

GROGERS SAW MILK BODY IS COWARDLY DISTRIBUTORS AND DAIRIES USED Big Stick, Plaintiff.

PUBLIC FEARED, IS CHARGE

Increases Should Have Been Passed to Consumer Says Resolution. Store's Margin 2 Cents.

Retail grocers of Portland called to meet last night at Alisky hall adopted resolutions expressing their sentiment regarding the action of the city milk commission in fixing a price of 15 cents a quart as the retail price at which grocery dealers should sell milk costing 13 cents. It was also the sense of the meeting that a price of 15 cents a quart be suggested to the grocers of the city as a fair price for milk. If the price to them is raised or has already been increased to 15 cents...

C. Mann, president of the Grocers and Merchants' association, presided at the meeting, which had been called by the officers that organization as a mass meeting of the merchants in that line of trade. Forty merchants answered the call. A number had come to the chairman from a number who said they would be governed by the action of the meeting as the sentiment of the majority.

It was held by various speakers that there is no profit in the grocers of the city as a fair price for milk. Some were in favor of discontinuing the sale of milk, unless at a price considerably below the one which has been charged, allowing a fair margin that would make it a source of profit.

M. J. Malley, third-street grocer, moved the adoption of the resolution read by the secretary, Edward A. MacLean, and adopted after a brief discussion. The resolution is merely a statement of the grocers' position, after an introductory paragraph, proceeds:

The milk commission appointed by Mayor Baker gave consideration to the dairymen on one side and similarly to the Portland wholesalers on the other, but merely referred to as the "distributors," but showed no concern for the rights of the retailers by ignoring them altogether except in one important particular. Both the dairymen and the wholesale "distributors" appear to be thoroughly organized and in fighting trim. They came before the milk commission making opposition to each other's claims and desires.

We know of no better way briefly, clearly and fairly to describe the decision of the milk commission than to say that it felt forced to yield something to the dairymen and it felt forced to yield something to the distributors. The result was a raising of the wholesale price of milk 1 cent and the retail price 2 cents.

The moral courage and fair-mindedness of the public for doing the natural and logical thing by raising the wholesale price when they raised the wholesale price of milk, and when they raised the price of milk, was continued at the retail dealers from 12 to 15 cents.

If the milk commission had been animated by many and moral courage and by a desire to do the fair thing, it might, for the retailers, they would have undertaken to give them the same margin as that given to the dairymen and to the wholesalers.

We particularly wish to focus the attention of the public on this evident lack of courage and fairness of the milk commission in seeking to save themselves from possible public rebuke by giving away one-third of the retailers' margin without giving the retailers a hearing, because we now propose to enter clear of this milk commission.

We fully anticipate that the milk commission will plead that this was "just a temporary decision, and will use other words in saying its own mind to appear before them and submit facts and figures from which they will then propose to make a decision as to what margin the retailer should have on milk.

If we could have confidence in their moral courage and disposition to be fair, we would gladly enter fully into such an inquiry and decision, but no person could reasonably be expected to entrust his safety or his interests to any business which had already gone on record as concerning him in this hearing and to ask the support of honest public opinion in deciding such invitation from this milk commission.

This is stated as the decision of both the dairymen and the wholesalers. The dairymen and the wholesalers are not getting other grocers to say they will support the milk commission. We expect the milk commission to get grocers ready, but we propose to support our rights in an independent position and reserve the right to say that the testimony of average stores throughout the city and elsewhere is that the milk commission may choose to make hereafter its fair of unfair.

If the milk commission can later on make a decision fair to us, none will be able to rejoice more than we. If they continue to be unfair, we shall continue to assert our rights and our independence, and rely on fair-minded public opinion, which loves a square deal, to support us to that position under the circumstances.

LEAGUE COUNSEL QUIZZED Judge Suggests Milk Combines May Be Illegal.

Belief that even a co-operative farmers' league might become a combine in restraint of trade was suggested yesterday by Circuit Judge McCort in questions he asked Dan J. Malarky, counsel for the Oregon Dairymen's Co-operative league, during closing arguments in the injunction suit now in progress. Mr. Malarky held the floor during the greater part of the day and while telling of the methods employed by the organization which he represents was interrupted by the court. Two sets of affidavits were sprung early in the afternoon when the plaintiffs presented their case. James T. Jenkins and H. W. Thomas said that E. C. Cochran of Bandon told them he had received word that the Nestle's company had won its suit and the farmers were free from their contracts and Cochran could ship milk to the condensary and would pay them three months in advance. Clarence Zumwalt and Raymond Capps, two ranchers on the Sixty-six in Curry county, made affidavits that Deputy United States Attorney Austin Flegel Jr. and Ralph Helmken, field man for Nestle's, told them how they could break contracts with the league by selling their cows to their wives. Zumwalt stated that he was also killed by his brothers could form a corporation in place of their present firm as two of the brothers are unmarried. A. F. Flegel Sr., appearing for Nestle's, answered those with a telegram from his son, now in Bandon. This stated, "Understand N. A. Loucks secured some kind of statement from Clarence Zumwalt today relative to conversation with him. Zumwalt stated fully set forth report yesterday. Did advise a bonafide sale to corporation under our milk agreement."

Georgia to Cast Vote Today After Bitter Primary Campaign.

Issues are outstanding in New Hampshire, Wisconsin and Georgia, the last of which will be voted today. In New Hampshire Senator George H. Moses is making the race for re-nomination, opposed by Huntley N. Spaulding. The two waged a bitter pre-primary campaign on the league of nations, suffrage and tariff. Mr. Spaulding participated. The vote showed that the men outnumbered the women at the polls four to one.

MOTHER RETAINS FAITH

Man, Convicted of Murder, Held Innocent by Many Friends and Former Associates.

What atonement lies within the power of Oregon for taking nine years from the life of an innocent man?

That in the question—with the assumption of innocence—that prominent citizens asked yesterday in discussing methods to gain an investigation by Governor O'Leary into the case of John Arthur Pender. Pender was convicted of the murder of Mrs. Daisy Wehrman and her 6-year-old son. While prison letters held him to a cell an imbecile, confined in the state prison for the murder of a woman, later a letter confessing the murder. Later clerks repudiated this confession. Pender remained in prison.

The murderer was committed near Scappoose, Columbia county, "around" July day, 1911. Effort after effort has been made by social workers to free Pender and with the passing of labor day this year, new impetus was given the movement.

Veterans Back Petitions.

Circumstances, time after time, have conspired to defeat the purpose of those who have worked for his freedom and the pardon they say. It is said that Pender would be free today if ex-convicts had not committed an atrocious murder at Clarendon Tavern last year. With the Clarendon deed ringing in the ears of the people, executive clemency would have been an error, they declare they were told.

Last night at the Spanish-American War veterans meeting in room 348 of the county court house, a move was started to send a committee to inter-volve the resolution requesting the governor to reopen the Pender case and inquire into his guilt or innocence. This resolution was signed by Joseph E. Warner, now state auditor, representing all camps. Richard Delch, deputy city prosecutor, is firm in his belief that Pender is an innocent man and probably will be named as chairman of a committee to wait on Judge Eakin today.

Those interested in the Pender case think that if Pender could be brought before the governor with clerks, the man who confessed the crime, and allow the chief executive to question both, that this simple little hearing might bring forth the truth.

Mother Retains Faith.

Pender's mother and aged mother, who have worked unceasingly to gain the freedom of son and husband, retain a sublime faith in his innocence. The mother who has spent and lost her all in an effort to free her son, is past 70 years of age. Twenty years ago she was arrested and charged with the crime she boarded a train at her home in Ordan, Utah, and came to Portland, where she has been unceasingly since that time in his behalf. She now resides at 681 Hoyt street.

COMPERS ADVISES ACTION TO REPEAL MEASURE.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Sept. 7.—American wool growers, finding it impossible to sell their 1920 clip in the American market at anything like the cost of production, and getting no encouragement whatever from eastern manufacturers ready to invest their eyes towards Germany as a possible market for current surplus holdings. Congress at the December session will be asked for legislation which will facilitate the selling of American wool to Germany through the establishment of a fund for Germany equal to the fund now held by this country as the net proceeds of sales of the alien property custodian, less existing claims. The plan in contemplation is explained by the American Wool Bureau federation, which issues a statement saying:

"Funds from this source which must eventually be turned over to Germany and her former associates must be well toward a billion dollars and a credit of this amount can be granted without involving further increase of Germany's indebtedness to the United States.

"At a time when we have surplus stocks of certain raw materials which Germany needs to get on an efficient producing basis some arrangement which will finance the transaction and transfer of goods is highly desirable. The credit suggested seems a feasible plan and has already been bettered in conditions of international commerce. A bill looking toward this end would have been passed last summer in all probability had congress not adjourned so early.

GOVERNORS URGE TO ACT

Lives and Property Would Be Saved if Observance Given by Public, Says Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—President Wilson, in a proclamation today, urged state governors to set apart Saturday, October 9, as fire-prevention day, and to request general observance of the public. The president, in bringing "before the people the serious and unhappy effects of the present unnecessary fire waste and destruction of individual and collective effort in conserving the natural and created resources of America" was drawn to his attention by the fact that the destruction by fire in the United States involves an annual loss of life of 15,000 men, women and children and over $100,000,000 in buildings, foodstuffs and other created resources.
