FOR SALE-AUTOMOBILES. AT THE COVEY MOTOR CAR COMPANY PLANT. The volume of business done by an organization is the greatest comparative basis upon which to judge the successful operation of such an organization.

It is implied through the successful operation of any business that the general public concedes that it is getting true value for its money, that it is receiving perfectly satisfactory service and that it has implicit confidence in the entire personnel of the organization.

Even in the face of such great influencing conditions such as the closing of our shippards, the mid-summer lightening up of meney prior to election, the so-called gas-oline shortage, and recent declines in prices, we have felt no appre-ciable irregularity in our monthly turnover.

We have adjusted our prices to We have adjusted our prices to meet such conditions without me rificing our adopted principles resarding rebuilding and refinishing so as to always offer the highest possible value, and as a result our sales from one month to another vary but little and our total volume of business is maintained.
