

NOSE PLAYS ROLE IN COURT BATTLE

Detection of Acids Important in Stamp Case.

6 LOCAL MEN ON TRIAL

Half Dozen Attorneys for Defense Constantly on Feet Interposing Objections and Exceptions.

The session yesterday of the United States district court, engaged in trying six local men on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the government by dealing in altered and savings stamps, developed principally into a test of olfactory senses on the part of witnesses and a battle of objections on the part of opposing counsel.

The accused men are Fred Peterson, who is alleged to have cracked the safe of the Seio, Or., state bank and stolen $15,000 worth of stamps with other assets; Fred Peterson, Rossi, William Brenner, W. E. Smith, Dave Steinhilber and Robert LaSalle, the last named an ex-detective on the Portland police force. A number of members of the local police force have been sitting in a goodly array and their testimony may serve to clear up some important phases of the case.

Six attorneys for the defense opposed Assistant United States Attorney Veatch and they were constantly on their feet interposing objections and a legion of exceptions were asked. Important witnesses were placed on the stand in the afternoon in the persons of George N. Randolph, a local dealer, who was accused of having had a goodly share in the alleged profiteering operations and who dealt in stamps among other securities; an William H. Hyde, a detective on the police force and a comrade of LaSalle's, who is said to have discovered the questionable entries on Randolph's books.

On the stand yesterday Hyde, whose testimony was not completed at the time of adjournment, will likely be the first man to be examined today, told of noticing the unusually large amount on Randolph's register and of the sales having been made by LaSalle. Hyde then told how he went to LaSalle for an explanation and of how his fellow operative explained that the purchase had been made from a "reputable north end business man." Assistant United States Attorney Veatch then engaged in a duel of detective skill with Hyde, asking if he had noticed that the stamps were without mucilage and bore the unmistakable scent of acids. All this time attorneys for the defense were interposing frequent objections.

Cashier Tells of Robbery. Randolph told of his trip to San Francisco and of how he purchased the stamps. He told of being subpoenaed and of various transactions, in all of which stamps had a prominent part. William Bryon, special agent for the department of justice, testified that Rossi told him that immunity had been promised him by federal operatives. Rossi was afterwards arrested.

The case opened with the choice of a jury, mostly from out of town points. Yesterday and yesterday proceeded when the government introduced the Seio State bank told of the robbery of March 2, 1920, and gave the names of customers who had altered stamps and Liberty bonds. How 60 persons were making an effort to have the United States stamps and Liberty bonds altered and how they lost through the registered stamps was told by Miss Daisy Buckner, postmistress at Seio, as the government often reintroduced stamps of this character.

The government operatives then had their inquisitor Joseph Walters, secret service agent, telling how he found 15 stamps, some of which bore across their faces the number 5819, the registry number of the Seio office, in the room of Fred Peterson, wrapped in a newspaper and hidden under a mattress. The telltale odor, said to be the effect of the alleged acids and that have been used in removing the registry number, was easily detected, said Walters, and he produced enlarged photographs of stamps attached to certificates to show the registration numbers. Absence of glue was also emphasized in this case.

A telegram that "the goods are all rusty," said to have been sent by Rossi to a man named Earl Lee, was stated by Bryon as being the lead that marked the undoing of the alleged ring. Lee is said to be an ex-convict and Bryon stated that the telegram was sent after LaSalle had had come back to Brenner and Rossi for his money. Bryon then testified that Rossi had offered LaSalle his check for any amount up to $300 to cover the ex-detective's losses, which was refused, according to Rossi's statement to Bryon.

The court yesterday was plentifully sprinkled with members of the Portland police force, either as interested observers or as witnesses in the trial. It is understood that Chief of Police Jenkins will be called to the stand before the case is completed.

Peanuts and Cookies Fail as "Third Degree."

Local Tot Refuses to Divulge Name of Parents to Matron.

THE use of peanuts and cookies in administering the third degree proved an unsuccessful experiment when tried at police headquarters Tuesday night. Not that the police contemplate adoption of this measure in dealing with all persons, however. And incidentally, Patrolman E. E. Leavens won the affections of an attractive—and very, very young—Miss Dorothy Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin W. Hill, 572 Almsworth avenue. Miss Dorothy, who had come back to Brenner and Rossi for his money, was easily detected, said Walters, and he produced enlarged photographs of stamps attached to certificates to show the registration numbers. Absence of glue was also emphasized in this case.

"Oh, yes, I've got a daddy. See my name there?"

"But haven't you two names? My name is Mrs. Patterson. What is your other name?"

"Jus' Dorothy."

"How old are you, Dorothy?" asked the matron, proffering more peanuts.

"Thirteen."

"Which brought a smile, as Dorothy could not have been more than 5. "Where does your daddy work?"

"Oh, with a sweep of the tiny arm, "he works there."

Dorothy continued to contemplate her new rubbers, as unconcerned as an owl.

"Have you got any more peanuts?" she queried when the bag showed inroads on a young appetite.

"I don't believe I have. But I'll get you some cookies if you tell me the name of your mamma."

"My mamma? I have a daddy, too. He got me these new rubbers."

"But the cookies did not materialize."

ELECTION BETTING IS GROWING BRISK

Wagers Largely on Congressional Result.

McARTHUR IS FAVORITE

Even Money Said to Have Been Reached on Outcome of Stanfield-Chamberlain Race.

Betting on the election was the principal topic in political circles yesterday. Until the last few days there has been comparatively little talk of wagers, or rather there was an abundance of talk but very few actual bets placed. The situation in Oregon had now shifted down about to where it will be next Tuesday, election day, so that those who feel like backing their judgment are talking money.

So far as known, no bets have been placed on the presidential result in Oregon. The Harding sentiment is so strong that democrats have declined to risk their money by betting that Cox will carry the state. A few bets have been made on Harding's majority and several republicans who offered money that Harding will carry the state by 40,000 have been promptly met by democrats. Following these the betting on majorities shifted and some wagers were made that the republican majority will be 20,000.

McArthur Is Favorite.
A bet of $1000 to $500 on McArthur was made in a First street restaurant yesterday. Several smaller bets were made at various cigar stores with McArthur a 10 to 5 and a 10 to 7 favorite. Another bet of 5000 majority in McArthur's favor was reported last night.

For weeks there have been offers of money going begging that Senator Chamberlain will be re-elected over Stanfield, his republican opponent. At one time the odds were two to one, with no takers. When the republican managers began their campaign of "vote the ticket straight," there was a slight change and the odds were 3 to 2. Yesterday it was said even money was reached.

In state headquarters yesterday afternoon word was received that $10,000 had been posted in a cigar store to bet on Stanfield.

Money Goes Begging.
One of the democratic managers, when advised of this report, said that he had heard of it earlier in the day and that when he went to the cigar store to take some of it he was told that the money was not there, but that if he left his check it might be covered. Yesterday $1000 of Stanfield money was left with a prominent clothier, but was taken away subsequently because there were no takers. An out-of-town citizen was in Portland last week offering $2000 on Chamberlain but went home without finding an opportunity to bet. A local democrat was offering $3000 on Chamberlain a month without results.

There is actual money in sight and between now and next Monday night the Chamberlain and Stanfield money probably will come together. Most of the betting is centered around cigar stores and in hotel lobbies, although one court-house employee stated yesterday that he had $200 to place on Stanfield and said that there were several hundred dollars more at the courthouse ready to back the republican candidate.

No crew was found, however.

The unit would make six more rooms.

MOTORISTS all over the city are talking about Marmon Demonstration Week.

And we are being kept busy giving demonstrations to those who have accepted our invitation. If you are a car owner, and you haven't yet made your appointment, call us up today.

Undoubtedly you saw our announcement that this is Marmon Demonstration Week all over the country. Fifteen thousand persons are having their first ride in a Marmon 34 this week. And they are gaining a new conception of motor car performance.

This is a remarkable innovation in motor car demonstrating. It allows motorists to judge for themselves. And that Nordyke & Marmon Company are the ones to introduce it proves that they know that the Marmon 34 in one demonstration will make a stronger impression than many printed claims.

To simplify the accurate judging of a motor car on actual performance, the Marmon Score Card has been devised. It provides a simple method of reducing the comparative performance of motor cars to a definite standard.

We want you, if you are a car owner, to take a ride with us this week, at any time which is most convenient to you.
