OREGON CHILDREN THRIVE

TESTS SHOW PUPILS HERE RANK EASTERN YOUTHS.

Beaver State Boys and Girls Prove to Be Taller and Heavier and Mentally Heavier.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Oct. 22.—(Special).—That Oregon school children are both taller and heavier than eastern children is one of the discoveries made by Glus M. Ruch, former instructor in the school of education, in intelligence and achievement tests given 125 pupils of the University of Oregon campus high school.

That intelligence and achievement tests are a better criterion of pupils' grade standing than the teachers' estimates, is another of Mr. Ruch's conclusions. In this survey both physical and mental measurements combined with all the best known tests were used.

Mr. Ruch's work is the first attempt to apply all of these tests at the same time to the same group of children. His object in making the tests was to determine if possible what scholastic use could be made of the tests.

Mr. Ruch is an Oregon graduate of 1914 and is now a graduate fellow at Stanford university.
