Cox' Charges Refuted.

At a meeting of the Portland players in the clubhouse before the game today they subscribed unanimously to a statement emphatically denying to a statement emphatically denying the reported charge of Dick Cox that George Maisel was trying to pose as a "crowned head" or something of that kind. The players agreed to ask The Oregonian to publish this denial, adding that the trouble which resulted in Cox quitting the club was entirely due to his own "hot-heatedness."

Manager McCredle said that Cox' reputed accusations were all both, saying
