

ALDRICH IS READY TO FACE ACCUSERS

"Brides" to Press Bigamy Charge at Chicago.

THIRD WIFE ANNOUNCED

Toe Dancer of Seattle Claims to Be Only Really, Truly Mate; Encouraging Letters Given Out.

Still sullenly silent concerning his tangled marital affairs, but confident that his father, a rich packer of Nebraska City, Neb., will come to his assistance in a financial way, Glen T. Aldrich, ex-ensign, United States navy, announced his readiness yesterday to return to Chicago to meet his accusers without further delay.

Numerous Chicago firms, including department stores, taxicab companies, hotels and cafes, also are ready to appear against him for passing bad checks, which, according to reports, aggregate more than $4000.

While the Chicago police have located two brides whom Aldrich married within nine days of each other, another woman has just stepped forward to present herself as the only "really, truly" wife of the dashing ex-naval officer.

The woman who says she is the third wife of Aldrich is Kathleen Elismore, a too famous playmate of the cabaret in Seattle. She told the Chicago police that she married Aldrich back in 1914, just before he went to war.

"I first met him in the orient," the Seattle "bride" is reported to have told the Chicago police. "We became friends and then sweethearts. Great heavens, how that man could love!"

Letters Reveal Confession. Although Aldrich, since he has been in jail in Portland, has consistently denied knowledge of his marriage to Lillian Dombrow, which took place nine days before he married to Esther Carlson at Great Falls, Mont.

"I do not love that girl. She was but a nightmare in my life—a figure in a drunken revelry. I met her one night at a party. I had been horribly lonesome for you and drank rather heavily."

"We first met at the Midnight Frolic, then Colosimo's, then the Mariage Gardens. As we entered the latter place the spotlight accidentally fell on me. I happened to be at this girl's side."

"The orchestra struck up the wedding march. Everybody in our party laughed and looked at us. The whole room looked and laughed. We laughed, too."

"Tons of champagne followed. Then I recall somebody saying, 'You're about a wedding breakfast.' I don't remember what happened next. But when I awoke I found I was married to this girl—I didn't even know her first name."

"The letter then goes on to tell the 'bride' that she is a member of the Allied Packing association under a cloud because of alleged padding of accounts and falsification of records."

Accountability Is Denied. "But I don't know anything about those charges," he states in his letter. "I was drinking heavily and a man under the influence of liquor is not accountable for his actions. But as soon as I get straightened out here I'll make good on that."

At the close of the letter, Aldrich pleaded with bride No. 2 that she telegraph him $250 at once.

According to Sergeant Cartan, who interviewed both wives before coming to Portland, Aldrich sent them letters and telegrams by the dozen, always protesting his undying love, and always asking for money.

It is also learned that even while Aldrich was en route to Montana to marry his second wife, he was writing to wife No. 1, whom he left in Chicago after the two-day honeymoon which was paved with bad checks.

Letter Is Produced. Just about the time he was getting a marriage license in Great Falls to marry Esther Carlson, he wrote a letter to Mrs. Lillian Dombrow-Aldrich. A copy of this letter, was produced yesterday by the Chicago detective, and reads as follows:

"Dear Lillie: I am deeply in debt, more than $12500 in debt. Our marriage was a terrible mistake. Please have it annulled. I am not worthy to see you again. Perhaps, some day in the Great Beyond we will meet again. Do not expect to see me for at least four or five years. Yours, Glen."

Although wife No. 2, whom he married at Great Falls, at first announced she would stay with her husband through all his trouble and in spite of his dual marriages, she has since suffered a change of heart and will assist wife No. 1 in prosecuting him for bigamy, said Sergeant Cartan.

Father's Aid Looked For. In another letter to wife No. 2, also written in the city jail here, Aldrich expressed hope that his father will assist him in straightening out his tangled affairs.

"I wrote dad and asked him for financial help and figured I could get my financial affairs straightened out without having to worry over them," he wrote her. "I have not yet gotten into close touch with him, so do not know just how far he will go in helping me. Until I can get lined up with him I am lying low, dearest, and not communicating with anyone in Chicago."

As to the photo which was published, you know, honey girl, where everyone of those pictures went, and that I had none left. I don't know where the photo came from. I surely would not give one to you—and they are yours, sweetheart—to anyone without your permission. Now dearest, as to that alleged marriage: "I guess, honey, it is true."

Marriage Held Forgotten. "But on my love to you, at the time I married you I had no idea or recollection of ever having gone through the ceremony."

"I met a Dombrow but it seems to me her name was or is Louise. As near as I can recall I met her on a wild party one night just a few days—two or three—before this wedding. The whole thing is hazy to me."

The letter closes in this manner: "Now, honey girl, all this happened before the wonderful September day that I married you! I love you! With you, anything! Any place! Anywhere! Without you, nothing!"

"Your broken-hearted but still hopeful husband, dearest, and I am your husband—yours and yours only—"

DASHING EX-NAVAL OFFICER AND TWO BRIDES WHOM HE MARRIED WITHIN NINE DAYS OF EACH OTHER.

sends all his love and carresses. Always and for always, yours."

According to Sergeant Cartan, wife No. 1 registered deep indignation when she read this letter which Aldrich had written to wife No. 2.

"She told me that he was not drunk when he met her and married her," said Sergeant Cartan, "and that he came to her house frequently during that week's courtship and met her parents and friends and seemed every inch a gentleman. They were married at her home."

After the two "wives" began to compare notes and misdeeds, they both decided they would assist in the prosecution of the handsome ex-naval officer. It was wife No. 2 who secured a warrant charging Aldrich with desertion, while wife No. 1 first gave the Chicago police the information which led to his arrest in Portland ten days ago.

While Aldrich is to be returned to Chicago tomorrow, the Chicago police are still investigating the claim of the cabaret dancer in Seattle that she is the first and only legal wife of the much-married young man.

1912 Marriage Reported. According to statements she is said to have made to officials, she was married to Aldrich on February 11, 1912, at the Sacred Heart church, San Francisco. She also says that she received the uniform of a lieutenant officer in the navy during the war and kept getting it until last December.

The Seattle "wife" also says that her husband was always in need of financial assistance during the time they were living together and that indulgent parents always answered her appeals for funds.

"They never failed him when he called on them for funds," she is reported to have said. "While we were in the orient he would cable again and again for funds and always got what he asked for promptly."

Although Aldrich has consistently denied that there is any uniform of a captain or lieutenant-commander which he wore in Chicago, Sergeant Cartan says it was the uniform of a lieutenant-commander which lured the Dombrow girl into marrying him, and a picture of him in this uniform was published in his Chicago newspaper at the time of his marriage. While in Portland he made himself a captain in the navy by the simple process of changing the bars and other insignia of the uniform.

Life Term Is Asked. "I am writing you to know if you can and will reverse the sentence of Hart to a life sentence," wrote Rev. Mr. Cox to Governor Olcott.

"I know he and he alone murdered our good friend Taylor, but the man has a mental defective and has been so from boyhood. Secondly, he is not physically sound, his anatomy is incomplete, so our present sheriff tells me, and this condition alone would affect him. Then again, I am diametrically opposed to capital punishment. 'Thou shalt not kill' is as true a nation, a state, a county, a city, a town, as it is true to a person."

"And again, our city was so incensed and infuriated and somewhat intoxicated with the frenzied condition that there is every reason for me to believe that had this case been tried by another county nothing more than a second degree would have come against Bancroft, alias Hart."

Prejudice Is Charged. "I believe that grand jury, prosecution and judge all suffered from this condition, and probably did not realize that they were in any way under its influence, but I feel sure they were. Now do you ask, how did I escape it? Well, I was in Canada when it all happened and left on the Wednesday before it happened and did not return until August and did not hear of it until I returned, or perhaps might have gotten the same condition."

"If Taylor was a personal friend of mine, and on Sunday, July 13, I sat in his office chatting with him, and I feel I interpret him right when I say I think he could and would Unatilla county, will receive any clemency at the hands of Governor Olcott.

This was made plain here today following receipt of a letter at the executive offices from Rev. W. H. Cox, a Baptist minister at Pendleton, urging that Hart be spared from death on the gallows.

"I wish to advise that no clemency will be extended by this office to Hart, Owens or Rathle," said the governor's letter in reply to the communication received from Rev. Cox. "I sincerely appreciate your attitude in this matter, but in justice to the people of the state these sentences should and will be carried out according to law and the verdict of the jury who set in the cases."

Anderson Trial Delayed. Aligned Wife Murderer May Face Jury Some Time in November.

ASTORIA, Or., Oct. 13.—(Special).—The date for the trial of Olaf Anderson, charged with the murder of his wife, has not been definitely fixed, although it probably will be during the November session of the circuit court.

Some weeks ago the trial was set for November 1, but that will be the date before the action and as the jury in a murder case, when sworn in, must be kept together until the trial ends, the hearing was continued. A. W. Norblad, attorney for the defense, is endeavoring to procure information from an insane asylum in Sweden where a brother of a sister of the defendant are said to be confined with a view to showing that the defendant's family carries a strain of insanity.

Anderson, who tried to commit suicide a short time ago by cutting his throat, has been removed from the hospital to the jail and is fast recovering from his wound.

Albany Officers Installed. ALBANY, Or., Oct. 13.—(Special).—Albany council, Knights of Columbus, installed the following officers last night: Grand knight, M. C. Miller; advisor, T. E. Riley; warden, Ben T. Suddell; lecturer, William J. Tyrrell; trustee, Kasper Kropp; chaplain, Arthur Lane.
