Major Percy Willis, coast artillery

Major Percy Willis. coast artillery corps, having been found physically disqualified for active field service by a board of officers appointed to examine him for promotion, his retirement from active service with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, coast artillery corps, is announced.

Colonel Willis served for about eight years in the Oregon national guard, rising from the grade of private to that of major of infantry. When the Spanish war broke out in 1898 he was commissioned by Governor William P. Lord as a major in the famous Second Oregon regiment of infantry, which, under the command of Colonel and Brevet Brigadier-General Owen, Summers, made an envisible record in the Spanish war and Philippine insurrection. While in this regiment Willis was recommended for promotion to brevet lieutenant-colonel by Major-General Henry W. Lawton for meritorious services in the San Isidoro campaign. City Commissioner Mann, in charge of the health bureau, announced yesterday that unless some plan better track on East First and Hawthorne than is already embodied in the sanisioners Bigelow and Pler, who led in the successful effort to remove the screens, is presented, he will instruct his department officials to proceed to enforce the ordinance.

"The ordinance itself was not amended, but the council issued a ruling which permitted the discarding of the several test of the several test of an accident in which permitted the discarding of the several test of an accident in which permitted the discarding of the several test of an accident in which permitted the discarding of the several test of an accident in which permitted the discarding of the several test of an accident in which permitted the discarding the track of the several test of an accident in which permitted the discarding the track of the several test of the several test of an accident in which permitted the discarding the track of the several test of the several test to enforce the ordinance.

"The ordinance itself was not amended, but the council issued a ruling which permitted the discarding of the screens during the convention. It was said that the sale of strawberries on the market was so rapid during this period that it was impractical to use screens. However, unless some plan to keep flies and insects away from the fruit is presented, the ordinance will be enforced following July 6."

State Health Officer Roberg has intimated that should the council refuse to protect public health by insisting upon the screening of all foodstuffs displayed in the open, he might use the powers granted to him as state health officer and force the use of screens.

before they eat them and I can see no harm in permitting the marketmen to display such berries without screens. However I have been told of a plan which is in vogue in some parts of the market where foodstuffs are covered in such a manner as not to interfere with the sale of the goods. I am investigating this plan and it is possible that I will recommend the adoption of the plan throughout the market if it seems feasible to do so."

City Attorney LaRoche, who was recently in the cast, considers the screening ordinance an asset not only to Portland but to the fruit dealers themselves.

"In the cast you see wonderful specimens of fruit, but such fruit is not inviting. City officials should not modify any ordinance which protects public health and produce dealers and merchants should be glad to abide with any such ordinance without the solution call from Benton, Linn, Polk and Marion counties.
