ment for the next blennium. The budget calls for $64,000, which is an increase of approximately $13,000 over the funds required for the present two years. This increase is necessary, according to members of the board, to match federal funds approboard, to match federal funds appro-priated on a graduated scale under what is known as the Smith-Hughes act. These federal appropriations will continue to increase until the year 1926, when it is expected that states will have the vocational work in such shape that they will not require federal assistance.

Funds for vocational training, both federal and state, are distributed under three classifications—teachers' training, industrial education and ag-ricultural education. The teachers interested in industrial and agricultural education receive their training at the Oregon Agricultural college while the schools reimbursed for industrial work include Eugene, Pendieton, Salem and The Dalles.

Schools receiving financial aid for conducting home economics departments, which is a part of the industrial education, include Ashland, Cottage Grove, Forest Grove and Salem. Agricultural departments are con-ducted in the schools at Alsea, Cot-tage Grove, Enterprise, Forest Grove Gresham, Lebanon, McMinnville, Medfor vocational education and the ac-cident commission, whereby the latter body appropriates $5000 annually to Scott, divisional highway engineer for this district.

The work will be done by men under the state highway commission and all articles of interest found will be turned over to the Oregon Historical society, Mr. Scott said. It is planned to put a crew of men at work digging Saturday. The present intention of the highway office is to excavate as deeply as it is found necessary in order to get all of the antique utensils and carvings. The western bank of the cut, which faces on the Columbia river, will be removed, thus making the road completely open at this point. The highway commission continues to keep a watchman on the job in order to preserve the relics from the hundreds of private collectors who have visited the Big Eddy during the last week. Several of the most valuable finds already have been sent to the historical society at Portland.
