American Golf Progress Is Considered Rapid.

LIFE ON LINKS WILL END

British Expert Promises Final Article Giving Impressions of Advances Here.

BY HARRY VARDON. (Copyright by Harry Vardon. Published by Arrangement.) NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(Special.)

After the present tour of the country is ended I shall go home and stay there. This is the last time I shall ever visit the United States, unless some unforeseen event should make it very necessary for me to make a fifth journey westward across the Atlantic.

There are many, perhaps, who have forgotten that this is my fourth trip. Twice in the year 1899 I came. I arrived at four together. Just as we are now doing, in 1913.

I have had much opportunity to watch the growth of the game on your side of the ocean, perhaps a better opportunity than many Americans who have watched the game as closely and for as many years as I have.

I have been able to make comparisons of the growth of the game in other countries, but the chief reason that I have been able to judge American golf progress is because my visits have been few and at rather long intervals. When one plays daily on a constantly improving golf course he cannot realize the extent to which it has improved at the end of a year, for it has changed by such slight degrees that he has been unable to gauge it.

But if he had seen that same course at intervals of a year he would have easily marked the improved condition.

American Progress Traced. So it is with me as regards the game here. I have been able to observe and have observed that it has been almost unbelievable improvement in the golf of America.

A short time before I leave here to go to England I am going to write a final article, giving all my impressions of the advances made since my first visit to the United States.

I am sure I shall not come back. After I go home I fully intend to take my ease and to devote my leisure to the game with all my heart for many years. And, although I feel that I shall not be able to play the game for several years, I confess I do not find it quite so easy to carry on as I did in my younger days. But, mind you, I am still needing a bit more of effort to play my game than I once required, I am taking that fact.

At the present time one of the best little bantamweights on the Pacific coast is in our midst and he is just aching for a crack at Billy Maccott, the local bantam king.

Maccott is only a few days from his trip to Sweden, Norway, Denmark, France, Switzerland, Finland, Brazil, Canada, Mexico, and Portugal.

A check of the targets in yesterday's shoot-off of the tie in the 600-meter, second shoot-off, showed that the United States, instead of gaining second place, was again tied with South Africa. The second shoot-off was held today, the Americans winning by a score of 284 to 279.

SEATTLE RUSHES PLANT

FUNDS FOR POWER IMPROVEMENT ARE DOUBLED.

Delay, Engineer Reports, Would Mean Loss of Quarter Million and Put Project Off Year.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 2.—(Special.)—Possibility of delays in construction of the city's sewage hydro-electric power plant has been averted for the present.

The city council's committee determined to double the appropriation of $500,000 from the Skagit bond fund.

The remainder of the year, making it $800,000 instead, and directed Chief Engineer C. F. Udden to proceed with construction of the plant.

Mr. Udden declared in submitting this report that delay in the work on the huge water power improvement would mean a loss of a quarter of a million dollars and that the completion of the project would be put off fully a year if operations were suspended for six months.

An outstanding feature of Mr. Udden's report was the statement that electric current can be brought to Seattle from the Skagit at a maximum cost of approximately one-half hour, which J. D. Ross, superintendent of the light department, said this immediately after the meeting.

When the cost of current generated by the municipal light plants now, and one-third the cost of power generated by Lake Union steam plants under the present excessive prices of fuel.

The court's decision was based on the fact that the bakers' association had not shown that it was in financial straits.
