, at a luncheon given today to democratic women by the San Francisco branch of the civic center, were warned against over-confidence by Mrs. Abbey Scott Baker of the national woman's party.

Although slated over the action of Tennessee's governor in calling a special session of the legislature for August 9, Mrs. Baker warned her audience that the fight for ratification of the woman suffrage amendment could not be counted upon until the final vote is taken. Women workers arranged to call next Thursday upon the Tennessee delegation here and urge necessity for favorable action in Tennessee.

Mrs. Baker also scored "wanton delay" of governors of Vermont and Connecticut in calling special sessions of their legislatures to consider the women's amendment.

REFUND ORDER APPEALED

Power Company Objects to Paying $5600 to Centralia.

OLYMPIA, Wash., June 28.—(Special.)—A writ of review returnable July 8 has been issued by Judge Wilson of the superior court of Thurston county, upon application of the North Coast Power company, to review the order of the public service commission directing the power company to refund to the city of Centralia $5600 on rates in excess of the contract tariff with the city.

The order of the commission was issued June 9 and holds that while other rates in the tariff filed by the power company effective December 29, 1919, were approved, the company had a contract rate with the city and the rate specified in the contract could not be increased until a new contract, approved by the commission, replaced the existing instrument. The commission held, however, that the new rates collected were not excessive, and makes such rates effective July 1, but orders a refund of the excess charges up to that time.

School Teacher Weds.

ALTURAS, Cal., June 28.—(Special.)—Miss Nettie Leonard, teacher of the county and member of the county board of education, was married here to William Drane. Mrs. Drane will continue teaching the South Davis Creek school. Mr. Drane served in the navy during the world war.

New Bubonic Case Discovered.

BEAUMONT, Tex., June 28.—With the discovery here today of the second suspected case of bubonic plague, federal, state and city authorities inaugurated an extensive rat extermination campaign.
