ROUGH ONE VOYAGE

Trip of Daniel Kern From Seattle to Columbia River Filled With Thrilling Incidents.

ASTORIA, Or., Oct. 7 .- (Special.)-Three Columbia river trollers owe their lives to the timely arrival of the tug Daniel Kern, Captain J. E. Peterson, which crossed into the Columbia river about 10:30 last night after a tempestuous trip down the coast. The trollers are Arthur and Alfred Lindstrom, brothers, and John O'Neill.

The Daniel Kern was en route fro Seattle to Astoria, towing the Puget Sound Towboat company's barge No. 8, which had the gasoline launch Gold Finch on board. Off Willapa harbor, about noon yesterday, the Kern ran into a terrific southeast gale. The pounding of the huge waves opened the seams of the barge, swamped, and the launch, valued at about $9000, was washed overboard and sank. The tug, however, hung on to the barge and proceeded to the Trolling Craft Sighted.

About 2:30 in the afternoon, when off North Head, the Kern sighted the trolling craft Dearie swamped and on her beam ends, with the Lindstrom. brothers clinging to her. The two men were picked up, nearly worn out with battling the waves. One was almost unconscious. Neither was badly injured, however, and soon recovered after being given dry clothing and warm food on board the tug. Their boat was lost.

The Lindstrom brothers were com-ing into the Columbia river via the north channel when they met disaster. Their little craft was struck by a huge breaker, which smashed he cabin windows, with the result that the boat soon filled. Boat Turned Bottom Up.

The little launch was equipped with air tanks, which caused her to right herself partially, and she drifted across the north spit and seven miles out to sea, where she was found by the Kern about two hours after the accident about two hours after the accident

About 5:30 last evening, off the mouth of the river, the Kern sighted the trolling craft H-333 A, flying signais of distress. This craft was oc-cupied by John O'Neill, who was taken on board the tug, while a line was placed on board his craft and it The waterlogged barge was beached

Portland Bank Sues Treasurer on Bonds Issued and Sold and Now Held Invalid.

LA GRANDE, Or., Oct. 7 .- (Special.) -The Union county good roads pro-gramme met another snag this afternoon when the county court members met in regular session and were told that the Clackamas county bond is-sue, or the case of W. P. Hawley versus County Judge Anderson of Clackamas county, had been denied a petition of repeal by the supreme court. However, soon after, the court was notified that the Ladd & Tilton bank of Portland had today filed in the supreme court a petition for a mandamus against John Frawley treasurer of Union county, to compel the payment of interest on $60,000 of county highway bonds which have been held up by the action of the supreme court in holding invalid the Clackamas county issue in which the same considerations are involved. To some extent the road pro gramme in this county has been held up all summer, owing to the invalid-ity of the bonds. Mr. Benson, who durng the exposition at San Francisco was declared to be Oregon's foremost citizen, had forgotten the natal event until his daughter reminded him of he fact yesterday afternoon Mr. Benson was an important factor in the logging industry of Oregon, but is best known for his advocacy of good roads. In 1912 he spent his first money for roads when he con-tributed $10,000 to finance the construction of a road around Shel mountain, which is now a section of the Columbia river highway. The work was performed by "honor mer task by Oswald West, then governor. Next Mr. Benson paid the expense of building a grade through Beaver canyon, in Columbia county, also a link in the Columbia river highway The estimate was for $22,000, but it cost $28,000, and Mr. Benson asked the state to reimburse him only for the amount estimated. He induced Hood River county to bond itself for $75,000 to grade the Mitchell point section, and then bought the bonds. bond money was not sufficient, and Mr. Benson put up the $13,000 additional necessary for the work. Since then Mr. Benson has given the Benson park, near Multnomah falls, and has made at the state of the s and has made other gifts to the pub-
