

WESTERN INVASION BY COX PROBABLE

Democratic Nominee Has Requests to Open Campaign.

Southern State Besieges Ohioan for Initial Fireworks—Promise of Victory Is Made.

DAYTON, O., July 9.—That the west may be developed into one of the chief battle grounds early in the national political campaign was the inference drawn from today's developments here.

Governor James M. Cox, democratic candidate for president, stated that many requests that he open the campaign in the west have been received, and in his talk with newspapermen, he left the impression that he was interested in an early invasion of the west, if not in fact favorable to it.

W. W. Blaine, president of Corn Palace, Mitchell, S. D., headed a delegation that called on the governor today urging him to accept an invitation to speak at the festival to be held September 27 to October 7.

Charles E. Morris, the governor's private secretary, telegraphed from San Francisco, he declared being beset by California delegations urging that the campaign be opened there.

No Manager Indicated. Governor Cox has given no intimation as to whom he wants for campaign manager. It is known, however, that many of his friends are urging the selection of H. H. Moore of Youngstown, O., the governor's pre-convention campaign manager.

Inasmuch as Ohio is to be the chief battle ground in the campaign, both candidates being from the state, some of the governor's friends say it is imperative that a manager be chosen who is thoroughly acquainted with political conditions in the state.

Conference Is Indistinct. The governor has indicated that he may go to Washington in the near future for a conference with President Wilson.

Committee to Meet. Mr. Cummings' telegram notifying the governor of the proposed conference follows: "After consultation with Moore (E. B. Moore, national committeeman for Ohio and manager of the anti-Cox pre-convention campaign), and others, I have called a meeting of the democratic national committee for Tuesday at the Hotel Miami, Dayton, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of Tuesday, July 20. This will enable us to proceed in a body to Franklin, Ohio, if this accords with your wishes.

ALL EUROPE DISCUSSES LOVE AFFAIR OF KING OF GREECE AND MORGANATIC WIFE

Monarch Insists on Keeping His Bride Whom He Married in Athens Last Fall and Demands That Subjects Recognize Mile. Manos as Their Queen.

King Alexander, Who Is Endeavoring To Have His Morganatic Wife Recognized.

WHEN King Alexander of Greece recently went to Paris to spend the early summer days with his morganatic wife, Mile. Manos, and at the same time denied any intention of abdicating his throne because he had married a woman who was not a princess, "all the world" started to discuss the new historical love affair.

The world is asking itself whether Greece will recognize Mile. Manos as its queen. King Alexander argues that it should. He says that, as Mile. Manos is the daughter of an old Greek family, she better accords with the conditions of the country than any strange princess would be and that no longer a stranger exists as to why the crown should be withheld from his bride.

Strong in his argument sounds, history reveals the fact that so far events have been different. Only one ruler has ever succeeded in sharing his throne with a morganatic mate. That was Napoleon III, whose marriage to Eugenie de Montijo, countess of Teba, was celebrated with as much pomp and splendour as though she had been born to the purple.

But things were different with Napoleon III. He did not come from an ancient lineage, as does the king of Greece and his plebeian ancestry caused the reigning royalty of that time to regard him as a questionable match for their daughters. It was small wonder that Napoleon told the senate and legislature when he announced his engagement to Eugenie, that he "preferred for a wife a woman he loved and respected rather than one who was unknown to him."

And so, the world is asking, will the marriage between Alexander and Mile. Manos prove his blessing, or will the king of Greece forsake the sweet heart of his childhood, declare the ceremony performed at the home of the bride in Athens last November to be null and void, and choose a princess to occupy his throne with him?

Alexander is the second son of King Constantine and Queen Sophia. He succeeded his father in 1917, when Constantine and his eldest son were forced to abdicate and retire to Switzerland. And now Alexander insists in keeping his bride, and in a proclamation to his subjects has demanded that she be recognized as queen.

Colonel Manos, father of Alexander's sweetheart, had charge of the senate and legislature at Las Vegas, only played together as children, but continued their friendship when they were grown. Almost daily they were seen speeding down the road in Alexander's high-powered motor, for the king is a famous auto fiend.

Only once was there a record of any wavering of Alexander's affections. That was when black-eyed Josephine Marie Kelly, daughter of a Chicago politician, came to Greece to work with the American Red Cross. Mile. Manos had completed her education in a Belgian convent and at the outbreak of the war she offered her services to her country by becoming a stenographer at Washington, D. C. Because of her fluent knowledge of languages, however, she was transferred to Greece in November, 1918, and it was the following January that Alexander met her at a ball.

For a time it looked as though Greece was destined to have an American queen, especially after a certain fancy dress ball, when the king publicly deserted the royal party to converse with Mile. Manos. But the rumors were denied and just one year after Mile. Manos had first come to Greece Alexander proved his fidelity to the companion of his childhood by making her his morganatic wife.

Though the ceremony performed by the archbishop of Athens is considered invalid, it has never been approved by the metropolis of Athens, who outranks the archbishop. Wearied by the whispered criticisms which surrounded her, Mile. Manos finally left Athens and went to live in Paris with her mother and sister, and it was this city that King Alexander, with the consent of his prime minister, went a few weeks ago to visit his bride.

At the risk of horrifying Dr. Hornaday and his fellow clubmen and social conservationists, it may be said that if it were not unlawful for any Alaskan to marry a woman, any Alaskan would gladly subscribe to a mine to mine and blast the great sea lion rookeries while they are covered with countless thousands of the immensely destructive and utterly useless creatures. And in doing so he would have no more thought of "commercial exploitation" than he has when he demands that the protection law be repealed and the brown bear be destroyed in order that his flocks may not be decimated and that his children may play in safety.

ALASKA BROWN BEAR READY FOR DEFENSE

Clubroom Sportsmen Are Not Ones to Advise Hunters.

SEA LIONS GREAT PERIL

Answer Is Given to Dr. Hornaday's Plan for Exterminating Wild Beasts of Far North.

BY THOMAS B. DRAYTON, SEWARD, Alaska, July 2.—(Special.)—Dr. William T. Hornaday's published suggestion that each Alaskan citizen sally forth annually and slay three brown bears to reduce the greatest danger to life in this territory, is worthy of his respect and respect to the unanswerable facts concerning the perpetual menace of these beasts.

For the benefit of the naturalist and his following, both in congress and out, it may be explained by an experienced bear hunter that those sportsmen whose evidences of their fearless daring are said to be mostly conceived and executed within the confines of the city clubs, whose desperate won trophies fall to the shot of a professional guide whose high pay guarantees his subsequent silence.

Quick Judgment Necessary. As Dr. Hornaday knows, as well as anybody, a city club environment is more conducive to calm and studied judgment than one in which the actor must decide and act quickly and wisely or lose his life. And, amazing as it is to an Alaskan, such an environment as is found in the directorship of the organization Dr. Hornaday dominates seems not inconsistent with epithets borrowed from the gutter when occasion arises to answer unanswerable facts.

Dr. Hornaday's published response to the recently published facts, being limited to an impugnation of both the integrity and veracity of the writer, it may be illuminating to provoke an equally disingenuous defense of that other object of his solicited affection and of the Alaskan's violent antipathy, the sea lion. Almost within sight of where this is written there is a vast herd of sea lions, variously estimated at from 10,000 to 50,000. They live on fish, as a distinguished naturalist ought to know and in feeding take but one bite from each fish they kill. As these monsters frequently attain a weight of from 300 to 350 pounds it seems not improbable that the claim of experienced and observant fishermen is true, that each sea lion will account for the destruction of a minimum average of 50 pounds of edible fish daily. This would make up a startling aggregate of fish destruction and related to but a single herd of sea lions.

Sea Lions Utterly Worthless. Since the American people have fallen into the merciless hands of extortioners, it may not be improper to recall that fish is an immensely valuable food for men and women and children, while sea lions are utterly worthless for all purposes save only the highly problematical value of their hides for tanning and the "sport" it affords an occasional wealthy supporter of Dr. Hornaday's conservation theories to kill two of these "game animals" annually.

At the risk of horrifying Dr. Hornaday and his fellow clubmen and social conservationists, it may be said that if it were not unlawful for any Alaskan to marry a woman, any Alaskan would gladly subscribe to a mine to mine and blast the great sea lion rookeries while they are covered with countless thousands of the immensely destructive and utterly useless creatures. And in doing so he would have no more thought of "commercial exploitation" than he has when he demands that the protection law be repealed and the brown bear be destroyed in order that his flocks may not be decimated and that his children may play in safety.

History never repeats itself" we are told.
