

CHARGE PURCHASES MADE TODAY, MONDAY OR TUESDAY WILL GO ON THE SEPTEMBER BILLS DATED OCTOBER FIRST

TWO KINDS OF MILK HELD SOLD IN CITY

One Rich, One Poor, in Butter Fat, Is Charge.

ALMA D. KATZ WITNESS

Creameries Said to Remove Part of Cream, Leaving Enough to Comply With Law.

The difference between "cows' milk" distributed in the city by producers and "wagon milk" delivered by Portland creameries lies in the fact that in one case the butter fat content is left in the milk and in the other cream is removed by a process of standardization which leaves the butter fat percentage above city requirements, but less than the average of milk not standardized, declared Alma D. Katz, president of the Oregon Dairymen's Co-operative league, testifying before Circuit Judge McCourt yesterday in the injunction suit brought against local distributors by the league.

Testimony had shown that producer-distributors, many of them league members, operated 132 wagons in Portland and the large creamery distributors only 69 wagons. In most instances the former received the highest prices, it was said. Asked why this should be true, Mr. Katz replied, "I don't believe the consumer would pay 2 or 3 cents more for his milk if there was not a difference in the milk. I know that in my own house we pay 18 cents for milk from a producer-distributor, whereas we could get milk from large distributors for 16 cents. But there is a difference."

Part of Cream Removed.

"In the large distributing plants, or creameries, the milk goes into a standardization plant and part of the cream is removed and sold as sweet cream on the market. I am not criticizing the value of pasteurizing the milk or the necessity of standardizing it by mixing milk rich in butter fat with milk of slight butter fat content. Yet, the fact remains that analyses I had made during the war when I was on the food commission showed that the butter fat in the distributors' milk averaged 2.4 to 2.5 per cent and that of the producers over 4 per cent.

"The statute requires a minimum of 3.2 per cent butter fat in the milk. I believe the average percentage in milk delivered to the distributor by the producer is at least 4 per cent. Milk from my own herd, approximating a ton a day, runs 4.5 to 4.6 per cent butter fat. When the average butter fat in milk delivered by distributors is far under 4 per cent, cream must have been removed while the milk was in the hands of the middleman."

Mr. Katz testified that the dairymen in the league did not desire to enter the Portland field as distributors and duplicate the routes now established by the creameries.

Not All Facts Known.

"Then you are not really interested, as you have claimed, in shortening the route between the producer and consumer?" asked Chris Bell, attorney for the defense.

"Oh, yes I am," responded Mr. Katz, "but I do not believe that a duplication of routes at this time would shorten it."

Mr. Katz admitted that several assertions in advertisements published by the league early in the campaign did not square up with the facts, saying that he did not know all angles of the situation as thoroughly then as he does now.

"Then you didn't know all the facts in the case when these statements were made in the newspapers?" he was asked.

"Evidently not," he conceded.

Mr. Katz asserted that he did not favor all the dairymen entering the league, saying that he did not want anything favoring of a monopoly. Should such a monopoly result, he said, he would approve of it only if a public body was appointed to fix milk prices justified by conditions. He testified that he had always favored a permanent milk commission to regulate the milk supply and distribution.

In the course of the hearing, a question as to the accuracy of some information presented elicited a remark from Judge McCourt to the effect that neither side came into court with all facts straight.

Lawyers Have Till.

"Well, we started in this case, your honor, by saying that the pot was calling the kettle black," commented Attorney Bell.

"I'm glad you admit you are black," retorted Dan J. Malarky, attorney for the dairymen.

"We couldn't help it from association with you," replied Mr. Bell.

This was one of numerous quips between attorneys which have marked the progress of the hearing.

F. L. O'Donnell of the Modern dairy, who handled the finances of the campaign for the distributors, testified that from $1300 to $1400 had been spent since the middle of July, of which $1200 went to C. M. Gregory, publicity manager.

J. W. Pomeroy, manager of the Oregon Dairymen's By-Products corporation, controlled by the league, testified that the league has never poured out surplus milk to keep up prices.

The hearing, by which the league seeks to prevent the distributors from continuing a campaign to persuade dairymen to break their contracts with the league, adjourned yesterday until Tuesday morning.

MOONSHINERS FINED $250

Prisoners Intimate They Were Only Working for Wages.

Bob Yusan and Mike Basovich, arrested in connection with the large still discovered at Newberg some time ago and destroyed by federal agents, were fined $250 each by Federal Judge Bean yesterday.

The Newberg still, which was said to be one of the largest yet found in the state, was operated on the farm of W. Hall near Newberg.

Yusan and Basovich escaped at the time, but were subsequently taken into custody in an east side resort. The testimony of the men made it appear that they were not the principals in the illicit traffic, but were operating under wages.

An investigation is being carried out by federal agents to fix responsibility for the operation of the still. It was announced yesterday.

Sporting Goods Store Deer Hunting Expedition

Experts will be glad to advise you as to what caliber and kind of gun is preferable for the vicinity where you will shoot.

Remington, Winchester and Savage rifles are specialized and the new bolt action 250/3000 Savage rifle is particularly interesting to those who wish something of extra velocity and flatter trajectory.

Deer are reported plentiful all through the Cascade range and down back of Astoria and they are especially thick in southern Oregon. The law allows only two deer to each hunter—and you want to be sure to get the biggest buck you see.

The Sporting Goods Store by providing perfect rifles and ammunition is ready to help you make every shot perfect.

Duxback Hunting Clothes and all equipment for camping found here is of the right sort to give real satisfaction—on rainy as well as dry days.
