sands of celebrants to the streets. But plans for today give guarantee that the observance of the second anniversary will be in keeping with the importance of the event—with a legal holiday proclaimed by Governor Olcott and Mayor Baker. Few places of business will be open, and all public buildings, banks and schools will be closed, while the holiday will be most widely observed by the rally of citizens to the downtown district this morning, to watch the parade of veterans and service the parade of veterans and service organizations.

Three features overshadow the many minor events of Armistice day in Portland. They are the grand parade, scheduled for 11 o'clock this morning, the aviation meet at Lewis & Clark flying field this afternoon and the grand ball tonight at the Multnoman hotel.

Parade to Start Promptly.

The parade will form in the vicinity of Fourteenth and Morrison streets and will move promptly at the appointed hour over the follow-ing line of march: East on Morrison to Broadway, thence north to Pine, east to Sixth, south to Morrison, east to Fourth, south to Main and dis-

All ex-service men are requested to participate in the parade, which will have detachments of the Amer-ican Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Spanish-American War Vet-erans and the Grand Army of the Republic. There will be a gold star Republic. There will be a gold star division, composed of the mothers and widows of men who gave their lives to the national cause, and a special division for disabled soldiers. Both these sections of the parade will be adequately provided with automobiles.

Other divisions of the parade will by subdivisions of the larger prov-be the 5th infantry band, United inces. States army detachment, Oregon na-tional guard, veterans of army nurse corps, Red Cross nurses, Canadian veterans and service men of other alliled countries

Effective Monday, bread prices in Portland will be voluntarily reduced one cent by the master bakers. This action is being taken in keeping with the promise made by the bakers that they would reduce the price just as soon as conditions warranted reductions.

Announcing a Reduction of Bread Prices

Although bread sales are the highest in the industry's history and many of the bakers have from three weeks' to two months' supplies of high-priced flours on hand, they believe that they should now make good their promise to the public. The reduction at the present time means that bakers generally must take losses until these flour stocks are exhausted and the lower priced flours are available for use.

The Master Bakers wish to thank the public for the spirit of fairness it displayed when conditions forced bread up, and they now desire to show their appreciation in the most concrete way possible and that is to voluntarily bring down prices now.
