Oregonian Writer Bares Intimate Details of Trip to County Exposition.

BY ADDISON BENNETT. The opening day of the great Multomah county or Gresham fair was sunny yesterday, and there are few places I would more dislike to be than at the opening day of this or any other fair in its making. Neighbor Jones is unloading his "punkins" bor Jones is unloading his punkins i and squashes; Neighbor Smith is pil-ing up his cabbages; Neighbor Bryan, with tears in his eyes, is grinding his horseradish, and Neighbor Brown is quarreling with the secretary about an alleged overcharge.

So as the first day about all the truthful chronicler can do is to look at the few things that are finished, and fortunately I can state that the eight granges of the county that usu-ally occupy a large share of the public eye are all in place. I will name them in the order of their location in the show building: Pleasant Valley, Columbia, Russellville, Evening Star, Lents, Gresham, Rockwood and Mult-

CITY URGED TO GO TO FAIR BAKER WANTS EVERY PORT. LANDER TO VISIT GRESHAM. Exhibits Are Better Than Ever Before, Says Mayor; County Folk Support Rose Festival. Support of the Multhomah county fair, which opened at Gresham yes-terday, by the attendance of every resident of Portland is urged by Mayor Baker, who in a statement holds that Portland is duty-bound to crown the Multhomah county fair with success. rown the Multnomah county fair with success. According to Mayor Baker, the county fair is one of the few oppor-tunities of citizens living within the city limits of Portland of pecoming acquainted with the work of the resi-dents of the county who live just beyond the gates of the city. "Every person in Portland should take the lime to attend the county fair some time this week. From what I have been toid by directors of the fair, the exhibits this year are better than ever before and better entertainment has been provided. If this be true, one visit will call for an-other, perhaps. "But it is of extreme importance that we support this enterprise by our attendance.
