TIME NEEDED FOR SETTLING OF TURBULENT COUNTRY.

Russian Violinist Says Bolshevism Taken Up to Get Rid of Monarchy.

"All that Russia requires to advance to a stable, safe government in the shape of a democracy is a little more time. A great Russian leader, fulfilling what Abraham Lincoln or George Washington did for America yet will emerge and save Russia. I am not a bolshevist and have no leanings that way. My countrymen in Russia took up bolshevism as a sudden, desperate remedy to get rid of the czar and the other Romanoffs, and the hateful autocracy they represented," said Benno Moisewitsch, Russian pianist, last night. He is piano artist tonight at the first concert of the season of the Portland symphony orchestra at the Heilig theater.

Moisewitsch is a young man of the intense, well-informed type. He married an Australian violinist, and they have one child, a little girl. When the star pianist was about to sail recently from Australia with his family the little girl became ill and her mother had to remain behind with her. "I expect my wife and child to rejoin me soon," said Moisewitsch. Moisewitsch was born in Odessa, Russia, and sent when quite young to get his musical education at the imperial school. He was taught piano by a teacher who in turn was a pupil both of Liszt and of Lechetsky himself, said Moisewitsch, smiling happily. "Lechetsky is spoken of by some only as a technician, but he insisted on good technique so that he could secure artistic interpretation, which is the one great ideal." Moisewitsch talks eloquently about music, but when he talks about his native Russia, he is silent. It is 15 years since he left, but he keeps up an active correspondence with his Russian relatives. Moisewitsch knew Kerensky, and when he met him in London after his fall from power, was sorry for him. "Poor Kerensky," said the pianist compassionately. "Kerensky tried to be the Napoleon of Russia and failed, because he tried to do everything himself. He is only human, after all. He tried to be superhuman."

Obituary.

Mrs. A. L. Cornelius, wife of the late G. B. Cornelius, died Monday, October 25, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C. J. Simeral, 31 East Eighty-fifth street, North. She was the mother of Ariadne Simeral, Elizabeth Cornelius and C. P. Cornelius, all of this city. Her nephew, W. C. Parker, of this city, is also a member of the Cornelius household. Funeral services will be held at the Presbyterian church at Turner, Oct. 27, at 11 A. M., and interment will be in the Masonic Twin Oak cemetery.

HILLSBORO, Or., Oct. 26.—(Special.)—S. A. D. Meek of North Plains has received word of the death of October 24 at Craigmont, Idaho, of his brother, Joseph Lane Meek. Deceased was a son of the pioneer, Joseph Meek, and was born in Washington county, October 6, 1856. He was married June 25, 1895, to Miss Katherine Anderson and the same year moved to Idaho, where he farmed on an extensive scale and was active in politics. He is survived by his widow and seven children, a brother, S. A. D. Meek, and a sister, Mrs. Olive Riley, of Eugene.

PRINEVILLE, Or., Oct. 26.—(Special.)—Mrs. Susanna C. Hagler Yancy, one of the pioneers, was buried Sunday, Rev. T. W. Patterson having charge of the services. Mrs. Yancy was born in 1826 in Williamson county, Illinois. She crossed the plains in 1852 with her grandparents, stopping at Salt Lake City. In 1854 she was married to Jesse H. Yancy, whom she survived several years. She was the mother of 11 children, eight of whom are living. Mr. and Mrs. Yancy resided in Prineville and vicinity 30 years.

Discrimination—

It is common for shops to invite a man to come in and exercise his discrimination.

That's all right; but my idea is that a shop ought to exercise discrimination before it asks the customer to do it.

When I offer you Hickey-Freeman Clothes, you do not need any discrimination—you can depend on mine!

You may discriminate between models and fabrics, but discrimination as to quality has been already taken care of.

In fact, Hickey-Freeman is precisely what discrimination means.

Right now at my store you can buy

NO LAW, NO GOD, SAYS MAN WHO WAS DOUBLE-CROSSED.

Three Months John Pobochnik Lay in Jail, Then He Pleaded Guilty; Fined $250.

"There is no law, no order, no God," was the distraught statement of John Pobochnik, convicted violator of the prohibition law, as he left federal court yesterday after having been assessed a $250 fine. Victim of the double-cross, Pobochnik has awaited trial under bonds for three months and surprised the government prosecutor, Clarence Reames, when he entered court and pleaded guilty and was fined $250 several days ago. The arrest of both was caused by their confidence in a taxicab driver, who brought to them as a customer Federal Officer Wolf of the prohibition squad.

Accompanied by Wolf, the two partners in illicit liquor dealing, Pobochnik and Surino, drove with the taxicab chauffeur to a shack near Newberg, Washington county, where three gallons of whisky were produced and payment accepted. The arrest followed. Pobochnik was granted a seven-day stay of execution of sentence in which to pay the fine imposed.
