LABOR PLEADS FOR TRADE WITH RUSSIA

Unions Are Giving Movement Strong Support.

MARKET EXPANSION URGED

Belief Is That Russian Purchases Would Help to Keep American Industries Going.

THE OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Jan. 20.—Organized labor throughout the country is giving effective aid to the movement for the re-establishment of trade relations between the United States and Russia. Daily appeals are coming to senators and representatives in congress. Such appeals, as might be suspected, do not seem to be based to any extent upon sympathy with the bolsheviki of Russia but upon the proposition that the remedy for present unemployment is to oe found in expansion of American markets.

The labor unions say expenditure of $100,000,000 or more by soviet Russia in this county would give work to many men in plants now closed down or working part of the time.

That the movement is organized is indicated by the fact that many of the resolutions of labor bodies in different sections of the country contain identical language. One labor organization made the mistake of sending in a printed form of resolution which evidently had been intended only as a model.

France Bill Indorsed.

This form bore the label of the printing trades of Detroit. Several labor leaders have been frank in saying they favor reopening of trade with Russia, expressing a readiness to appear before the senate foreign affairs committee in behalf of a pending bill to that effect introduced by Senator France of Maryland, who is the senate champion of the extremists on most occasions.

Senator France has been in the front of the campaign to obtain complete amnesty for the so-called political prisoners, these being the individuals sent to prison for opposing the government's war activities. Eugene V. Debs is the most noted of the "political prisoners."

Senator Pomerene of Ohio, who has been frank in speech regarding all forms of radicalism, has made public a sample of the resolutions now coming to congress from labor unions. It came from the East Liverpool (O.) Trades and Labor council and reads:

"Whereas, hundreds of thousands of workers are out of employment in this city and other industrial centers, and

"Whereas, the opening of trade relations with Russia would materially relieve this situation, and

"Whereas, there are many buriness concerns in the United States that are willing and anxious to carry on this trade, and

"Whereas, the British government already has signified its intention of opening trade relations with Russia, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that we, the delegates to the East Liverpool (Ohio) Trades and Labor council, call upon the United States government to establish trade relations with the Russian government."

Others More Insistent.

Some senators, it is learned, are receiving petitions in favor of the France bill couched in this more severe language:

"We urge you as the representatives of the people to support this measure. In the future you men who represent the will of the people will be required to pass laws that the people demand. The unemployment in this country is getting to be a menace and it is up to the representatives to enact legislation to relieve this situation."

Congress shows no disposition to override President Wilson's administration on this situation. Mr. Wilson has not minced matters in declaring that this government will not, while he is at the head, deal with the soviet regime in Moscow, and should congress pass the France bill there is no doubt that the president would veto it without delay. Passage of the bill over his veto is not regarded as possible because sympathy with the president's position is not limited to his party in congress.

SENATE THREATENS WAR

third from their own membership, Albert Fall of New Mexico. That may seem absurd to ears outside the senate, but it is true nevertheless.

Fall Lacks Reputation.

That Fall has no public reputation that would recommend him for this office, and no experience that would equip him for it, makes no difference. He was one of the senators. He was on their committee on foreign relations and that was enough for his fellow senators.

The very senators who are now complaining bitterly against the appointment of Hughes, because they say he has had no experience with European affairs fail to see the humor of their suggestion in the next breath that it would be perfectly acceptable to take Senator Fall from the wilds of New Mexico and put him in charge of our European relations.

If the senate could not have one of these three, their next choice was and is David Jayne Hill. Hill has an adequate equipment of experience and knowledge, but the thing that most commended him to the senators was the fact that he is, as they express it, "a man who will take orders," that is the whole burden of their sullenness about Hughes.

Hughes Too Independent.

They know that Hughes will work out his own policies; that is a shock to the senate theory of the foreign affairs.

They think our foreign relations should be managed by the senate and that the secretary of state should merely carry into effect the policies that the senate lays down. The chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs has been quoted as saying of course, he would "expect the next secretary of state to work with him as comfortably as he would expect the secretary of his own committee to work with him."

Senafor Penrose expressed the same thing publicly and with decided excess of confidence when he said: "I do not think it matters much who is secretary of state; congress, especially the senate, will blaze the way in connection with our foreign policies. I do not think we will be satisfied to sit back and take the programme of any secretary of state."

Senate Wishes Full Powers.

Hughes is not expected to conform to that theory. Hughes will go on the principle that the senate has the same power over foreign affairs as it has over postmasters, the power of ratifying or confirming what the executive has already done. Nobody need be surprised that the senate does not like the suggestion of Hughes.

When I say "the senate," I mean that these views are held by a group of powerful republican senators, who aren't bold enough to utter them publicly, but are eager for the newspapers to present them in indirect discourse. Just what individual senators compose the group it is not possible to say, but I have been told by one of them that all of the ten republican senators on the foreign affairs committee regard the appointment of Hughes with distaste and would prefer Root. When asked their reason they express it in an epigram by saying "Hughes is both a tyro and a tyrant." By tyro they mean that Hughes is inexperienced in foreign affairs. By "tyrant" they mean that he is unbending in character and temperament.

Hughes Rather Unyielding.

They put it on the ground that he it too direct and stiff to be successful in diplomatic negotiations with foreign ambassadors, but their great concern is lest he should be unbending in his relations with themselves.

For the objection that Hughes is inexperienced in comparison with Root there is justification and that objection has been made and is still being made to Harding by persons outside the senate and not affected by senatorial prejudice over loss of power, persons who have only the public good in view. These men have told Harding what is true, that it will take Hughes a year to learn what Root already knows about foreign affairs.

I suspect Harding will not be moved by senatorial objections to Hughes. Harding has a streak of steel in him and the senators are uncomfortably aware of it.

Harding Can Beat Senate.

Not only on this point but all along the line Harding can beat the senate if they choose to make war on him. If that fight is to come Harding will be in a better position at the beginning of his term than at any other time.

Harding has several thousand offices to distribute, and patronage judiciously administered or withheld is a powerful solvent of senatorial belligerency. Also Harding, however he has disappointed several of those who thought he was going to be the senate's agent in the White House, still has in the senate several members who remain his friend on personal grounds and will stand by him.

WHAT CONGRESS DID AS ITS DAY'S WORK.

Senate.

The foreign relations committee ordered a favorable report on the Borah resolution providing for an international conference to consider reduction in naval construction.

A decision was reached to accept as a gift J. Pierpont Morgan's former London residence as a home for the American ambassador to Great Britain.

Senator Reed introduced a bill repealing all authorizations under which the secretary of the treasury loaned money to foreign governments and prohibiting such commitments in the future.

Senator Sherman spoke in opposition to the bill providing for regulation and supervision of the big meat packers.

House.

Passed bill carrying appropriations for Indian affairs, and prepared to take up agricultural appropriations bill.

Tobacco schedule hearings held by ways and means committee.

Bill to require lobbyists to register introduced by Representative Welty, democrat, Ohio.

Resolution calling on heads of postoffice, war and navy departments to report on the number of German airplanes purchased in 1920 was introduced by Representative Madden, republican, New York.

COAL INQUIRY HAMPERED

FEDERAL INVESTIGATOR SAYS INTERESTS BLOCK WORK.

Attempts to Protect Profiteers From Prosecution Alleged to Meet With Success.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Charges that the New York Wholesale Coal Dealers' association was "placing every obstacle poss'ble" in the way of federal investigations and prosecutions in coal profiteering, were made before a senate committee today by A. W. Riley, investigator of the department of justice.

The committee went into executive session to obtain the details after Riley said that their disclosure in open session would hamper grand jury proceedings.

"Are you doing anything to follow up these cases with prosecutions in New York or elsewhere?" Chairman La Follette asked the witness prior to the decision to go into executive session.

"Yes, sir; but we are encountering every conceivable obstacle in instituting proceedings," R'ley replied.

Gibbson Baker, attorney for the New York Wholesale Coal association, said Riley, had been "running with the hares and hunting with the hounds."

"Mr. Baker sits in with the department of justice here in Washington as a co-operator in its efforts to investigate the coal trade," he explained, "and then takes fees for representing the manufacturer's interest who is being investigated."

"Well, does Baker take money from the department of justice?" Senator Reed asked.

"No, he is helping the department eliminate the profiteer," Riley said, "but when an investigation is started in New York, Charles S. Allen, secretary of the New York Wholesale association, writes the wholesaler concerned and suggests he had better employ Baker to defend him."

BALLOONIST UNABLE TO RECALL FIGHT

Farrell Scarcely Remembers Hitting Hinton.

UPHILL BATTLE TOLD

At Time of Encounter Aeronaut Says He Was "All In," Thought He Was "Going Nuttty."

ROCKAWAY, N. Y., Jan. 20.—After recovering sufficiently from his recent balloon trop to the frozen north, Lieutenant S. A. Farrell appeared today before a naval board of inquiry and testified he had scarcely any remembrance of coming to blows with his comrade, Lieutenant W. Hinton.

The court had heard Lieutenant Louis A. Kloor, balloon commander, skirt the incident, which occurred at Mattice after Farrell had learned that newspapers had published a letter from Hinton to his wife, asserting Farrell had asked his companions to cut his throat during their wanderings in the woods.

The court, too, had heard Hinton testify that he had consuited Kloor regarding advisability of disarming Farrell.

No Mention Made of Knife.

Farrell admitted that several times he had lagged behind his companions, but he made no mention of a knife. He did, however, state that at the time of the encounter he was "all in," and that afterwards he had told Kloor he feared "he was going 'nutty.'"

Farrell said his condition was due to lack of sleep. The night before reaching Mattice it was his turn to stand watch, and when he did lay down he was unable to sleep.

The party was met five or six miles from Mattice by photographers, he testified. Kloor and Hinton accepted an invitation to ride into Mattice on their sled. Farrell said he stayed with their two Indian guides and trudged into Mattice after the others.

Camera Men Bother Him.

When he reached the camp, Farrell said, he was "dog tired," but camera men continued to bother him.

"I smiled for them, smoked cigarettes for them and did everything they asked and was all in when they got through with me," he added.

He said he accepted the invitation of a Hudson's Bay company man to go to his room and have some tea. While there Farrell said the room began filling with men who questioned him.

"The questioning seemed to drive me wild," he said. "It worried me; I seemed to be losing my sense of reasoning. I remember one telling me about things published about me in the newspapers. I seemed to get all excited. When the Hudson's Bay man took me to the private car I seemed to be dopey, dog tired and all in. I could not sleep. I scarcely remember seeing Hinton and I was going nutty."

Fight Not Remembered.

Farrell said he did not remember the incident with Lieutenant Hinton.

"Kloor told me I had better apologize to Hinton," he said, "and I did so. Lieutenant Hinton and I had always been good friends before the incident and have been since."

Lieutenant Farrell showed the effect of the illness which has kept him from attending previous sessions. He was pale and apparently weak, but walked into the room unassisted, accompanied by his counsel and a physician.

His story differed at times from that of Hinton. After several very bad falls, he said, his weakness increased, and calling to Hinton, who preceded him, he told him he could go no farther. He then asked Hinton to make a fire.

"Hinton sort of razzed me to keep on," Farrell said, "saying that we must make time. I replied, 'All right; make a fire and I'll follow your tracks.'

"I think he said, 'Do you want to make that proposition to Kloor?' I was fading fast and fell, and at that point I must have fainted dead away." He thought he remembered Kloor picking him up, and added:

"I thought I heard him say, 'Nobody is going to follow tracks.'"

Farrell Then Improved.

Kloor made a fire, and the three rested about 45 minutes. During the afternoon as they continued on their way Farrell said he seemed to improve.

Farrell said that on the third day after they landed he offered "a little prayer asking God to assist us in our efforts, as we all had a hunch we would get somewhere that day.

"It was said," he continued, "not in any devout way, but as an ordinary fellow would try to say a prayer."

BOY OUTLAW IS CAUGHT

Assailant of Portland Policeman Held at Marysville, Cal.

MARYSVILLE, Cal., Jan. 20.—(Special.)—R. M. Taylor, the 17-year-old boy robber held in the county jail here and suspected of being concerned in an attack on a police officer in Portland, created something of a reign of terror in Yuba and Sutter counties. Taylor, committed several burglaries, according to the officers, before coming to grief while trying to hold up the Southern Pacific depot at Wheatland. He is under the jurisdiction of the Sutter county juvenile court.

A revolver taken from Taylor has been identified as belonging to a Portland policeman.

In company with a negro companion, young Taylor held up and administered a severe beating to Patrolman Chamberlain in Woodlawn when the patrolman attempted to take the two men into custody after a series of burglaries in that district. Chamberlain was not shot, but was struck over the head with a gun. The pair then took his revolver and club and ran.

PEGGY MARSH IS MARRIED

MOTHER OF HENRY FIELD'S BOY WEDS CLEVELAND MAN.

Bride Confined to Sanitarium Where Operation Was Undergone for Appendicitis.

The bride is confined in a sanitarium here where she recently underwent an operation for appendicitis.

She came to this country a few weeks ago and announced she would institute legal proceedings to obtain part of the fortune of the late Henry Field II of Chicago, on behalf of her four-year-old son, Henry Anthony Marsh.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—The marriage of Peggy Marsh, the young actress, to Elbert E. Johnson will not terminate the litigation of the actress against the Marshall Field estate, J. P. Wilson Sr., counsel for the Field estate, said today.

Peggy Marsh, former chorus girl, met Henry Field, grandson of Marshall Field, in London. After Henry Field's death in July, 1917, she instituted suit here for construction of the Marshall Field will.

According to her story she had received from Henry Field at least $50,000 in cash and presents. He was further said to have signed an agreement to pay her $100,000.

A formal claim for this latter amount was filed in 1919 against Henry Field's estate. The claim was not contested by the Field family who let it be known that they recognized Peggy Marsh's child as the child of Henry Field.

The suit to construe the will of Marshall Field so as to give to the actress' son a share in his great grandfather's millions was unsuccessful. But court decisions held the child heir to the $4,000,000 which Henry Field left when he died intestate.

NEGRO SUSPECT SOUGHT

Man Last Seen With L. A. McGee, Slain Oregon Man.

STOCKTON, Cal., Jan. 20.—Investigation into the death of L. Arthur McGee of Oregon, whose dead body was placed on the Southern Pacific rails near here Sunday after he had been shot in the neck and dragged to the track, reveals that he left Stockton Saturday night with a negro companion. Efforts to locate the negro are being made.

Robbery was no: the motive of the crime, the money of the deceased being found in his pockets.

PLANTER HELD MURDERER

Coroner's Jury Finds Wife Was Insured for $200,000.

ABERDEEN, Miss., Jan. 20.—W. A. Thweatt, a planter, was arrested today on a warrant charging murder in connection with the death of his wife, who perished in a fire that destroyed their home December 6.

A coroner's jury found that Mrs. Thweatt was insured for $200,000, payable to her husband, and that when he was awakened by smoke he dressed and packed some of his belongings before going for water to fight the fire.

BORAH ARMAMENT MEET IS APPROVED

Action Taken by Foreign Relations Committee.

THREE NATIONS AFFECTED

Resolution Proposes Negotiations for Curbing Navies of England, Japan and United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. — Senator Borah's resolution proposing negotiations for reduction of naval building by the United States, Great Britain and Japan was reported favorably today by the senate foreign relations committee.

In lieu of the original proposal that the negotiations look to a reduction of 50 per cent in future building for five years, the committee proposed that the negotiations provide for such reductions as can be agreed upon.

No Record Vote Taken.

No record vote was taken on the Borah resolution, but that offered by Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, proposing that the United States have an American representative participate with the disarmament commission of the league of nations was defeated, 8 to 3, on a straight party alignment.

As approved, the Borah resolution reads:

"Resolved by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled. That the president of the United States is requested, if not incompatible with the public interests, to advise the governments of Great Britain and Japan, respectively, that this government will at once take up directly with their governments and without waiting upon the action of any other nation the question of naval disarmament, with a view of promptly entering into a treaty by which the naval building programmes of each of said governments, to wit, that of Great Britain, Japan and the United States, shall be reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon."

"Sec. 2. That this proposition is suggested by the congress of the United States to accomplish immediately a substantial reduction of the naval armaments of the world."

Early Senate Action Hoped.

Chairman Lodge said it was impossible to say when the resolution could be brought before the senate, but that he hoped it would be at an early date.

The committee finally decided to limit the proposed negotiations to the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

The committee struck out the preamble of the Borah resolution, which declared that a Japanese official had said that Japan could not consent to naval reduction without action by the United States.

Another amendment made was in minor phraseology to limit the negotiations to naval disarmament and exclude all consideration of military reduction. This was the intention of Senator Borah, but some members felt that the original language was not clear.

Judge Marries 1095 Couples.

CHEHALIS, Wash., Jan. 20.—(Special.)—P. C. Beaufort, local justice at Chehalis for the past 12 years, has performed 1095 marriages during that period. For 1920 he collected and turned in to the county treasury the sum of $9323 in fines. Justice Beaufort, who is a democrat, was caught in the recent republican landslide by the voters who voted their party ticket, but even at that ran far ahead of other democrats in this city.

Senate Indorsement Asked.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—A favorable report on the Sutherland resolution proposing that the government indorse the European relief movement inaugurated by Herbert Hoover was ordered today by the senate foreign relations committee.
