Cox and Palmer. It will be their only opportunity. The roster of available names now has in a prominent place Homer Cummings, whose fine keynote speech and attractive personality have made an

Platform to Be All Wilson. It is not known by me at this writing what will be the final form of the platform when it comes from the resolutions committee. Notwithstanding the situation of the issue, it will still be a Wilson platform. It is to be noted that the committee distinctly refused to accept the platform of Bryan or Senator Walsh, in so far as they were known to be intended as substitutes for the Wilson plan.

Situation Is Summed Up. Summed up, the presidential situation is about as follows: McAdoo at the start has nearly the same number of votes as Palmer or Cox. He is expected to gain rapidly for several ballots. Palmer, it is thought, will go down rapidly and Cox sooner or later. The popular impulse here is for McAdoo and he is expected to receive the second choice of many delegates.

NOMINATIONS ALL IN AND DEMOCRATS NOW READY TO BEGIN WITH BALLOTING

Former Portland Actress, Mrs. Julia Brown, Makes Hit With Convention When, Dressed Like a Debutante, She Secured the Nomination of John W. Davis of West Virginia.

AUDITORIUM, SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—The galleries filled early in expectation of a showy fight on the platform issue. The delegates came more plentifully than at 11 A. M. the hour set for resuming the session, the floor and delegate spaces as usual were only partially filled with chatting members. The band, the organ and the singers as usual entertained the crowd while things were waiting to be started.

Beside the speech placing Ambassador Glass in nomination, it was understood that Senator Glass would be placed in nomination by Representative Flood, one of the Virginia delegates. So far as the convention officials had been advised, early today, that ended the list of nominating speeches, and the next business would be to elect a speaker.

Band Takes Old-Time Air. Reminiscence of the happy singing carnival of yesterday that held the convention in its joyful grip for an hour, came back to the delegates with the old-time airs that had been put on the big audience in a carnival spirit. The band played "The Sidewalks of New York," but the spirit was lacking and he got no response, but when he switched to his new melody, "Dixie," he drew the usual crop of yells.

Whole sections in the state spaces were filled with some of the delegates of the hall. The delegates who were present wanted to talk rather than come to order, and Senator Robinson who had the great organ and continued whacking with the gavel. "Why in the world should I take a man five minutes to sit down?" he remarked to some of his assistants.

Police Clear Aisles. After sending the police through the aisles to clear them, the chairman got the delegates seated and Bishop Nichols of the Episcopal diocese of San Francisco offered a prayer, concluding by leading the convention in the recitation of the Lord's prayer. Then the organ pealed off "The Star-Spangled Banner" and the choir sang chorused in the strains of the majestic air.

At the close of the singing Judge Murasky of San Francisco took a place at the speaker's stand and recited "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" which the great organ softly throbbed the melody of the martial air in accompaniment.

The choir recited the first stanza while the organ trembled out its melodious strains, and then coming to the chorus, turned on the organ. The organ played a clear, bell-toned soprano range with the refrain, beginning softly at first and then building up to a mighty thunder of "Glory, glory, hallelujah." Then the choir sang "The Sidewalks of New York."

At 8:40, the chairman finally got the delegates seated in the aisles cleared. As usual, the proceedings started with prayer and the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner." At 8:50 the platform committee reported it was still not ready. On motion of Delegate Linebaugh, the convention went into a temporary recess while the state delegation caucused to name their national committee.

McAdoo Combination at Work. The McAdoo combination at work. The efforts of the combination attempting to form against the nomination of John W. Davis of West Virginia. The McAdoo combination at work. The efforts of the combination attempting to form against the nomination of John W. Davis of West Virginia.

North Carolina sent W. C. Newland of Lenoir to the platform to place in nomination Senator Simmons, for whom the North Carolina delegates are instructed.

Mrs. Martha Nelson McCann of California made a second speech for Simmons, merely saying: "Ladies and gentlemen of the convention—I rise to second the nomination of Senator Simmons of North Carolina."

Oregon With McAdoo Forces. North Dakota passed and Oregon announced that the delegation "joined the movement to draft the Honorable William G. McAdoo."

Washington was called and passed and W. C. Newland of Lenoir, N. C., was named by Governor Cornell to the platform to nominate John W. Davis, ambassador to Great Britain.

There were calls of "we want to hear Bryan" from the galleries. Adjustment Is Announced. Disappointed at another delay, the convocation set the platform committee to be ready to report early in the morning. There were yells of disappointment at that.

Senator Robinson then told the convention that after conferring with the platform committee he had found them still in session, with prospects of continuing for a considerable time. He said the chair was assured the committee would be ready to report early in the morning. There were yells of disappointment at that.

And in response to calls for Bryan, Senator Robinson said the Nebraska was unable to be present as he was being called by the platform committee. Then on a motion to adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow the convention broke up for the night.

The two men, he said, took him to a drugstore at Tenth and Morrison street and left him.

Abel. Both pleaded guilty.

BRICKBATS HURLED BY McADOO'S FOES

Delegates Collared in Effort to Block Nomination.

Dislikers Declare They Have More Than Third Needed to Halt President's Son-in-Law.

McAdoo became the dominating figure of the quarrel today because he wasn't made the victim of a nominating speech. The deffest and quickest way to put a man out of the game is to talk from half to three-quarters of an hour in his favor. A candidate can stand in pretty well under the obligations of his enemies, but it takes a marvel to survive the booms of his oratorical friends.

Reaction Is Favorable. After most contenders had been put out of the running yesterday by words in their favor a gentleman named Jenkins senator and put McAdoo into the game with neither praise nor encomiums, employing all the tricks of the trade to get into the game. He was nominated by a majority of the delegates this would be the last story to be sent out of San Francisco on the McAdoo question. As part of the delegates left their seats they were seized by the collar and dragged back into the room to be polled and tagged. After that men were set to watch them. At least 200 are being held in hotel rooms and only permitted to go out under escort. By the time the balloting begins, it is thought, the people who do not want Mr. McAdoo nominated will nearly know where they stand—nearly, but not quite.
