

EAST SIDE CORNER HAS MISHAP RECORD

East First and Hassalo Declared Danger Point.

EXTREME CAUTION URGED

Steep Hill and Obscured Passage Make This Point Particularly Perilous for Drivers.

Reckless driving, steep hills and one-man street cars combine to make the corner at East First and Hassalo streets one of the most dangerous in the city, according to residents and pedestrians of that section, backed up by the records of the accident department of the traffic bureau at the police station.

John H. Coker of 837 Michigan avenue came to grief at this corner yesterday morning when his automobile was struck by a Williams avenue car going south on East First street, according to his report at the police station. Coker's car was knocked over and on the curb, smashing a rear door and a rear fender, said Coker himself sustained a cut on the head as a result of the smash-up.

"I was going east on Hassalo," said Coker, "and when I came to the crossing I looked to the right, but the street was clear. I looked to the left and saw the Williams avenue car coming down the hill at a high rate of speed. I saw that I could not avoid being hit, so I stepped up in an attempt to cross the intersection, but was struck on the rear wheel."

House Shaken by Impact. Coker's car was thrown squarely across the corner of the street against the bank. The sidewalk was blocked for some time by the wrecked car and removed and pedestrians were forced to detour in the street. Mrs. J. S. Perrin, of 123 Hassalo street, whose house is on the corner, said that the impact of Coker's car against the bank shook the whole house.

"There are many strange accidents on this corner," said Mrs. Perrin. "Accidents seem to happen here about every other day, especially during the rainy weather. Both automobile and street-car drivers seem to travel at a high rate of speed and I am never surprised to see a wrecked car here."

Two other accidents within the last 30 days were reported at the police station, in addition to innumerable violations of the traffic ordinance not reported. Two accidents were reported on August 24 were reported. Careless Drivers Blamed. Mrs. H. Pierce, of 506 Vancouver avenue, was following a street car down the hill from First street on August 24, according to her report when the street car slowed down at the corner. When the street car started again the truck driver, J. C. Kidd, of 615 East Couch street, attempted to cross between her machine and the street car, and a collision resulted. Nobody was injured in this accident.

On the same day John H. Watson, driving a truck, was going east on Hassalo street, according to his report, when a touring car driven by J. C. Walsh came down the hill on First street. In trying to avoid a collision, Walsh applied his brakes, but the slippery street caused his car to turn end for end and it crashed into the curb at the corner, breaking a rear wheel.

Traffic Investigator Ferberg contends that most of the accidents happening on this corner result from carelessness on the part of street car and automobile drivers in approaching this dangerous turn. Drivers should approach a corner of this kind with care, he said, where the heavy grade, coupled with obscured corners, makes traffic conditions exceptionally dangerous.

OREGON IS REPRESENTED MORE THAN 50 DELEGATES AT SEATTLE CONVENTION.

Northwest Reclamation and Reconstruction Congress Opens at Sound City Today.

Oregon will be represented at the northwest reclamation and reconstruction congress, which opens at Seattle today by a delegation numbering more than 50, according to George Quayle, secretary of the state chamber, who represents that organization. The personnel will be almost evenly divided between Portland and the outside districts of the state, with an especially good showing from the eastern section of the state.

Most of the Oregon delegates left on late trains last night. A special sleeper for Chamber of Commerce delegates was attached to the Oregon-Washington train, which left the Union station at 11 P. M. The delegates were Whitney L. Boise, M. H. Houser, J. S. Beall, Sydney B. Vincent, representing the chamber; Commerce, George Quayle, state and city administration; H. L. Hudson, manager of the joint traffic bureau of the port and dock commissions; Marshall N. Dana, Oregon Journal; Frank Ira White, The Oregonian; Fred L. Boat, News; W. E. Meacham, representing the Powder river irrigation project; Baker county; A. A. Smith and W. A. Steward; Baker; James M. Kyle, Stanfield; W. B. Hinkle, Pendleton; Fred M. Wallace, president of the Oregon irrigation congress and of the Tumalo irrigation project; Willamette county; Percy E. Dunbar, passenger agent, Oregon-Washington company, and W. D. Skinner, traffic manager of the Spokane, Portland & Seattle.

L. C. Gilman, president of the North Bank system companies, who is to be one of the speakers at the congress, was one of the early arrivals at the convention city. Quite a number of irrigators from the various states, projects went to Seattle yesterday on day trains to be on the ground for preliminary events. Percy E. Dunbar, state engineer, arrived from Salem last evening and joined the special car party last night.

Arguers Argue Arguments. There was a gathering of prospective campaign speakers at democratic headquarters Tuesday night. The object of the meeting was to decide on the best line of arguments for the speakers to use when they go on the stump. Although the argument lasted for considerable time, there was no agreement as to the best talking points to use.

WITHIN a room that was transformed into a fairyland by the presence of 250 friends, Miss Marjorie Campbell was united in marriage last night to Wilson B. Coffey. The ceremony was celebrated at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Campbell of Portland Heights, the Very Rev. R. T. Hicks, D. D., dean of St. Stephen's Pro-Cathedral officiating.

The bride was pretty in her bridal robe of ivory white satin, elaborated with an embroidered design in pearls. Her veil was of filmy tulle, and edged with rare and exquisite lace, and the cap room which it depended was of lace with coronet band of orange blossoms. The bouquet was of orchids, lilies of the valley and gardenias.

Mrs. Jay Coffey, matron of honor, was crowned in peach garlands, and carried pink asters and Ophelia roses. Miss Lucille Hutton, one of the bridesmaids, wore a becoming gown of blue georgette over orchid satin. Miss Claire Thornberry, the other bridesmaid, was attractive in pale pink tulle, and carried a bouquet of flowers that worn by Miss Hutton, was enhanced in beauty by a trimming of French flowers and gold ribbon. Both girls carried asters and roses in shower effect. Gerard Graham was best man. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The ceremony was solemnized before an improvised altar of asters, statelily and greenery. Dean Hicks reading the impressive Episcopal service.

In the hall, and bordering the stairs, greenery and asters carried out the general scheme of artistic decoration, and in the dining room Chinese roses were employed. The table was centered with a large basket of these blooms. Mrs. Lawrence Smith cut the wedding cake. Miss Jeanette Fendleton poured. Assisting about the room were Miss Miriam Reed, Miss Constance Cole, Miss Frances Fawcett, Miss Marjorie Belt and Miss Katherine Allehoff.

Mrs. G. L. Campbell, mother of the bride, wore a gown of blue georgette over rose, attractively beaded. Mrs. R. C. Coffey, mother of the bridegroom, wore a smart gown of silver cloth, over which was fashioned blue net, beaded.
