

SITUATION SAME AMONG CANDIDATES

Leaders Are Endeavoring to Round Up Sentiment.

McADOO BOOMERS ACTIVE

Administration Friends Confident Platform Will Be Through-Going in Terms.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—There was more McAdoo talk in the air tonight but apparently there was no change in the real situation among the various candidates.

Tonight showed the first signs of movement among the leaders and managers to round up sentiment among the uncommitted delegates and compute the possibilities of nominating somebody.

Principally, the night was given over to meetings of the various committees in the great building which also contains the convention auditorium. The leaders and candidate managers are all under one roof, and although they are principally engaged in committee business, they are not losing the opportunity to confer and possibly get together on the makings of a state of their own, or possibly decide to accept one which the drift among the delegations may be forcing on them.

Supporters Hope for Sign.

McAdoo boomers hoped all day that their candidate would make some statement indicating the declaration of National Committeeman Love of Texas, that the nomination would not be rejected. Some were disappointed and others thought Mr. McAdoo in view of repeated previous declarations of declination was pursuing a wise course in remaining silent.

Palmer people continued their efforts to maintain the showing on the opening ballots and the Cox people were doing the same. About the only point that the Tammany delegation agreed upon was that there would be no nomination on the first ballot and most of them seemed to agree that there would be no nomination in less than three to five.

The McAdoo people today agreed upon Sam E. Smith of Wichita, Kansas as their floor leader and at the same time began picking out a representative on circuit to accept the nomination. His selection was made at a conference of McAdoo supporters who described themselves as "bitter ends." Some of the names mentioned were Representative Haley of South Carolina, and Mrs. Peter Olsen of Minnesota, were among the assistants selected for Amidon.

Tammany Help Not Expected.

Most of the McAdoo boomers are saying they do not expect any support from the Tammany delegation of New York unless it becomes apparent that the former secretary will be nominated. Talk of Secretary Meredith for second place as McAdoo's running mate, continued to be heard in the convention camp. The talk of candidates on the whole tonight is almost where it was last week without any appearance of strength enough for a nomination at any corner of the triangle. Mr. Bryan and some others still feel that the question of candidates cannot become a thoroughly active one until the platform issues have been settled. Administration supporters said tonight they were confident that the platform would be written in thoroughgoing terms of support for President Wilson and his administration. Many of them predicted that it would contain neither a wet nor a dry plank.

SNAKY COMPLAINT FILED

Husband Avers Wife Took Part in Frolicsome Dances.

"We danced and drank until we were all seeing snakes," boasted Selma Wisdom to her husband, Grover Wisdom, following a little party in Seattle on March 6, 1920, says the husband in a divorce complaint filed in the circuit court yesterday. She made the further assertion, it is maintained, that "every guy that dances with me has to go to the hospital."

In his complaint the husband gives a very unsavory reputation to the defendant, Selma Wisdom, saying that it was a notorious dancing place which his wife often frequented. The wisdoms were married in Seattle July 8, 1918. Mrs. Wisdom started on the cabaret and roadhouse route shortly after marriage, avers her husband.

Stella Pitts filed suit for divorce yesterday against Jack Pitts, alleging cruelty.

CITY THREATENS TAXIS

Quarterly Licenses to Operate Must Be Obtained by July 1.

"For-hire" car drivers in Portland must have quarterly licenses by July 1, or stop operation. Usually 30 days' grace is allowed, but according to Motor Bus Inspector Gill the grace period will not be in force this year. The reason given by Inspector Gill is the lack of protection which results because of the period of grace. Automobile drivers cancel their bonds on the day that the license expires and do not renew the bonds until ten days has expired. During this time they operate without protection to the public in case of accident or redress is possible.

OUTBURST SEEMS STAGED

A preliminary keynote is something new in national conventions, but it suited the crowd, for it was of the bull-eye hitting, smash-head-on-of-everything variety which only your true ballplayer knows how to furnish and which all political gatherings are eager to hear.

The very first sentence of the vice-chairman's oratorical appetizer was a bitter sneer at the Chicago convention. The crowd was almost immediately on its feet and hungry for more, which it got. Vice-Chairman Kremer is a somewhat cocksure little person, with a hard voice and a school-book delivery, but he put it over.

at the outset it gave promise of being pretty prosaic and polite and some of the audience left. But those who stayed were well repaid. Chairman Cummings had something more of a task than tickling the ears in exciting the passions of the immediate crowd. He was talking to the entire democratic party and to so much of the whole people as would listen. He was the official well-leader of the lesser democratic rabble-rousers and the crossroads speechifiers of the country.

Model Orator Attempted.

It was to be the model oration for the whole campaign. Therefore it had to have punch, penetration, power, phrases and a fact, here and there. It is no job for an amateur or an old fogey. Cummings is neither. Nor is he a consummate word artist. But he is an effective counsel for the defense, the defense being an administration much in need of adequate defense. And he knows how to plead his case and adapt it to the prejudices and the understanding of his audience. The speech was not only well delivered, but it will read well. Undoubtedly, it had been read in advance at Washington, and perhaps corrected and amplified. Here and there was a phrase which might have come from the skilled pen of the president himself. However that may be, he did not cut out anything that was missed, for apparently everything was there, even the significant suggestion that the republicans could find not a word to say for Ireland, carrying with it the inference that the democrats should and would supply the omission.

In the same paragraph was a tearful reference to Armenia, but there are some who remember, if Orator Cummings did not, that the democratic congress voted this year a presidential plan for an Armenia mandate with substantially the same fervent unanimity as the republicans displayed in opposing the Wilson speech, he was not justifying nor explaining democratic opposition to Wilson nor democratic division and confusion out of any of his policies or actions.

Big Made for Irish Vote.

The one unexpected feature of the Cummings keynote was the open bid for the Irish vote by his mention of Ireland. It was a hint as to what the convention should do, and probably will do. It will give three cheers for Ireland. That is all. Angela could do no more. If they had otherwise committed themselves to a league of nations which includes standpat article 10.

Exhortation for article 10, sympathizers with the Irish cause might easily be reconciled to the Wilson league of nations. It is not a friend of free Ireland as opposed to the league and all its friends think it spells the doom of Irish independence and all the untoward persuasions of democratic platform eloquence will not convince them otherwise. It has been a difficult problem to solve for the democrats, and it appeared until today that they had decided to give up and the specious attempts to fool the unfoolable Irish.

It is clear that the platform is at once to contain an endorsement of article 10, which commits the destinies of Ireland forever to Great Britain, and also to contain a declaration of States to a policy of non-interference for Ireland, and is to have also a beautiful sentiment about the Irish cause.

De Valera Wants Declaration.

De Valera is here and he wants a declaration favoring the independence of Ireland. He is a great orator, he will have something to say on the question, later.

One notable merit of the Cummings effort was that it appeared to please all factions. If Mr. Cummings, as one voice of the president here, has any preference as to candidate, he did not show it today. It may be questioned whether an outright hint from the White House that the president wants any particular person nominated would help that person.

The McAdoo movement has reached swelling dimensions without the White House sanction. The president has played no favorites as between McAdoo and Palmer. The latter is going ahead with a somewhat shaky candidacy as if he expected to be nominated.

All the mechanics of convention promotion and manipulation are being employed for him. He has brass bands and marching clubs, plumes, badges, keops and every other known device to keep alive the enthusiasm of his followers and to impress the general public.

Palmer Clique in Evidence.

At the convention today an organized Palmer clique was much in evidence. But the convention takes but languid interest in Palmer. It looks for him to drop out early in the balloting, following a little party of general approval.

The pins are all set up for McAdoo. The McAdoo clique is the one to make it appear that the call for him came from the convention itself and was not a suggestion of the White House nor by the ex-secretary. It has succeeded wonderfully. The Cox balloon which a day or two since was soaring high is now showing alarming signs of collapse.

The decline started when Ohio gave out, through Governor Campbell, that Governor Cox would be well pleased to have omitted from the platform all references to prohibition. It was an awkward subject for a wet candidate running in a dry time, but saying nothing and leaving both the wets and dries to hope for the best appeared to Ohio the wise course.

The pronouncement, leaving them high, if not dry, greatly incensed the wets states of New York, New Jersey and Illinois, and they began to lose interest in Cox. Now there are signs that Murphy and his supporters are to open negotiations with McAdoo. If they can make any kind of terms it may be found that they are more amenable toward the presidential son-in-law.

MURPHY IN BAD HUMOR

Nomination of Dry Candidate Would Injure Ticket in New York, Says Politician.

BY JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

(Copyright by the Bell Syndicate. Published by permission of the Associated Press.)

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—(Special.)—If there were a Homer in this town he would be engaged in singing the horror of Charles F. Murphy. Mr. Murphy came to San Francisco expecting to assist in the nomination of James W. Cox as a presidential candidate. Cox, he figured, was a good liberal candidate, living close enough to Kentucky to favor high alcoholic content in bootleg, and a very free construction of the Volstead act. Mr. Murphy had a good deal to say in Cox's favor, both in public and in camera, to borrow a phrase from an old ad. But Cummings was making a

He allowed that while the boys from Fourteenth street, New York, and vicinity would be ready to leap lightly into the Cox camp whenever their voices were wanted. So Mr. Murphy, co-operating with Norman Mack of Buffalo and other grave and reverend counselors, made all the necessary arrangements to support the Ohioan.

And then, without the slightest warning, in dropped one of the Cox men, and told Mr. Murphy that Cox was not nearly as anti-prohibition as he was painted; that, in fact, he would be perfectly willing to run on a dry platform.

Murphy Is Nervous.

Mr. Murphy, who is considerably more than an eagle's talon about the waist, gasped and he doesn't gasp easily. The noise of his rasping was heard in several adjoining rooms and a number of his attendants hastened in to see what was the matter. They soon found out. Mr. Murphy was in a state of nervousness. He felt that his confidence had been betrayed, that his efforts had been wasted, that altogether he had been foully dealt with.

And when, along with the rest of the delegates, he went into the convention today to listen to Homer Cummings sound the keynote of the campaign, he had already begun the formulation of new arrangements. From now on until Mr. Murphy can find a candidate to his liking, his followers will stick firmly to Al Smith in the balloting. Meanwhile, Mr. Murphy will seek out a man who is positively, unqualifiedly and emphatically wet, and who will insist on a plank that is equally so.

Mr. Murphy is a democrat at heart and would like to see a democrat in the White House. But he is also boss of Tammany hall and wants to win for that organization just as many offices as he possibly can.

And he firmly believes that any candidate who has the least taint of prohibition on him, not only will lose from the nation, but will drag the New York state and judicial ticket down with him. Mr. Murphy has seen too many state and judicial tickets dragged down to care for that sort of thing. Which is why he is off of Cox, and will doubtless remain off of him.

Murphy Is Limp.

The Murphy defection has, of course, heartened some of the other candidates and there is a great deal of McAdoo talk around today. But there is not enough of it yet. And too many by degrees are coming to see that there will be nothing whatever to say in the final decision. It would be foolish to propose a candidate who will not support no candidate who is dry, but he will not do so unless he absolutely has to.

And knock he suffered when he discovered that Cox was not as guaranteed has left him pretty limp. But he will not let it show. He will support no candidate who is dry, but he will not do so unless he absolutely has to.

OVATION GIVEN WILSON

grew and grew, a formless, toneless thing that had in it something that stirred the blood and stirred the emotions. Delegates leaped on their chairs, waving and shouting. They stamped into aisles, leaping and cheering in a packed mass before the platform.

Delegates Join in Parade.

Over in the Virginia section a man stepped on the state standard, from the floor and charged toward the speaker's stand, waving it high in the air. Other states followed. Some of them were slower to get in motion, but as they shouted and tumult continued standard after standard came up and the march around the hall began. In the New York section Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt seized the state standard and pushed into the crowded aisle, battling with others who sought with eager hands to uphold the sign.

But there were some among the New York delegation who struggled with Roosevelt to prevent him from carrying the state standard in the demonstration for the president. There was a lively scrimmage akin to a center rush in a football game, in which fists were flying and there seemed danger of bloody noses. A policeman who interfered got a pummeling, one man lost his coat and several men lost their nose glasses. No one was hurt, the protesting delegates changed their minds and Roosevelt triumphantly marched off with the New York standard to join the Wilson demonstration.

A shout of added intensity marked the delegates' recognition of the incident and a cheer for Roosevelt was all but lost in the general tumult.

It was long before order could be restored. Even when Vice-Chairman Kremer had launched upon his speech, repeated every thrust at the republican party or any reference to President Wilson.

When Chairman Homer S. Cummings of the national committee had been elected temporary chairman and escorted to the platform, the hall finally hushed and prepared to listen with close attention to his keynote address. Delegates expected something to cheer at. They were not in the mood for it and they were not disappointed.

Crowd Soon Quieted.

Mr. Cummings began in a quiet voice. A few shouts of "louder" came from far back in the hall, but he did not proceed far before the great throng was so still that every syllable was carried to the highest galleries. It was a long speech. Mr. Cummings suggested that to his hearers, but cries of "go on," "take your time" met him. He drove his points home and his audience was alert to cap them with shouted approval. At one point he chided the Chicago platform of the republicans because it contained, he said, no word of hope for Ireland, no word of mercy for Armenia, because it "concealed a sword" for Mexico.

Back among the alternates, a woman leaped to her feet at the mention of Ireland, shouting hysterically something about "British tyranny in Ireland."

"That's the answer; we're not members of the league!" Chairman Cummings called back at her, but even as he spoke the sergeants-at-arms were moving down to prevent further interruption and delegates, intent on their chairman's arraignment of republican policies, shouted "Sit down!"

Attacks Win Approval.

When Mr. Cummings characterized the Chicago platform as a "masterpiece of evasion, a show of the attack, and a moment later, when he declared that "old guard" had sold the honor of the nation at Chicago, he drew into a roar, punctuated with cries of "Go to it," "Hit 'em again!" "That's the stuff!"

The chairman went through the history of the league from the first mention of it in diplomatic correspondence before the United States entered the war to the second refusal of the senate to ratify the treaty that contains it. He quoted utterances of Senator Lodge and the late President Roosevelt as saying that some concessions must be formed. He said the last of the 14 points enunciated by President Wilson had been necessary to secure the language of article 10 of the covenant and that no word had been raised then against it.

League Roll Is Called.

"The real trouble with the treaty," Mr. Cummings said, "is that it was negotiated by a democrat." Uproarious applause and shouts must be heard also to neutral states that had or were about to join, shouts of "tell 'em" answered him. Nation by nation, he named them and then asked if the delegates wished to know what nations had not joined the league. Cries of "Yes, tell 'em" came from all parts of the floor.

"Revolutionary Mexico, bolshevist Russia, and the United States of America," he answered.
