

PORTLAND FAMILIES IN NEED NUMEROUS

Five Hundred Homes Are Reported Destitute.

RELIEF FUND REQUIRED

Public Welfare Bureau Will Aid Unfortunate During Winter and Also Provide Christmas Cheer.

The Oregonian will receive contributions for the relief fund of the public welfare bureau, and acknowledge them in the columns of the Oregonian.

Five hundred families of Portland will be cold and hungry during the winter months this year, unless other families, more fortunate, aid them through the Public Welfare Bureau.

The bureau's idea this year is to distribute aid through a special relief fund during all the winter months instead of just at Christmas time.

Daily, the bureau hears of families who need immediate care and attention. The relief fund will help to make them happy.

A typical family is as follows: Case 1. A family of 13 motherless children, ranging in age from 13 months to a boy nearly 20 years.

The boys' clothing is so ragged that they find it hard to get jobs. All the children need necessary clothing, shoes and bedding.

Cannot Meet Expenses. The wages of the boys are barely sufficient to pay for the living expenses of the family of 14.

The family got along fairly well until the mother died last April. The oldest girl is only 13, and she has to take most of the burden of the house-keeping, assisted by her father.

The children are not strong. When the family was visited, a little girl of 6 asked:

"Do you suppose Santa Claus can find us way out here? I want a dolly so much."

Boy Wants Pair of Skates. Three children do not speak of these things. They simply speak of them as dreams, which they know can never come true.

A check to the Oregonian, which is acting as the agent of the bureau in collecting money for the relief fund, will help these children and many others who otherwise would spend a joyless Christmas day.

HART RETAINS DEMOCRAT

Governor of Washington Places Efficiency Above Politics.

OLYMPIA, Wash., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—Reiterating his frequently announced policy of making efficiency rather than partisanship the test for holding official positions under his administration, Governor Hart today declined to accept the resignation of T. V. Tuttle, member of the board of trustees of the Cheney normal school.

Tuttle is a democrat and was appointed in 1913. His resignation was tendered on the stated grounds that he desired the governor to have a free hand in naming the board.

The governor's letter said: "If there is no other reason than that intimated in your letter—namely, politics—then I want you to understand that your resignation will not be accepted or considered. I have stated many times publicly that efficiency is the test in regard to holding official positions in this state, and will be so for the next four years, and you must accept my word on that final.

"I know no reason for accepting your resignation and unless you have some reason other than intimated in your letter I will consider the incident closed, and you will continue to serve as heretofore."

RALPH H. DUNLAVY'S CAREER IS CLOSED

Well-Known Portland Attorney Dies Suddenly.

FAMILY PROMINENT ONE

Lawyer Popular and Known Throughout Oregon as Authority on Municipal Law.

Ralph Rolafson Dunlavy, Portland attorney, died suddenly at the Portland Medical hospital, yesterday morning. He had been at the hospital for about a month, suffering from acute muscular rheumatism, but was thought to be on the road to recovery, the end coming quite unexpectedly.

Mr. Dunlavy was born November 7, 1859, at Albany, Or., the son of Benjamin C. and Abigail Scott Dunlavy. He came to Portland in 1871 and in 1882 was graduated from the law department of Cornell University. He was admitted to the bar of the state of Oregon in that same year.

He served as first assistant city attorney of Portland for a short time. He practiced law from the same offices in the Chamber of Commerce building for 28 years, being one of the two or three original tenants of that building.

Attorney Gains Reputation. Mr. Dunlavy was known throughout Oregon as an authority on municipal law. Prominent attorneys of the city say that the present law in regard to city procedure in the matter of making improvements has been largely developed by the cases brought by him and taken to the supreme court.

He was known as a keen student of public affairs, who never hesitated to champion a cause he deemed worthy. When preparedness was considered a joke by a great many, Mr. Dunlavy was one of the organizers of the Lawyers' auxiliary and took a prominent part in all war activities. He served in the Multnomah Guard and as a four-minute man.

"Mr. Dunlavy was an indefatigable worker," said Judge Conrad P. Olson yesterday. "He was a master of detail and was unwaveringly loyal to his clients. He carried the fight for them to the court of last resort whenever the cause was popular or not. During his long practice he won some notable victories and was attorney in some noted cases, such as the Kaddery case, where the initiative and referendum were sustained."

Family Well Known. Mr. Dunlavy came from pioneer stock. His mother, Abigail Scott Dunlavy, was known in Oregon and throughout the United States as the mother of suffrage here. His uncle was Harvey W. Scott, former editor of The Oregonian.

He was the youngest of six children, the two oldest of whom are dead. His sister, Mrs. Clara Belle Stearns, died in 1885, and his oldest brother, Willis, ex-state printer, died in 1913.

Mr. Dunlavy is survived by his wife, Kate Dunlavy, a son, Robert, and a daughter, Katherine, and his brothers, Wylie C. of Portland, Dr. Clyde A., president of Colorado college at Colorado Springs, and Hubert B. of New York City.

Dr. C. A. Dunlavy will come for the funeral, arrangements for which will be made today.

CARMEN'S PAY IN AIR

COMMITTEE AT SEATTLE IS UNDECIDED ON PROBLEM.

Expert Declares Banks Would Hesitate to Buy Warrants as Now Proposed to Be Issued.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—The exclusive committee of the clearing house association of Seattle took no action at its noon meeting today concerning the problem facing the city of meeting the payroll of the street railway trainmen. One financial authority declared that the issue of the proposed warrants was extremely doubtful, and that certainly no prudent managed bank could be expected to place its deposits at such a risk when the risk was known to exist at the inception of the proposed investment.

It was added by the same authority that the term of the proposed warrants was most uncertain, and the exact time they will be subject to the prior claim and rights of the outstanding $15,000 bond issue given by the city in exchange for traction company's street railway lines.

The street railway employees' union announced a plan to hold a strike to be held between now and Saturday morning, also to determine what action it shall take if City Treasurer Terry carries out his plan of beginning with Friday a warrant basis program to place the municipal system's payroll on a daily warrant basis.

The city treasurer today reaffirmed his decision to issue warrants Friday in payment of the wages of street railway employees.

Before redemption the warrants will bear interest.

Eugene Chamber of Commerce Plans Education Campaign.

EUGENE, Or., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—A campaign to educate housewives of this city to use Eugene-made and Oregon-made food products in preference to those manufactured outside the state will be started by the Eugene chamber of commerce immediately. The subject was brought up at a meeting of that body last night, and a committee was authorized to conduct a publicity campaign.

A number of dealers in food products at the meeting declared that the buying of certain brands of goods manufactured or packed outside of Oregon is largely a matter of habit, and the reason that more Oregon goods are not sold is that they are not advertised extensively enough to

Portland Man Has GAINED 20 POUNDS

J. O. Wilson Says Tanlac Has Just Fixed Him Up Fine in Every Way.

"Tanlac proved to be the very thing for my case, for it has not only completely restored my health but has also built me up 20 pounds in weight, and I can't say anything too good for it," was the enthusiastic statement made recently by J. O. Wilson of 190 North Seventeenth street, Portland.

Well known iron moulder at the Independent Iron Foundry.

"Back in the spring I almost broke down completely with a bad case of indigestion and stomach trouble. I couldn't eat anything but what would sour and ferment in my stomach, and gas formed in such quantities it made breathing difficult for me. I had awful sick headaches and at times became so dizzy everything seemed to be going round and round, and I just had to stand still a while before going on. I had such pain in the region of my kidneys, I could hardly bear to stoop over, and was so restless I would lie awake nearly all night. I would get up at morning feeling as tired as when I went to bed, and had scarcely any energy or strength at all."

"One of the boys down at the foundry got me a try Tanlac and began building me up from the very start. Well, sir, it has only taken three bottles of the medicine to put an end to all my troubles. I have a splendid appetite now, my stomach never bothers me, and I never have aches or pains. I sleep good and sound, have regained all my strength and energy and, in fact, Tanlac has just fixed me up fine in every way."
