"Wheat—Prices receded sharply and the market ruled heavy until shortly before the close, when the appearance of short covering induced on possibility of a good export business being done on the decline, brought about a recovery of 5 cents from the close, when the appearance of short covering induced on possibility of a good export business being done on the decline, brought about a recovery of 5 cents from the covering induced on possibility of a good export business was done on its strong. Receipts were small and there was a slight improvement in the milling demand which found reflection in slightly higher premium for hard was easier. No doubt a good export business was done to day, but the buik of it probably was of Canadian variety and the influence on prices in the market unimportant. As some of our economic students view the situation, everything in the country from most vital necessities to the high-priced luxiries are quoted 'asked' and nothing 'bid.' From a speculative viewpoint the gat fact must not be overlooked, that hedging sales make the market susceptible to sharp recoveries coincident with export buying, but as long as the feeling persists that definition is under way, the logical course 24th abould be to make sales on bulges.
