

AMERICANS HELD BY SOVIET AS HOSTAGES

1000 Foreigners Anxious to Leave Moscow.

FIVE YANKEES IN PRISON

Bolsheviks Consider United States Most Uncompromising in Attitude Toward Reds.

TERIJOKI, Finland, Aug. 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—A thousand foreigners, including 35 Americans, are at Moscow hoping for action by their governments to get them out before winter.

Aside from 35 of undoubted American citizenship, there are many claiming American citizenship, who have gathered from all parts of Russia. They are the latest of Russia's pre-war foreign residents.

Inquiries by the Associated Press correspondents before his departure to Finland from Moscow, because he had not received advance soviet authorization for a trip from Vladivostok to Moscow, developed that many foreigners have been refugees in Moscow over a year. A trainload of French once was sent to the frontier, and then returned because of the attitude of France toward the bolsheviks.

The Americans say their status is worse than the other foreigners. They are held virtually as hostages while the soviet tries to force Washington to negotiate officially with Moscow or bolshevik agents.

Five Americans in Prison. Bolsheviki officials consider the United States the most uncompromising of all nations in her attitude toward the soviet.

Five Americans are known to be imprisoned. Among them are Dr. A. W. Stickney, geologist, and his wife, who recently arrived from California. The others are Royal C. Keeley, a man named Lamark, and a naturalized American Greek, named Callimachos, who has been imprisoned a year and a half, charged with being a spy. H. D. T. Reynolds, an American mining engineer, is not permitted to leave Semipalatinsk, Siberia, the bolshevik demanding his services there.

A half dozen Americans have been imprisoned at different times. Most of the Americans are long-time residents, some of whom are anxious to go to Siberia and the far east, the only exit, while others were ill or lived in distant provinces.

Since the consular officers departed, there has been no official method of negotiation with the bolsheviks. Individual appeals with the reply that Americans would not be permitted to leave until the American authorities would negotiate with the soviet regarding repatriation, probably involving terms of exchange for communists in American hands.

Archivist deportees who have arrived in Russia from America are declared not wanted.

The Americans recently nominated H. C. Carlson, former business representative in Moscow, to register the Americans and handle their affairs with the soviet.

Corporal Furnishes Details. Corporal Arthur Prince of Detroit, Michigan, American soldier, recently released from prison, has given consular officials and the Red Cross in Finland detailed information regarding the American personnel and has asked that if possible something be done.

French relief organization sent food to imprisoned Americans, but this relief will end with departure of the French, except for the Red Cross.

Treatment accorded foreigners reflects any action abroad which is unfavorable to the bolsheviks. July 21, when some refugees left, 50 British subjects with permission to go were taken off the train and are still held. The bolsheviks have learned that Leonid Kraassin, minister of trade and commerce, had not been permitted to return from Leningrad.

Likewise 17 British officers and experts on the Siberian railway commission, who were taken into custody during the Kolchak retreat, simultaneously when Colonel R. Blunt of Plano, Ill., and his party were stopped at June as they were leaving the bolshevik territory of Irkutsk. This is now are in prison in Moscow.

JULIATED SUITORS SUICIDE

BOX FACTORY WORKER DRINKS CARBOLIC ACID.

"Life Not Worth Living," Says Note to Friends; Inquest Thought Unnecessary.

BEND, Or., Aug. 17.—(Special.)—Because the girl he loved did not return his affection, L. J. English, aged 24, box factory worker, ended his life at the Bartlett hotel here last night by drinking two ounces of carbolic acid.

"Life is not worth living, I have found out that the girl I love did not care for me," according to a note which English left for his friends.

Shortly before 9 o'clock last night English bought the poison at a drug store, telling the pharmacist that he wished to use it in treating a horse which had a sore shoulder. He went home immediately and going to his room, wrote the note, then poured the acid into a glass before drinking it.

Later friends heard him groaning and called a physician. Ammonia was administered, but was too late. An inquest was thought unnecessary. Mrs. Olive English of Hood River, mother, was notified today.

IDAHO DELEGATES NAMED

ADA COUNTY REPUBLICANS CHOOSE DELEGATION.

15 Persons Instructed to Vote at State Convention for Patch and Davis.

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 17.—(Special.)—The Ada county republican convention in session here today elected 15 delegates to the state convention to be held at Pocatello, August 24 and instructed them to use honorable means to bring about the nomination of John L. V. Patch of Payette for United States senator and Governor

COX WOULD BE GOING ON LOW GEAR

Democratic Candidate Hasn't Yet Thrown Clutch.

NOBODY GREATLY EXCITED

Air at Dayton Gives No Indication of Great Campaign—Marion Has Different Aspect.

(Continued From First Page.) thinks, of getting ready. He acts a little as if he hasn't quite grasped the rules and conditions of this new game yet. He has more the air of still learning, still asking for information, rather than flying down the track of a well-known campaign. His lack of appearance of pressure. A newspaper man who went to Cox's headquarters for 5-10 minutes, and actually talked with him for four hours.

The picture at Dayton, as one finds it on personal contact, is different from what I am confident the public thinks it is.

Big Business Neglected. Cox lives in his big new house a few miles out of town and every morning comes into his newspaper office. There he moves about in a manner which so far as it is unassuming, one admires, but so far as it pays attention to the tremendous business of leading a great political party in a national campaign, must be disturbing to anyone interested in the favorable outcome of that event.

The only thing that distinguishes James M. Cox in the office of the secretary is from any other proprietor of a newspaper in a town of 150,000 is the presence of eight correspondents from the service. The other and the occasional other correspondents who drop in for a few days are almost the only evidence of the enormous process of making a man known to a whole nation and marshaling 10,000,000 voters into organized support.

Cox Utterly Informal. There are two stated hours when Cox meets these newspaper men, once in the forenoon for the evening papers and once in the afternoon for the morning papers. Actually, the newspaper men have the run of the office and Cox moves about among them with utter informality. One feels that he would do better if he made a more systematic even if less god-natured use of his time. All the newspaper men like him. He realizes their hunger for a "story" twice a day and co-operates with them in a generous spirit. He tries to think of something new or some announcement to make and the newspaper men sometimes make suggestions which occasionally he accepts and enlarges upon. He has no publicity man, and for that contrast with well established practice one approves of him. The utter informality of the office, the utter informality of the man, and the utter informality of the man, are the things that frequently flows from public men too often has its source in the mind of the man himself, but in the inventive fertility of a professional publicity man.

So far as Cox's failure to acquire a publicity man represents a determination on his part that his personality and his own efforts should be the public just for what they are, without the artificial aid of a publicity man, it is fine, but it is, happily, one suspects it is merely part of the general casualness with which the campaign is being managed.

The net of it is that there isn't much "drive" in the democratic campaign yet. It is not the organization, or as respects Cox, the public hasn't become interested yet and yet the campaign has not observed anything coming along very likely to excite the voters very much. This is as true of the republicans as of the democrats. It may be that the public isn't going to take as much interest in this campaign as we have in others.

For a generation we have had three huge personalities in this country—Woodrow Wilson, Bryan and Hoover. For every presidential campaign for 25 years one or the other of these men has been a candidate, sometimes two of them. They stirred themselves up by virtue of mere quantity of their personalities, and neither Cox nor Hoover has anything like the quantity of personality that these three have had.

LONG FALL KILLS WOMAN

Tourist Strikes Lobby Floor in Spokane Hotel.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 17.—Mrs. Ellen O'Donovan MacNamara, aged 58, of New York city, received injuries in a fall through the skylight of the Davenport hotel here tonight which resulted in a few minutes later in her death. She fell from the lobby floor from a promenade on the third floor.

Mrs. MacNamara, according to stories of two cousins, Miss A. Sullivan and Miss G. Sullivan, came to Spokane to visit at dinner and left the table to seek the promenade. From there she fell through the skylight.

Mrs. MacNamara, with a sister, Mrs. Margaret M. Smith of White Plains, N. Y., and her cousins, were touring the west.

LORD MAYOR IS DEPORTED

Official of Cork Is Sent to England Aboard Destroyer.

CORK, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Terrence MacSweeney, lord mayor of Cork, was deported to England today aboard a destroyer, after having been found guilty of sedition by a court martial yesterday. MacSweeney still refused to eat.

MacSweeney, who has refused food since he was arrested last Thursday night, was convicted of having under his control the secret police cipher of having made a seditious speech on the occasion of his election and of having in his possession a copy of the resolution of the Cork corporation pledging allegiance to the Irish republican parliament.

OLYMPIC HONORS DIVIDED

(Continued From First Page.) by the American newspapers against one of the Belgian announcers. They demanded that an American, whose English they could comprehend, undertake this work. They were supported by the English and Swedish newspapers.

When the jury took up the protests it unanimously voted to disallow them. The jury announced, however, that the English they could comprehend, undertake this work. They were supported by the English and Swedish newspapers.

All U. S. Hardlers Win. All four American entrants in the 110-meter hurdles event won their heats in the field of 26 starters. H. P. Babcock, of the Meadometer club, Philadelphia, who won the second heat, made the best time, 15.5 seconds.

Dartmouth just beat Earl Thomson, Dartmouth college star, who represents Canada. Thomson toppled two hurdles, losing his stride, but he finished fast and strong. The field outside of the Americans and Thomson was mediocre.

The following qualified for the semi-finals in the 110-meter hurdles: Colbachino, Italy; Orfadan, France; H. E. Barron, Meadowbrook club, Philadelphia; Earl Thomson, Canada; Fred Murray, New York Athletic club; G. H. Gray, England; Trotter, Denmark; W. L. Hunter, England; William J. Young, Los Angeles Athletic club; Scholt, Sweden; Walker Smith, Chicago Amateur Athletic association; and Carl Christensen, Sweden.

The best time, 15.1 seconds, was made by Barron. H. E. Barron, Meadowbrook club, Philadelphia, won the first heat in today's preliminary United States hurdles. Walker Smith, Chicago Athletic association, was second, and Orfadan of France, third. The time, 15 seconds, equals the world's record. The first three men in each of the semi-final heats qualified for the final.

Earl Thomson, Canada, took the second heat in the preliminary United States hurdles. Walker Smith, Chicago Athletic club, was second, and Carl Christensen of Sweden, third. William J. Young, Los Angeles Athletic club, finished fourth, and thus was eliminated. The time of this heat also was 15 seconds.

The runners in the first heat were nervous at the start, there being two breaks and one pistol recall. Barron and Smith, who were in the class of this heat, Earl Thomson was easily the best man in the second heat.

Victory in the final heat of the 90-

COX WOULD BE GOING ON LOW GEAR

Democratic Candidate Hasn't Yet Thrown Clutch.

NOBODY GREATLY EXCITED

Air at Dayton Gives No Indication of Great Campaign—Marion Has Different Aspect.

(Continued From First Page.) thinks, of getting ready. He acts a little as if he hasn't quite grasped the rules and conditions of this new game yet. He has more the air of still learning, still asking for information, rather than flying down the track of a well-known campaign. His lack of appearance of pressure. A newspaper man who went to Cox's headquarters for 5-10 minutes, and actually talked with him for four hours.

The picture at Dayton, as one finds it on personal contact, is different from what I am confident the public thinks it is.

Big Business Neglected. Cox lives in his big new house a few miles out of town and every morning comes into his newspaper office. There he moves about in a manner which so far as it is unassuming, one admires, but so far as it pays attention to the tremendous business of leading a great political party in a national campaign, must be disturbing to anyone interested in the favorable outcome of that event.

The only thing that distinguishes James M. Cox in the office of the secretary is from any other proprietor of a newspaper in a town of 150,000 is the presence of eight correspondents from the service. The other and the occasional other correspondents who drop in for a few days are almost the only evidence of the enormous process of making a man known to a whole nation and marshaling 10,000,000 voters into organized support.

Cox Utterly Informal. There are two stated hours when Cox meets these newspaper men, once in the forenoon for the evening papers and once in the afternoon for the morning papers. Actually, the newspaper men have the run of the office and Cox moves about among them with utter informality. One feels that he would do better if he made a more systematic even if less god-natured use of his time. All the newspaper men like him. He realizes their hunger for a "story" twice a day and co-operates with them in a generous spirit. He tries to think of something new or some announcement to make and the newspaper men sometimes make suggestions which occasionally he accepts and enlarges upon. He has no publicity man, and for that contrast with well established practice one approves of him. The utter informality of the office, the utter informality of the man, and the utter informality of the man, are the things that frequently flows from public men too often has its source in the mind of the man himself, but in the inventive fertility of a professional publicity man.

So far as Cox's failure to acquire a publicity man represents a determination on his part that his personality and his own efforts should be the public just for what they are, without the artificial aid of a publicity man, it is fine, but it is, happily, one suspects it is merely part of the general casualness with which the campaign is being managed.

The net of it is that there isn't much "drive" in the democratic campaign yet. It is not the organization, or as respects Cox, the public hasn't become interested yet and yet the campaign has not observed anything coming along very likely to excite the voters very much. This is as true of the republicans as of the democrats. It may be that the public isn't going to take as much interest in this campaign as we have in others.

For a generation we have had three huge personalities in this country—Woodrow Wilson, Bryan and Hoover. For every presidential campaign for 25 years one or the other of these men has been a candidate, sometimes two of them. They stirred themselves up by virtue of mere quantity of their personalities, and neither Cox nor Hoover has anything like the quantity of personality that these three have had.

LONG FALL KILLS WOMAN

Tourist Strikes Lobby Floor in Spokane Hotel.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 17.—Mrs. Ellen O'Donovan MacNamara, aged 58, of New York city, received injuries in a fall through the skylight of the Davenport hotel here tonight which resulted in a few minutes later in her death. She fell from the lobby floor from a promenade on the third floor.

Mrs. MacNamara, according to stories of two cousins, Miss A. Sullivan and Miss G. Sullivan, came to Spokane to visit at dinner and left the table to seek the promenade. From there she fell through the skylight.

Mrs. MacNamara, with a sister, Mrs. Margaret M. Smith of White Plains, N. Y., and her cousins, were touring the west.

LORD MAYOR IS DEPORTED

Official of Cork Is Sent to England Aboard Destroyer.

CORK, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Terrence MacSweeney, lord mayor of Cork, was deported to England today aboard a destroyer, after having been found guilty of sedition by a court martial yesterday. MacSweeney still refused to eat.

MacSweeney, who has refused food since he was arrested last Thursday night, was convicted of having under his control the secret police cipher of having made a seditious speech on the occasion of his election and of having in his possession a copy of the resolution of the Cork corporation pledging allegiance to the Irish republican parliament.

OLYMPIC HONORS DIVIDED

(Continued From First Page.) by the American newspapers against one of the Belgian announcers. They demanded that an American, whose English they could comprehend, undertake this work. They were supported by the English and Swedish newspapers.

When the jury took up the protests it unanimously voted to disallow them. The jury announced, however, that the English they could comprehend, undertake this work. They were supported by the English and Swedish newspapers.

All U. S. Hardlers Win. All four American entrants in the 110-meter hurdles event won their heats in the field of 26 starters. H. P. Babcock, of the Meadometer club, Philadelphia, who won the second heat, made the best time, 15.5 seconds.

Dartmouth just beat Earl Thomson, Dartmouth college star, who represents Canada. Thomson toppled two hurdles, losing his stride, but he finished fast and strong. The field outside of the Americans and Thomson was mediocre.

The following qualified for the semi-finals in the 110-meter hurdles: Colbachino, Italy; Orfadan, France; H. E. Barron, Meadowbrook club, Philadelphia; Earl Thomson, Canada; Fred Murray, New York Athletic club; G. H. Gray, England; Trotter, Denmark; W. L. Hunter, England; William J. Young, Los Angeles Athletic club; Scholt, Sweden; Walker Smith, Chicago Amateur Athletic association; and Carl Christensen, Sweden.

The best time, 15.1 seconds, was made by Barron. H. E. Barron, Meadowbrook club, Philadelphia, won the first heat in today's preliminary United States hurdles. Walker Smith, Chicago Athletic association, was second, and Orfadan of France, third. The time, 15 seconds, equals the world's record. The first three men in each of the semi-final heats qualified for the final.

Earl Thomson, Canada, took the second heat in the preliminary United States hurdles. Walker Smith, Chicago Athletic club, was second, and Carl Christensen of Sweden, third. William J. Young, Los Angeles Athletic club, finished fourth, and thus was eliminated. The time of this heat also was 15 seconds.

The runners in the first heat were nervous at the start, there being two breaks and one pistol recall. Barron and Smith, who were in the class of this heat, Earl Thomson was easily the best man in the second heat.

Victory in the final heat of the 90-

COX WOULD BE GOING ON LOW GEAR

Democratic Candidate Hasn't Yet Thrown Clutch.

NOBODY GREATLY EXCITED

Air at Dayton Gives No Indication of Great Campaign—Marion Has Different Aspect.

(Continued From First Page.) thinks, of getting ready. He acts a little as if he hasn't quite grasped the rules and conditions of this new game yet. He has more the air of still learning, still asking for information, rather than flying down the track of a well-known campaign. His lack of appearance of pressure. A newspaper man who went to Cox's headquarters for 5-10 minutes, and actually talked with him for four hours.

The picture at Dayton, as one finds it on personal contact, is different from what I am confident the public thinks it is.

Big Business Neglected. Cox lives in his big new house a few miles out of town and every morning comes into his newspaper office. There he moves about in a manner which so far as it is unassuming, one admires, but so far as it pays attention to the tremendous business of leading a great political party in a national campaign, must be disturbing to anyone interested in the favorable outcome of that event.

The only thing that distinguishes James M. Cox in the office of the secretary is from any other proprietor of a newspaper in a town of 150,000 is the presence of eight correspondents from the service. The other and the occasional other correspondents who drop in for a few days are almost the only evidence of the enormous process of making a man known to a whole nation and marshaling 10,000,000 voters into organized support.

Cox Utterly Informal. There are two stated hours when Cox meets these newspaper men, once in the forenoon for the evening papers and once in the afternoon for the morning papers. Actually, the newspaper men have the run of the office and Cox moves about among them with utter informality. One feels that he would do better if he made a more systematic even if less god-natured use of his time. All the newspaper men like him. He realizes their hunger for a "story" twice a day and co-operates with them in a generous spirit. He tries to think of something new or some announcement to make and the newspaper men sometimes make suggestions which occasionally he accepts and enlarges upon. He has no publicity man, and for that contrast with well established practice one approves of him. The utter informality of the office, the utter informality of the man, and the utter informality of the man, are the things that frequently flows from public men too often has its source in the mind of the man himself, but in the inventive fertility of a professional publicity man.

So far as Cox's failure to acquire a publicity man represents a determination on his part that his personality and his own efforts should be the public just for what they are, without the artificial aid of a publicity man, it is fine, but it is, happily, one suspects it is merely part of the general casualness with which the campaign is being managed.

The net of it is that there isn't much "drive" in the democratic campaign yet. It is not the organization, or as respects Cox, the public hasn't become interested yet and yet the campaign has not observed anything coming along very likely to excite the voters very much. This is as true of the republicans as of the democrats. It may be that the public isn't going to take as much interest in this campaign as we have in others.

For a generation we have had three huge personalities in this country—Woodrow Wilson, Bryan and Hoover. For every presidential campaign for 25 years one or the other of these men has been a candidate, sometimes two of them. They stirred themselves up by virtue of mere quantity of their personalities, and neither Cox nor Hoover has anything like the quantity of personality that these three have had.

LONG FALL KILLS WOMAN

Tourist Strikes Lobby Floor in Spokane Hotel.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 17.—Mrs. Ellen O'Donovan MacNamara, aged 58, of New York city, received injuries in a fall through the skylight of the Davenport hotel here tonight which resulted in a few minutes later in her death. She fell from the lobby floor from a promenade on the third floor.

Mrs. MacNamara, according to stories of two cousins, Miss A. Sullivan and Miss G. Sullivan, came to Spokane to visit at dinner and left the table to seek the promenade. From there she fell through the skylight.

Mrs. MacNamara, with a sister, Mrs. Margaret M. Smith of White Plains, N. Y., and her cousins, were touring the west.

LORD MAYOR IS DEPORTED

Official of Cork Is Sent to England Aboard Destroyer.

CORK, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Terrence MacSweeney, lord mayor of Cork, was deported to England today aboard a destroyer, after having been found guilty of sedition by a court martial yesterday. MacSweeney still refused to eat.

MacSweeney, who has refused food since he was arrested last Thursday night, was convicted of having under his control the secret police cipher of having made a seditious speech on the occasion of his election and of having in his possession a copy of the resolution of the Cork corporation pledging allegiance to the Irish republican parliament.

OLYMPIC HONORS DIVIDED

(Continued From First Page.) by the American newspapers against one of the Belgian announcers. They demanded that an American, whose English they could comprehend, undertake this work. They were supported by the English and Swedish newspapers.

When the jury took up the protests it unanimously voted to disallow them. The jury announced, however, that the English they could comprehend, undertake this work. They were supported by the English and Swedish newspapers.

All U. S. Hardlers Win. All four American entrants in the 110-meter hurdles event won their heats in the field of 26 starters. H. P. Babcock, of the Meadometer club, Philadelphia, who won the second heat, made the best time, 15.5 seconds.

Dartmouth just beat Earl Thomson, Dartmouth college star, who represents Canada. Thomson toppled two hurdles, losing his stride, but he finished fast and strong. The field outside of the Americans and Thomson was mediocre.

The following qualified for the semi-finals in the 110-meter hurdles: Colbachino, Italy; Orfadan, France; H. E. Barron, Meadowbrook club, Philadelphia; Earl Thomson, Canada; Fred Murray, New York Athletic club; G. H. Gray, England; Trotter, Denmark; W. L. Hunter, England; William J. Young, Los Angeles Athletic club; Scholt, Sweden; Walker Smith, Chicago Amateur Athletic association; and Carl Christensen, Sweden.

The best time, 15.1 seconds, was made by Barron. H. E. Barron, Meadowbrook club, Philadelphia, won the first heat in today's preliminary United States hurdles. Walker Smith, Chicago Athletic association, was second, and Orfadan of France, third. The time, 15 seconds, equals the world's record. The first three men in each of the semi-final heats qualified for the final.

Earl Thomson, Canada, took the second heat in the preliminary United States hurdles. Walker Smith, Chicago Athletic club, was second, and Carl Christensen of Sweden, third. William J. Young, Los Angeles Athletic club, finished fourth, and thus was eliminated. The time of this heat also was 15 seconds.

The runners in the first heat were nervous at the start, there being two breaks and one pistol recall. Barron and Smith, who were in the class of this heat, Earl Thomson was easily the best man in the second heat.

Victory in the final heat of the 90-

COX WOULD BE GOING ON LOW GEAR

Democratic Candidate Hasn't Yet Thrown Clutch.

NOBODY GREATLY EXCITED

Air at Dayton Gives No Indication of Great Campaign—Marion Has Different Aspect.

(Continued From First Page.) thinks, of getting ready. He acts a little as if he hasn't quite grasped the rules and conditions of this new game yet. He has more the air of still learning, still asking for information, rather than flying down the track of a well-known campaign. His lack of appearance of pressure. A newspaper man who went to Cox's headquarters for 5-10 minutes, and actually talked with him for four hours.

The picture at Dayton, as one finds it on personal contact, is different from what I am confident the public thinks it is.

Big Business Neglected. Cox lives in his big new house a few miles out of town and every morning comes into his newspaper office. There he moves about in a manner which so far as it is unassuming, one admires, but so far as it pays attention to the tremendous business of leading a great political party in a national campaign, must be disturbing to anyone interested in the favorable outcome of that event.

The only thing that distinguishes James M. Cox in the office of the secretary is from any other proprietor of a newspaper in a town of 150,000 is the presence of eight correspondents from the service. The other and the occasional other correspondents who drop in for a few days are almost the only evidence of the enormous process of making a man known to a whole nation and marshaling 10,000,000 voters into organized support.

Cox Utterly Informal. There are two stated hours when Cox meets these newspaper men, once in the forenoon for the evening papers and once in the afternoon for the morning papers. Actually, the newspaper men have the run of the office and Cox moves about among them with utter informality. One feels that he would do better if he made a more systematic even if less god-natured use of his time. All the newspaper men like him. He realizes their hunger for a "story" twice a day and co-operates with them in a generous spirit. He tries to think of something new or some announcement to make and the newspaper men sometimes make suggestions which occasionally he accepts and enlarges upon. He has no publicity man, and for that contrast with well established practice one approves of him. The utter informality of the office, the utter informality of the man, and the utter informality of the man, are the things that frequently flows from public men too often has its source in the mind of the man himself, but in the inventive fertility of a professional publicity man.

So far as Cox's failure to acquire a publicity man represents a determination on his part that his personality and his own efforts should be the public just for what they are, without the artificial aid of a publicity man, it is fine, but it is, happily, one suspects it is merely part of the general casualness with which the campaign is being managed.

The net of it is that there isn't much "drive" in the democratic campaign yet. It is not the organization, or as respects Cox, the public hasn't become interested yet and yet the campaign has not observed anything coming along very likely to excite the voters very much. This is as true of the republicans as of the democrats. It may be that the public isn't going to take as much interest in this campaign as we have in others.

For a generation we have had three huge personalities in this country—Woodrow Wilson, Bryan and Hoover. For every presidential campaign for 25 years one or the other of these men has been a candidate, sometimes two of them. They stirred themselves up by virtue of mere quantity of their personalities, and neither Cox nor Hoover has anything like the quantity of personality that these three have had.

LONG FALL KILLS WOMAN

Tourist Strikes Lobby Floor in Spokane Hotel.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 17.—Mrs. Ellen O'Donovan MacNamara, aged 58, of New York city, received injuries in a fall through the skylight of the Davenport hotel here tonight which resulted in a few minutes later in her death. She fell from the lobby floor from a promenade on the third floor.

Mrs. MacNamara, according to stories of two cousins, Miss A. Sullivan and Miss G. Sullivan, came to Spokane to visit at dinner and left the table to seek the promenade. From there she fell through the skylight.

Mrs. MacNamara, with a sister, Mrs. Margaret M. Smith of White Plains, N. Y., and her cousins, were touring the west.

LORD MAYOR IS DEPORTED

Official of Cork Is Sent to England Aboard Destroyer.

CORK, Ireland, Aug. 17.—Terrence MacSweeney, lord mayor of Cork, was deported to England today aboard a destroyer, after having been found guilty of sedition by a court martial yesterday. MacSweeney still refused to eat.

MacSweeney, who has refused food since he was arrested last Thursday night, was convicted of having under his control the secret police cipher of having made a seditious speech on the occasion of his election and of having in his possession a copy of the resolution of the Cork corporation pledging allegiance to the Irish republican parliament.

OLYMPIC HONORS DIVIDED

(Continued From First Page.) by the American newspapers against one of the Belgian announcers. They demanded that an American, whose English they could comprehend, undertake this work. They were supported by the English and Swedish newspapers.

When the jury took up the protests it unanimously voted to disallow them. The jury announced, however, that the English they could comprehend, undertake this work. They were supported by the English and Swedish newspapers.

All U. S. Hardlers Win. All four American entrants in the 110-meter hurdles event won their heats in the field of 26 starters. H. P. Babcock, of the Meadometer club, Philadelphia, who won the second heat, made the best time, 15.5 seconds.

Dartmouth just beat Earl Thomson, Dartmouth college star, who represents Canada. Thomson toppled two hurdles, losing his stride, but he finished fast and strong. The field outside of the Americans and Thomson was mediocre.

The following qualified for the semi-finals in the 110-meter hurdles: Colbachino,