ARTICLE BRINGS RETORT

SAMUEL HILL'S WORDS AROUSE HOOD RIVER BODY.

Stand on Asiatic Question in Northwest Is Assailed by Secretary of League.

HOOD RIVER, Or., Sept. 29.—(Special.)—Samuel Hill, road builder and capitalist, has aroused the Hood River Anti-Asiatic association by some statements in a letter published in the "Business Chronicle" of Seattle, Reginald Parsons, who also contributes an article to a current number of the publication, arouses R. E. Scott, secretary of the local anti-Asiatic organization. Mr. Scott, writing to the paper, says:

"Mr. Samuel Hill in his article remarks that a body of men, purely and simply agitators, led by men who never constructed anything in their lives, who are purely non-constructionists, have been seeking to do so and so."

"Mr. Reginald Parsons remarked: 'No local irritation or an aroused prejudice on the part of cheap politicians or propagandists should be permitted to take upon itself an international character.'"

"The trouble with these gentlemen is they do not consider any work constructive in character except that done in bigger things than farming. In Hood River we have no politicians, much less cheap ones. The membership of our association is made up principally of farmers. The business men of Oregon have concluded that a campaign of vilification against the non-Asiatic League in this state will only serve to promote that matter. Mr. Hill and Mr. Parsons both consider their articles with an appeal to every one to work for a better understanding. In their articles they show no effort in this direction toward those whose opinions differ on the subject."

"Now we of Hood River have no special difference with our Japanese neighbors. They are among us as good citizens. It is not the presence of the some 300 Japanese in the valley that worries us. It was their constant increase and tendency to acquire land in our community that worries us. When one considers that 65 Japanese married couples were responsible for 25 per cent of the birth returns in our community of 1906, he will observe that there is food for thought."

LONG TRIP IS NARRATED

Community Gathering at Chehalis Listens to Globe Trotter.

CHEHALIS, Wash., Sept. 29.—(Special.)—Del Monte hall was crowded last night by the largest community gathering ever held in Chehalis. The occasion was a call by the Chehalis Citizens club.

The principal feature of the evening was a narrative of the 23,000-mile trip to Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines and Japan by the late E. Coffman, prominent Chehalis banker.

The party making the trip was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Coffman, State Commissioner of Agriculture Benson and Mrs. Benson, and Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Larson of Yakima.

Musical features of the evening were vocal solos by Paul Petri, the new director of the Chehalis Choral society, and the singing of the Chehalis Women's quartette, composed of Mrs. Frank Lipscomb, Messes Agnes Harvas, Zola Meicher and Eva Hager.

LAW HAS LONG REACH

Killing of Beaver Two Years Ago Punished by Fine.

MARSHFIELD, Or., Sept. 29.—(Special.)—That the law has a long reach was demonstrated to William Wroe, who two years ago killed a beaver on Smith river in western Douglas county. Game Warden Dilig of Marshfield learned of the shipment of the pelt to a Chicago firm and brought young Wroe to Reedport, where Justice Cavers fined him $25 and costs for the offense.

ABERDEEN, Wash., Sept. 29.—(Special.)—The Bay City whaling fleet put to sea again Saturday after ten days in the harbor on account of storms, bringing in two whales that evening. The season will last only a few days longer.

Tillamook Indians Never Hostile, Writes Mrs. Bird.

Member of Colony Hated by Captain Trask Writes to Vindicate Her of Old Country—Mrs. Barclay in Error, She Says.

MINNVILLE, Or., Sept. 29.—(To the Editor.)—In a recent account of an interview with Mrs. Barclay, who claims to be the first white child born in Tillamook, she tells of the early hostilities of the Tillamook Indians, and a threatened attack on her father's life. These Indians were never hostile. No deed of bloodshed was ever perpetrated against the early settlers by them. I was about 3 years old when the log fort was built on Perkins hill. I well remember seeing it and playing around the fire in the big fireplace in Captain Trask's home.

The direct cause of fright, and of the alarm sent out to all the settlers—about eight families in all, and a half dozen single men—was a rumor that the Indians in different parts of Oregon were on the warpath again.

Apple Harvest Under Way.
MOSIER, Or., Sept. 29.—(Special.)—Apple harvest began this week and the warehouse of the Fruit Growers' association is busy. Winter Bananas are the first variety to be handled at the beginning of the season. The weather is ideal for the work.

That year Captain Trask raised a fine crop of potatoes on the rich new soil of Hoquarton prairie and he made the proposition to old Chief Killechis that he would give one bushel of potatoes for every gun the Indians would bring in, giving assurance that the guns would be returned to the Indians after the hostilities by the other tribes—not the Tillamooks—were over. Well do I remember the large stock of old muskets that was piled up in Captain Trask's yard.

I said no murder of a white settler was ever committed by this tribe. In 1854, if my memory serves me right, a couple of Indian men and one squaw wandered out to the Grand Ronde, in Yamhill county, and in an attempt to steal a jug of vinegar which they had seen in the daytime in a corner of a cabin by the fire, and which they had mistaken for liquor, they were entrapped in the cabin at night by the occupants, a clergyman, a minister, Dr. Clark, and his aged mother. They said afterward they either had to murder or be caught. They chose the former alternative and then burned the cabin. The two Indians were hanged for the deed and the squaw, by the order of Chief Killechis, was forced to go with her head closely shaved for several years, which was a mark of deepest disgrace in this tribe.

The only misdeeds of Indians against the early settlers was to steal from them, and they were very shy about that, as they were very much afraid of the Bostones, as they called the white people. This tribe were flatheads and of low mentality, but I write this to vindicate them of the accusation of hostility. Mrs. Barclay made some other errors in the names of some of the early settlers and places from whence they came, which I will not take the space to correct. She was very young, and it is a great credit to her memory that she gives such an interesting account of those early days. That was the only real scare as a body the Tillamook settlers ever had. I lived in that county until all danger, if there ever was any, had passed, and this little tribe of close turn-outs, as they called themselves, had dwindled to but very few. They are now about extinct.

CULL APPLES TUMBLE

TON PRICE DECREASES ALMOST 50 PER CENT.

Drastic Provisions of Volstead Act Blamed for Lack of Market Demand.

HOOD RIVER, Or., Sept. 29.—(Special.)—Cull apples, the price of which soared to $15 for cider stocks, and $20 ton for canning quality of fruit last year, will show a decline of nearly 50 per cent in price this season. The Hood River vinegar company, which utilizes most of the fruit, announces that it will begin to receive cull apples October 5 at a price of $8 a ton. Canners and cider manufacturers who were here last season eagerly bidding for the cull product, are absent this season.

E. B. Cloud, local canner, states that he as yet is undecided as to whether he will can any apples or not. Formerly, Libby, McNeil & Libby and the Dalles-King company, operating a dehydrating concern, have bought low grade apples here extensively.

The Dalles concern, however, has not appeared in the field this year. One of the chief reasons for the lack of activity in the cull apple market results from drastic provisions of the Volstead act, it is said. The restrictions on manufacturers as well as merchants, it is declared, have made the cider business so hazardous that only a negligible quantity will be manufactured.

STUDENT BODY GROWING

Washington Reports Decided Increase in Students Over 1919.

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON, Seattle, Sept. 29.—(Special.)—Registration reached 4902 students at 5 o'clock Tuesday, the fourth day. This is several hundred over the mark for last year.

Total receipts up to Tuesday night amounted to over $60,000 in fees and deposits. This is nearly double last year. The difference is due to an increase of the students' association fee from $4 to $10, and the charging of a deposit for the uniforms of the R. O. T. C. men.

Total registration for the fall quarter last year was 2908. This mark will be passed during this week, according to all indications. The number of entering freshmen is less than that of last year.

AT 74 POPULAR "OLD VET" GAINS 33 POUNDS

J. T. James Says He Was about "All In" When He Began Taking Tanlac but Can Eat Even Pork and Greens Now.

J. T. James, of 518 East 29th St., Tacoma, Wash., veteran of the Civil war, age 74, and for many years a well-known railroad man, reports a gain of thirty-three pounds in weight, and relates an experience with Tanlac that will be read with interest throughout the entire west.

across the small of my back that felt like I was being broken in two. I also had severe rheumatic pains in my left hip and leg and couldn't get any rest at night. At times I got so dizzy I would almost fall in my tracks and my nerves just went all to pieces. In fact I was just about "all in."

"But the way five bottles of Tanlac have fixed me up is nothing less than remarkable. I now have a grand appetite and can even eat roast pork and greens and never suffer a particle from indigestion. My food does me so much good I have gone up from one hundred and thirty to a hundred and sixty-three pounds in weight, which makes an actual gain of thirty-three pounds."

"My kidneys never bother me now and all signs of rheumatism have left me. My nerves are steady as a clock and I sleep so well at night I get up in the morning feeling equal to a good day's work. Tanlac has not only put me back on my feet but I'm feeling at least twenty years younger. I have told scores of my friends about Tanlac and know that many of them have taken it on my 'say so' with splendid results."

Tanlac is sold in Portland by the Owl Drug Co.—Adv.
