Cave Room Contains Equipment Costing $1500.

DOOR COVERED BY FERNS

Clackamas Officer Finds 50 Gallons of Mash and 10 of Liquor on "Queen of Moonshiner's" Land.

A still in a 16-foot square cave room about 10 feet underground, which probably took $1500 to conwas discovered Tuesday by Sheriff Wilson of Clackamas county and internal revenue officers on the property of Mrs. Nettle Connett, three miles northwest of Bull Run.

Miss northwest of Bull Run.

Mrs. Connett is known as the "queen of the moonshiners" She is the first woman moonshiner to be convicted in Oregon. She is free at present on a stay of execution. She was convicted of operating a still in her home some time ago and was sentenced to six months in the county jail and fined $500. She had appealed her case.

Still Carefully Concealed.

The underground still was carefully oncealed with many trees and brush which had been planted on the earth which had been planted on the earth which had been thrown up in digging the cave. On the slope toward the creek, Sheriff Wilson and the men discovered a door, all covered over with forns. Upon opening the door, they found a tunnel, which led back under the hill for 15 feet. At the end of the tunnel was another door, which opened into the cave room, which was planked in.

planked in.

A 30 gallon copper still was found on top of an old stove. Heat was furnished by coal oil burners. Five hundred gallons of corn mash and 10 gallons of finished liquor were in the room. Water was piped to the cave from a stream 500 feet away. The cave was about 75 yards from the farm of George Wilkinson, which adjoins Mrs. Connett's property. No one was operating the still at the time and no arrests were made. Equipment Is Elaborate. When Sheriff Wilson was returning from the farm with part of the still on the front of his machine, he passed Mrs. Connett and Wilkinson in a machine driven by Everett Lowther, a farm hand. By the time the sheriff had turned round to follow them, the others had the lead and the sheriff saw Mrs. Connett and Wilkinson leave the machine and make for the woods.

Over 100 yards of fine insulated wire were found in the cave and the sheriff thinks that an electric bell was to be installed soon, so that the alarm could be given by pushing a button from one of the houses if anyone approached.
