

4 MATCHES BOOKED FOR HEILG OPENER

Sam Langford Will Meet Herman in Main Event.

TINY GOING LIVELY CLIP

Four Bantams Aspiring to Mascott's Title to Display Wares in 2 Special Bouts.

BY DICK SHARP.

Four of the five matches that will comprise the opening boxing card of the season under the auspices of the Portland boxing commission at the Heilig theater next Wednesday night have been arranged by Matchmaker Bobby Evans. The fifth contest will be signed today.

Sam Langford, the greatest negro heavyweight of all times, who will meet "Tiny" Herman in the main event of ten rounds limbered up at the armory yesterday, where he will train for his battle. The Boston tar baby will do some boxing this afternoon and settle down to real work tomorrow. Evans is finding it difficult to line up heavy sparring partners for Sam, but hopes to have a couple of bruisers on hand today.

The long ride from Chicago left Sam stiff in the joints, but another day and he will be on his sea legs.

Herman, trained in Tacoma, will be the only man west of the Rockies who would be able to stand the stiff with the famous colored strapper. Evans even went as far as New York to get a suitable opponent, but none were eager to test conclusions with Sam. Herman is a rough mixer and strong as a bull. His defense is good and he has a heart that will stand up under almost any kind of a punch.

"Tiny" Muck Improved.

"Tiny" is said to have improved vastly since he fought a ten-round draw with Frank Farmer here last season. On that occasion many of the fans were of the opinion that if he had gone in and roughed Frank up a little more he would have trimmed the Tacoma boxer. It was Herman's first fight against a man of Farmer's caliber and since that time has been making them all out and battering them down.

It seems that Leo Cross has taken a powder, so the scheduled semi-windup between him and Ole Anderson has been canceled. Young Sam Langford, the San Francisco boy, who gave Johnny Fiske a socking at the Milwaukee arena Wednesday night, will meet Weldon Wing in the eight-round semi-final. Langford fought like a champion against Fiske the other night. Wing has been clamoring for another chance to get another way and has promised to wade in and battle or quit fighting.

Four bantamweights, who aspire to Billy Mascott's crown, will show their wares in the two six-round special events. Bobby Evans, the Tacoma tornado, will meet Frankie Howard of Chicago, while Johnny Coy of Los Angeles will meet Alie Taylor of Bend.

Joe Anderson and Johnny Fiske are both making the rounds with scars from their bouts Wednesday night. Fiske has a cut over his eye and two on his head that will have to give time to heal before he can box again, while Anderson has a beautiful cauliflower ear.

The exhibition that Anderson put up in his first ring battle is worthy of comment and the same goes for Bert Taylor, who was his opponent. It was the latter's second professional bout, but he acquitted himself in the Olympic gymnasium for nearly six months assimilating knowledge by working with such men as Fred Fulton, Albert Smith, Jack Thompson and lighter boxers of note.

As for Anderson he has had but three or four weeks' work in a gymnasium and picked up all that he knew about mixing in that time. He held up his hands last night after a dozen fights and hit clean. The best thing that he showed, however, was that he has a heart that is big. Joe may never be a champion or even a near-Pacific coast champion, but there are a lot of so-called heavy-weight boxers who he will be able to beat with a little more experience.

He lauded the Roosevelt game reserve bill and the provision for increasing the terms of certain county officers. The Port of Portland bill was also sanctioned, as was the oleomargarine bill.

In explaining his stand on the marketing proposal, Mr. Chapman said the measure would be more strict than the one in California. He declared that Oregon one was advocated only by those co-operative marketing leagues that have not proven successful.

As for vaccination, he remarked that 100 years' experience should have taught the people some authority is needed by the health board in order that epidemics may be controlled.

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 30.—The heroism of A. E. Besides Mutz the victims were: James Murray, Butte; Art Dugan, Missoula; Roy Somnos, St. Paul; R. Fassin, St. Paul, and two unidentified men.

Engineer Mutz, who was not on duty on the gravel train at the time, was observing the runaway cars tearing down the hill, he jumped into the cab of a motor standing near by and attempted to pull a string of crossed the weekly luncheon of the Press club in the Elks building.

He had succeeded in getting most of the train into the clear when the runaway cars struck the gravel cars from the rear and a flying insulator, striking the engine, caused the train to stop and killed Mutz. A car striking against the engine caused the last of the wreckage to be cleared.

As a result of the collision, 40 wrecked cars were piled more than 40 feet high for a distance of several hundred yards and it probably will be several days before the last of the wreckage is cleared.
