

F. W. GALBRAITH NEW LEGION COMMANDER

Cincinnati Man Unanimous Choice of Convention.

JAPANESE BAR FAVORED

Rigorous Exclusion of All Oriental Immigrants Urged in Adoption of Resolution.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 29.—J. W. Galbraith Jr. of Cincinnati was unanimously elected national commander of the American Legion today at the closing session of its second annual convention.

The passing of a resolution which puts the legion on record as being in favor of the rigorous exclusion of Japanese as immigrants, closes the session of the so-called "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan.

The Japanese question came up when the committee on Americanization presented its report.

"It is resolved that we go on record as being in favor of the cancellation of the so-called 'gentlemen's agreement' with Japan.

"And that we enter a vigorous protest against the demand that naturalization rights be granted to the Japanese now located in the United States.

The resolution was adopted as read, but it created a stormy debate.

It was explained by Leonard Withington of Hawaii, chairman of the committee.

Other outstanding features of the report adopted by the convention were:

Training Legion boys to see that all members of the legion qualify, and exercise the right of suffrage.

Favoring many American activities including work for children and among immigrants for school children and among Americans within the United States.

Political Fight Started.

The fight this afternoon came on the question of political restrictions.

When the committee on constitutional amendments made its report it suggested a few amendments to certain articles of the constitution.

One of the amendments was that no person shall be eligible for election to the office of national commander or national vice-commander.

However, as explained by Chairman Wood, Pennsylvania, because of the discussion on the question of political restrictions, it was decided by the committee as a whole that a majority report and a minority report had been presented.

The report of the majority, which carried 33 to 2, in committee recommended that the Legion through its organization has the right under its charter and constitution to accept and constitute its members the attitude of candidates for public office toward such policies and principles.

The minority report merely recommended that "the report of the majority be defeated."

Legion to Be Neutral.

The debate which followed was stormy. A motion for a rollcall was finally made and the vote stood 963 voting against the majority report.

Other reports adopted were those on disabled soldiers and on the inter-parliamentary organization.

The publicity report asked the cooperation of the press in not featuring as a class the name of ex-service men in connection with crime.

HARDING MEASURES UP TO EMERGENCIES

Campaign Has Developed Self-Confidence.

BALTIMORE SPEECH TEST

Readiness and Effect of Response to Heckler Win Approval and Respect of Crowd.

BY MARK SULLIVAN. ON BOARD HARDING TRAIN, September 29.—I have heard Senator Harding deliver some 12 formal speeches during this campaign.

Everybody around him has noticed the change. It is deeper than the mere overcoming of diffidence in speech making that is more apparent.

All the circumstances, of course, have tended to bring about the change in him, but so far as it can be said to have an indefinable connection with any one event, that event was his speech at Minneapolis some weeks ago.

That was his first trip away from the front porch. He embarked upon it with a diffidence that was easily apparent to those about him.

Self-Confidence Won.

But the Minneapolis speech was a conspicuous success. He felt the respect and affection of the huge audience that heard him there.

There were two episodes in his Baltimore speeches when Senator Harding, partly through being forced and partly because he felt like it, was to depart from his speech and strike out alone without the support of his manuscript.

One of the ventures called for graceful feeling and the other called for boldness. To both calls he measured up.

On one occasion he had just come to the point in his manuscript which said: "We are through with one-man government."

He said it with strong emphasis and got applause in proportion. Someone in the gallery took advantage of the pause to heckle him.

The question in effect was: "Will you stand with Johnson on the league?"

Response Effective One.

The audience plainly disapproved the interruption. For Baltimore is probably more punctilious than any other city in America about courtesy to a visitor.

But Senator Harding waved the audience back into the seats and spoke with firm dignity to the edge of the platform.

Tying the situation up to the words of his speech in a manner that called on him to be mentally quick on his feet, he answered:

"If this were a one-man government, then I should be able to tell you what will be done."

The quickness and appropriateness of the answer and the mental ability that used the occasion to illustrate his philosophy of the presidency won the applause they deserved.

At the conclusion of his speech, Harding took up the question and dealt with it fully, making an extemporaneous speech today when five divisions of the circuit court began disposing of 375 default cases.

All the cases are scheduled to be disposed of within three days. Criminal elevators shot up and down in the county court house building, the attendants shouting "Second Floor for Divorces."

The Invisible Medium of Exchange

CURRENCY has little part to play in Commerce. Trade running into billions cannot be handled with cash.

Perhaps the most useful business contribution to the progress of civilization is the development of that highly efficient medium of exchange called Credit.

WITNESS OF FOLLY REPENTS

YOUTH DIVORCES MOTHER OF FRATERNITY BROTHER. Two Years After Meeting Woman He Weds to Keep Truth From Own Parents, He Testifies.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 29.—(Special.)—Lowell E. Williams, young overseas veteran and University of Washington graduate, appeared in Judge Frater's court today seeking a divorce from Grace W. Williams.

Through the marriage, Williams testified he acquired a stepdaughter only four years younger than himself, and a stepson his own age.

The young husband, blushing on the witness stand, in a deep bass voice explained to Judge Frater that he had met his wife for the first time in the fall of 1914, when her son, his frat brother, took him to his home as a guest.

"I was then 18 years of age," said Williams. "I continued visiting at their home for two years.

"In March, 1917, when I was 22, our relationship grew more intimate. Later in that year I went to Alaska to work in a cannery to get money to continue my course in college.

This correspondence, as well as letters exchanged after they were married, and while he was in France, were introduced in evidence.

When Williams returned from Alaska, he said, he continued to visit the older woman in her home, and when the United States entered the war he enlisted in a base hospital unit recruited at the university and went to Camp Fremont.

She followed him. About 1 o'clock one afternoon, he testified, she came out to the camp and told him that her condition was critical and begged him to marry her, intimating that if he did not she would tell his mother all about their affair.

"More to keep the truth from my mother," he said, "than for any other reason, I consented, and that afternoon the ceremony took place."

The divorce was granted.
