Two kinds of love, the variety that is independent of any outside influence, and the brand inspired by the proper romantic environment, are pictured in "I Love You," a sparkling comedy which is the offering at the Baker theater this week.

The play is by William Le Baron, and he has produced a farce of refreshing novelty and keen lines that do not depend on ancient prohibition jokes, lingerie, or bedroom mix-ups to bring laughter and applause.

The first act discloses a group of society people in the billiard room of Jimmie Farnsworth, an idle young gentleman who has pronounced radical theories on the art of love, engagements and marriage. He declares that there is no such thing as real love and that under certain conditions and romantic surroundings any man and woman can easily become engaged. His views are Wopposed by a friend, George Van Horne, who offers to bet that Jimmie's ideas are absolutely impractical. A wager is made and this is the basis for a succession of excellent comedy situations.

Jimmie prepares a setting in the drawing room of his Long Island mansion, and invites the two people of opposite sex who are placed together under the spell. And he certainly has an attractive job. There is a settee just big enough for two in a bower of new-scented flowers. Streaming through the windows is a flood of moonlight, and just outside the room a plaintive violin breathes the throbbing refrain of a tender waltz melody.

There are eight characters in the play, four men and four women, one of whom is discarded by Jimmie's bewitching charms, and another is discarded by Jimmie's bewitching charms, and another is discarded by Jimmie's bewitching charms.

The machine gun, and the piled up like bills on the second of the month. And at the final curtain it is hard to tell who wins the bet, but four pairs of lovers present a united front in various stages of endearing romance, and no one is thinking of divorce.

Seimer Jackson has the role of Jimmie Farnsworth and makes the character a delight. His sincerity and thoroughness. He has the gift of creating by his talent a clear-cut, convincing figure for the part assigned him each week, and the presence of one so well up to his standard.

Leona Powers, with Mr. Jackson as Ruth Franklin, and her winsome beauty is well set off by a number of Miss Powers' parts this season. She has shown her emotional ability, the presence of her own personality, and opportunity to display a deft knowledge of light comedy touches, and the only objection to her is that she is a bit too good on the stage long enough.

Leo Lindhard is a charming character in the house. He is a young man of the house. He is a young man of the house. He is a young man of the house.

The cast of characters follows: Jimmie Farnsworth... Seimer Jackson... George Van Horne... Murray F. Bernard... Leo Lindhard... Ruth Franklin... Leona Powers... Muriel Kinney

Lyrical. PLEASANT songs by principals of the company, several novel dance numbers by the Rosebud chorus, and an abundance of comedy combine to make "I Love You," a sparkling comedy which is the offering at the Baker theater this week.

The scenes of the play are laid at the health resort of Dr. Pest, a young physician who believes in the use of steam baths as a cure for nearly all ills. To this sanitarium are attracted a number of people, including a young man and woman, a young man and woman, a young man and woman.

At the resort is a remarkable gentleman who claims ownership of 100 tricks in the art of magic. He is a young man of the house. He is a young man of the house. He is a young man of the house.

All Rajah and Madame Rajah present a thought transference specialty in which the latter, blindfolded on the stage, tells the most intimate details of the lives of various members of the audience. She performs all sorts of tricks in the art of magic.

Harry Warden and Frank Nalady have a snappy turn called "That's Nice." One is an Italian character trying to explain the art of courtship to his friend, who is a young man of the house. He is a young man of the house. He is a young man of the house.

Callan and Kenyon, billing themselves as "Singers with Trimmings," are a pair of dapper chaps with a well-selected list of clever songs. The Summers Duo, a man and a maid in a pair of dapper chaps, with a well-selected list of clever songs.

The photoplay feature of the new bill is "Body and Soul," a well-filled with gripping dramatic action featuring Alice Lake.

ANTI-SARON CHIEF PRODS BACKSLIDERS

Fight Against Liquor Has Not Eoded, Says Herwig.

LAW ENFORCEMENT AIM

Speaker Tells Congregation He and His Colleagues Will Make Act Popular.

In addressing the congregation of the University Park Methodist Episcopal church last night, W. J. Herwig, superintendent of the Anti-Saron League of Oregon, declared that the temperance people of Oregon is the enforcement of the prohibitory laws. His subject was "Law Enforcement—Get a Big Stick."

The greatest immediate task confronting the temperance forces of Oregon is the enforcement of our prohibitory laws. The future success and permanence of prohibition will depend almost if not altogether upon the enforcement of our prohibition statutes. In order to conduct more successfully the work of law enforcement, a law and order department was established, and an experienced leader secured. F. W. Snyder, formerly chief special agent under Governor Olcott, is in charge as the director.

Enforcement to be Popular. "It is our purpose to co-operate with law enforcement officers throughout the state in the enforcement of our prohibitory laws; to create a strong public sentiment everywhere; to enlighten the public and make it more popular to enforce the law than not. To this end we shall enlist the pastors and churches, Sunday schools, young people societies, adult bible class teachers, newspapers, every citizen who believes in prohibition and the policy of the league that the law can be enforced only by assuming the responsibility of authorities. No citizens' volunteer law enforcement movement can succeed by assuming the responsibility of authorities. There cannot be any permanent satisfactory enforcement of the law except through the officials who are a part of the machinery of government itself."

"Therefore, it is obvious that relief in any community from conditions of lawlessness can only come through securing honest effective activity on the part of the regularly constituted officials. This cannot be secured by any other means. We are in favor of law enforcement and any effort which does not involve arousing the public as well as making direct demands on the machinery of government is short. Any other policy weakens the law and the machinery of government. It is better to deal with officials who might promise everything and do little, than to deal with officials who do nothing and let the machinery of government be a mere mockery."

Now Not Time to Quit. "The greatest danger which today threatens the prohibition movement in America and throughout the world is that in this hour of victory the spirit of the prohibition movement may conclude that the fight against liquor traffic in America is at an end, and that the machinery of government, even a provision of the constitution cannot of itself solve this liquor problem, or any other great moral or social problem, and that the law of congress and the provisions of the constitution can be amended or nullified through the repeal of the enforcement laws by any congress, and can very easily make a mere scrap of paper out of even an amendment to the federal constitution."

"It will be necessary, therefore, that each state maintain a solid front and continue the agitation for prohibition and the enforcement of the same. Oregon will not be the first state to break the lines or break the ranks, but will carry on and maintain an organization and headquarters as long as there is any vestige of the liquor traffic left anywhere in the world."

PASTOR FAVORS INNOVATIONS Dr. McElveen Urges Flock to Blaze Way in Social Service.

"I am ambitious that this church of ours shall set the fashion in some new forms of social service. Congregationalists have always been pioneers. Therefore we should not be afraid to experiment with new forms of missionary work or educational reform, or community service," Dr. W. T. McElveen at the First Congregational church yesterday morning.

His text was, Acts vi:5: "Peter cast a shadow."

"In every community," said Dr. McElveen, "there are a few people that socially and morally set the pace. What they do others try to do. Follow the leader is a game almost as old as the human race. The great majority of people even in so-called democratic America, live socially and ethically on what a few elect natures experience and do."

"Now I am anxious that this church shall minister socially and recreationally, as well as spiritually and religiously, to the people of this community. A hundred years ago our Pilgrim ancestors did a new thing. They did the new thing and set the fashion by organizing the first Christian Endeavor society."

"The new thing which this church is doing is to install a new sign advertising a church in Portland is to be installed on the southwest corner of our church, and set the fashion by this church of ours an inspiration and an example to other churches in new forms of Christian activity."

POWER IN GRACE RELATED Rev. Harold L. Bowman Preaches on Text From Ephesians.

Rev. Harold L. Bowman of the First Presbyterian church, taking his text from Ephesians iii:3, preached yesterday morning on "The Magic of Grace."

There is a man bold and eagerly preaching the unsearchable riches of Christ—the wealth which, as the world implies, cannot be traced by footprints, said Rev. Bowman.

"The riches which this heroic soul was proclaiming were riches so great that no human footstep had ever explored and discovered their limits. To Cyprus, and Asia Minor and on into Europe amidst a putrid, sordid civilization went this same man, always, by loving life and eager work, telling the story of the unsearchable riches of Christ."

"Who was this preacher of the unsearchable plenteitude? Who was this that God had chosen for His great minister? Was it not this humble Paul—the chief of sinners, this less than the least of all the saints? The divine wonder worker reached out the magic wand of His grace and out of the masserass of Paul's life, He drew forth power and service which no one ever dreamed were there. Would any one of us ever have thought that from that stormy, self-willed figure traveling to Damascus bitterly eager to kill Christians, there could be brought forth a devoted servant who would endure shipwreck, stoning, scourging, suffering and death?"

CONSCIENCE PASTOR'S TOPIC Dr. S. J. Reid Preaches in Third Baptist Church.

Dr. S. J. Reid, superintendent of evangelism for the Baptist state convention of Oregon, preached in the Third Baptist church morning and evening yesterday.

At the evening service he said, speaking on the subject of conscience: "Conscience is a universal human faculty. In every clime, among all races, no matter how degenerate, conscience manifests its presence and power. It is a faculty that never dies. It may be keen and sensitive or crude and undeveloped, distorted or seared. Yet every man hears its voice. Every man has that conscience, or consciousness, sense of wrongdoing which may become in time an anguish of the whole mind."

"Conscience is cleansed by sacrifice. The idols of the heathen are visible proof of the attempt to cleanse conscience by sacrifice. The ritual of the Old Testament with its sacrifices, is the method prescribed for the Jews to accomplish the cleansing of conscience from sin. Every religion has some method for accomplishing this desired end."
