"Miss Brainerd told her Seattle friends that she meant to get rid of him as quickly as possible and that she didn't like children. They were so utterly inhuman when they took the little fellow away. They laid him on the floor of the car that cold night they stole him, without a robe about him or anything to keep him warm except his little house rompers. They put their feet over him so no one could see him. And then for three days after they had burned his clothes they left him without anything to wear except some ragged cast-offs of Mrs. Wohaske's children."

Miss Brainerd and mother of two children, is declared to have permitted Miss Brainerd, Stagg and Miss Myrtle Jones to bring the stolen child there, and it was while he was at her home that his curls were cut off and his series of frauds and conspiracies. clothes burned. Miss Myrtle Jones, also identified with the kidnaping, is the daughter of W. G. Jones and a QUART GOES WITH SHINE member of the wealthy Horton family founder of the Dexter, Horton bank, Seattle. Miss Jones, according to her confession to officials, accompanied Stagg and Miss Brainerd to Tacoma the day of the kidnaping, and had expected to drive them over in her own car and take the child to her home on their return. The plan, according to Miss Jones' statement to Mrs. Stagg, was abandoned owing to hibition Inspector O'Hara to have the fact that her mother was ill, so been Leslie Murray's method of work-Miss Brainerd's car was pressed into ing up business at his stand in the
