friend of Senator Reed and favored Cox for president he added:

"In other words, you got $150 from the Goitra faction, and $100 from the Stuever faction, and you are now in a position to antagonize," asked Senator Kenyon.

"Well, I thought the money had been given and was to help the democrats," Streuter replied.

"Goitra made it plain the money was to be expended in the campaign, he was sorry he couldn't get more."

Streuter then declared that while "making it plain" the money was for expenses, Goitra told the delegates there were no strings attached to the money.

"Was there a wink in his eye?" asked Senator Spencer.

"No."

ORPHANS MARCH FOR U. S.

20,000 YOUNGSTERS IN PARIS TOUCH AMBASSADOR'S HEART.

Slipping in Sticky Mud, Small Raiders Pass Reviewing Stand

Waving Flags.

(Copyright by the New York World, Published by Arrangement.) PARIS, July 9.—(Special Cable.)—No part of the elaborate July 4 programme which was opened with the wreath-laying ceremony at Washington monument and the big dinner at the Palais du Quai d'Orsay, attended by Ambassador Herrick and nearly 200 distinguished Frenchmen, has so touched the hearts of Parisians and Americans alike as the parade of more than 20,000 little French war orphans in the Tuileries gardens.

A night of heavy rain, which stopped shortly before the parade was to begin, water-soaked the ground in the gardens and made the marching difficult for the children, who were arranged in groups representing the various Paris districts.

The orphans, all dressed in spotless white, waved their American flags as they passed before Ambassador Wallace, who watched them from an improvised tribune, with Marshal Joffre, Minister of Education Honorat, Minister Devastat, Region Olier and many other noted Frenchmen.

Slipping in the sticky mud, some of the smaller paraders were assisted by representatives of "Fatherless Children of France," an organization which has been supporting orphaned children from contributions gathered in the United States, but they lustily shouted their thanks to "our American benefactors" as they marched.

At the head of the parade marched 13-year-old Raymond Petit of the 13th Paris district, chosen to present the picture bride method of the United States, but they lustily shouted their thanks to "our American benefactors" as they marched.

Throughout the parade a French military band played American airs, including the national anthem, and the Paris Choral union sang French patriotic songs. Mr. Wallace made a short speech, in which he assured his hearers that the American people would easily forget the touching token of the French orphans' gratitude.

BRIDEGROOM 19, BRIDE 15
Bride's Mother Attends and Bridegroom Has Guardian's Consent.

VANCOUVER, Wash., July 9.—(Special.)—Miss Elsie L. Prather, 15, of Hillsboro, Or., and her 19-year-old bridegroom, Mr. Wallace, of St. Helena, Or., accompanied the bride's mother, Mrs. Nancy E. Prather, and with the written consent of the bridegroom's guardian and guardian, journeyed to Vancouver today and applied for a marriage license.

The license was issued as the law provides that girls 15 and boys 16 may wed, if they have the consent of their parents, or guardians.
