"No good!" replied the passer-by, a chill esupicion in his eye.

"I'm not the man to help a plan For movie show publicity!" Heip! help!" observed the drowning girl, "my hair is getting out of "And furthermore, I'm far from shore Amidst the raging ocean."

The fisherman pulled in his line and leaning out across the brine
He loudly hissed: "I'll not assist
In movie show promotion."

'Policel" the stranger said, "this has just removed my pocketbook; Pray reprehend the rogue, my friend, For this illegal action."
Not me," the passing cop exclaimed,
"I certainly would be ashamed
To pinch a thus like him to plug

A photoplay attraction!" Too Bad. As the mother of presidents, Ohio probably regrets that she has only two sons to give to her country.

After the Shrinkage. Nowadays dollar diplomacy is nothng but peanut politics.

Let Reds Take Warning. A porch campaign may not have much punch, but it will be more pop-ular than a torch campaign. (Copyright, 1520, by the Bell Syndi-cate, Inc.)

> One Little Hour. By Grace E. Hall.

One little hour-and all that was in The heart's sweet peace disturbed Mathe gladsomeness on silent wings

And solemnly there enters dark And at the table takes the vacant One little hour! A happy home

Has easy access; little children play In sweet contentment—skies all blue ind clear, And then a storm that sweeps that lome away.

And blossoms heaped upon a mound of clay. one little hour! O. fill each to the With love and kindness ere some one is gone Out where the twilight shadows hover

Out where the silence waits the Out where the vell o'er hope's dear face is drawn.

Far away the birds are singing, And the trees are telling stories to the nestlings the nestlings;
Stories of the world beyond the sheltring, comforting arms
Of the moss-lined rudely fashioned home of moss and twigs;

Stories of the world of men, of chil-dren's joys and playtime in the sunshine; Stories of the adventures of the wind postman of the flowers As he bears message from the violet to the timid ores.s;
Stories of fairies abroad at early
dawn, unseen by man;
Stories of all that I would know—

I, imprisoned between walls.
