Party Bigotry and Partisan Malice Declared Improper Background for Public Duty Discussion.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 7 .- An appeal for dispassionate consideration of fisues in the political campaign marked the address tonight of Bainbridge Colby secretary of state. It was the first speech of Mr. Colby's western trip.

"Anger, party bigotry, partisan malice and deep and uncontrolled antipathies," Mr. Colby said, did not form a proper background for discussion of "public duty. "Passion is a bad counsellor," he

"I shall not try to stir your pas-ons. I shall be content to arrest our attention and stir your thoughts." The speaker took up the claim "so confidently advanced by the republican party that it is sure of success beof the prevalent desire in the country for a change."

Democrats Held Apprehensive. en the democrats are apprehen give that there is something in this," he said. "It may be true that many of you want a change. If so, you ought to know why you do and what you hope to get by way of alternative. Frank T. Barlow I refuse to discuss the questions of the hour with you on the theory that Julius Goldsmith.

"Do you desire to change our attitude toward the Latin-American gov-ernments on this hemisphere? Have you not seen their regard for this country, their confidences in its purposes, grow by leaps and bounds with every year of Wilson's administration? Would you change this?

Mexican Question Stilled. Do we hear any militarist clam for armed intervention in Mexico? No. That is all stilled. President Wilson has adhered to his high aim and his fixed purpose of treating Mexico, even while it was in the throes of dangerous disorders, with the respect due from one friendly people to another. What is the result? Mexico is on the high road to tranquil internal conditions and resumption of peaceful development. Our relations with Mexico happily are
