

LENINE AND CAPITAL HAVE DRAWN BATTLE

Premier Brands American Financiers Jackals.

AID, HOWEVER, IS NEEDED

Fallure to Restore Trade Means Ruin for Bolshevism, Though World Revolution is Aim.

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—(Special)—The struggle between Lenin and the capitalist world has ended in a draw, but unless the soviet government can restore the economic life of Russia its failure is inevitable...

A full text of Lenin's speech has reached this city in copies of the Pravda, official organ of the bolshevik party.

Lenin's address was delivered by way of a report on the domestic and international situation of the soviet government and was, in part, a reply to the extremist elements in the bolshevik party and government who are assailing him for his policy of granting concessions for the exploitation of Russian resources to foreign capitalists.

According to the information reaching here more than 60 delegates, headed by Bucharin, editor of Pravda, hurried questions at Lenin demanding explanations of his newly inaugurated policy of dealing with "bourgeois" governments and capitalists.

Americans "Savage Jackals." Defending the concessions granted recently by the soviet government to a group of American financiers, Lenin referred to the latter as a "group of American capitalist jackals of the most savage kind."

He pleaded for approval of the concessions as a necessary means of saving the soviet government. The only group of American financiers who have received any concessions from the soviet government is that headed by Washington D. Vanderlip of Los Angeles, who recently returned from Russia.

"To defeat capitalism in general," said Lenin in part, "it is necessary, first, to defeat the exploiters and defend the rights of the exploited and, secondly, to establish new economic relations. If we fail to solve this problem we will find that no victories in the cause of smashing the exploiters in the cause of the defeat of international capitalism, will lead to anything tangible and that a return to the old scheme of things will be inevitable."

Referring to the opposition within our party to the granting of concessions to foreign capitalists, Lenin reiterated his position that soviet Russia came out victorious in the struggle with foreign intervention.

Because of the pressure of the stronger in a military sense but because of the process of domestic dissolution in the countries of the east and the divergence of their respective interests.

Lenin Plots Allied Discard. One of the objects of soviet foreign policy said the bolshevik premier, is to sow still greater discord between France and England and among the allies in general than that which, to his mind, already exists.

"This discord has increased considerably," said Lenin, "especially as a result of the project for the conclusion of an agreement with a group of American capitalist jackals of the most savage kind, headed by a multimillionaire who has rounded up about him a group of other millionaires."

Lenin regarded the Vanderlip concessions, to which he referred in the latter passage, as capable of rousing discord between the United States on one side and France and England on the other. Apparently he seemed to be of the opinion that Vanderlip represented American capital in general, which, in turn, would be in a position to force the government at Washington to enter into trade relations with Russia and even recognize the soviet government.

Lenin prides himself on the fact that the soviet government had finally obtained "a foothold" in the international politics of the respective countries.

"Up until now," he said, "we had no foothold in the international situation. We have now obtained this foothold and the cause of it is in the attitude of the smaller nations, who are entirely dependent upon the great powers, both in a military and economic sense. These smaller nations are now eager for peace with us."

World Revolution is Design. But while seeking peace with the governments of the bourgeois countries, Lenin emphasized, the bolshevik government must not give up its aim of world revolution, for in the latter, he said, lies the ultimate salvation and justification of the soviet experiment.

"We have always maintained," said Lenin, "that our victory cannot be secure if a proletarian revolution in the west does not come to our assistance. Our revolution must be regarded solely from the international viewpoint. In order to win we must achieve a proletarian world revolution or a revolution in at least the most important capitalist countries. Our calculations in this respect for the past three years have not materialized, in so far as there has been no attainment of this object. Neither side has either won or lost. Neither the soviet government nor the rest of the capitalist world has won. The most important thing before us is to preserve the existence of the proletarian power of the soviet government and to prevent the absence of a socialist revolution in the rest of the world."

To accomplish this object, Lenin concluded, the soviet government should be willing to grant concessions and concessions until such time when the world revolution breaks loose.

BRIDE'S FIGHT RELATED (Continued From First Page.) retired about 11 o'clock in a room fronting on Fourteenth street, from the windows of which he could see half of the south sidewalk of Alder street as far west as Fifteenth.

"I was asleep when the cries of a woman awakened me," he said. "I looked out the window and saw an automobile going east on Alder street, at about ten miles an hour. It seemed to stop near the curb and a woman sort of fell out—she just came out, she didn't step out—

Two Picked for Destruction in Cork for Reprisal.

TROOPS USE DYNAMITE

Inmates of Homes of Sinn Fein Sympathizers Permitted to Leave. 10 Explosions Spread Terror.

CORK, Ireland, Jan. 20.—The first official destruction for attacks on crown forces in Cork city since martial law was enforced in this area was carried out today when two houses in Washington street, where two members of the royal Irish constabulary were attacked Saturday last, were destroyed by military forces.

The military authorities' assertion that the houses were destroyed by dynamite fired from six houses in Washington street and that "the two worst" were selected for destruction.

A large force of military arrived at 11 o'clock and drew a cordon around several blocks, and no one was permitted to enter or leave. The street of Washington street was searched. The work of blowing up the designated houses was done about 11:30 o'clock and the work was done carefully to prevent damage to adjoining property.

Revolvers Turned on Crowd. The houses selected for reprisals are said to have been occupied by well-known Sinn Fein sympathizers who were given warnings to clear out and then military engineers prepared for the demolition. Meanwhile officers with drawn revolvers ordered the large crowd that had gathered to disperse, saying that otherwise it would be fired on.

At 1:45 10 loud explosions followed at intervals of several minutes, causing consternation. Up to 3 o'clock, however, no fires had broken out, and no visible damage had been done to houses outside the zone in which the raid continued until 5 P. M., when the troops were withdrawn. It was then found that two three-story houses had been demolished, only the walls remaining standing, and that a provision shop adjacent had almost been wrecked by the force of the explosion. Scores of windows in other buildings were shattered.

A proclamation was issued by the military authorities today announcing that the curfew on Saturday and Sunday would begin hereafter at 5 P. M.

In majority of the ambushes and other disorders here have occurred Saturday nights.

The proclamation causes surprise as, although such employment of hostages has been in operation in the martial law areas of south Ireland since early in December, martial law has not been declared in Dublin. The authorities assert that the practice of carrying hostages has proved efficacious in the martial law areas, no attack having been made in any case where a hostage was carried.

Bomb-Proof Cars Used. Bomb-proof cars are employed by the military here. In the first formal interview given to the press since he came to Ireland, Major-General Strickland, in command of the troops, told the Associated Press today that martial law was proving a success. He discussed the reprisals and his letter to the acting lord mayor explaining that he expected aid from the citizens through a vigilance committee to supply information. He did not allude to his report on the burning of Cork.

Among statements made by the general was one that women carried weapons concealed in their skirts to the ambushes. He declared that he did not expect immediate results from martial law, but even before it was imposed the murder gang was finding it impossible to live at, homes and had begun to form flying columns in the Macroom district and parts of Tipperary and Kilkenny.

"The first result of martial law was to make these columns more active," he said. "The definite thing we are accomplishing is the breaking of the organization of the republican army. Until martial law was declared that organization was remarkably efficient."

Dying Kick Republic's Fight. "It might be taken as too optimistic to say that the present operations of the republic are its dying kick, but I believe that to be a fact. How long they can keep going is a matter of conjecture. But it is only a question of time."

In reply to a question as to what results had been obtained by the proclamations demanding the surrender of arms, the general admitted it probably was true that the number of arms personally surrendered could be counted on the fingers of one hand, but added: "In one way or another arms are coming in."

The general spoke bitterly of the part the alleged women were taking. "The military are not making war on women or interfering with them," he said, "so, the difficulty of getting the arms in the possession of the women may be imagined."

Concerning the suggestion that the people of Cork form a vigilance committee, the general said: "Sixteen months ago when I first came to Ireland, county Clara was a hotbed of republican activities."

General Strickland condemned indiscriminate reprisals, but held that official reprisals not only were justified but necessary.

"But," he added, "I don't like to

DUBLIN, Jan. 20.—District Inspector Tobias O'Sullivan was found shot dead today near the Distowal barracks, county Kerry.

District Inspector Clarke, a sergeant, and four constables were killed and a sergeant and constable wounded in an ambush at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Glenwood near Six-Mile Cross, it was announced by the authorities in Dublin today.

The car in which the constables were proceeding was burned and all arms taken. It is believed that the ambush party suffered casualties, but to what extent is not known.

The military authorities issued a proclamation today declaring that if bomb and firearms attacks on crown forces in motor cars continue, "well-known rebels" and "well-known sympathizers for the safe conduct of the occupants of all motor vehicles which are the property of the armed forces of the crown."

LONDON CENTERS RAISED

Police Say They Seized Important Sinn Fein Documents.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Alleged Sinn Fein centers in this city were subjected to simultaneous raids last night, says the Daily Graphic. Bullions in both the east end and the west end, a jeweler's wholesale drapery at Paddington, Stepheny, Eastham and Hanwell, were raided and it is stated a number of important documents were seized.

Local importance attached to a raid on a four-story house in Colville Terrace, Hayswater, which was thoroughly searched for hours.

The report will be based on statements made before the commission, it was said, but the hearings will be continued indefinitely and any new facts developed will be included in an appendix to the report now being prepared.

GORE PLEADS FOR IRELAND

Senator Urges America and World to Help Remove Shackles.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 20.—A plea that Ireland be given independence was made tonight by Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma at the 54th annual meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. He urged that "America and the world help remove the shackles from Ireland."

"I wish Great Britain might yet see it would contribute as much to her interests as to her glory to adjust this age-long quarrel," he said.

ALIEN SEAMEN DEPORTED

TRAINING OF AMERICANS URGED BY W. G. GRAMBS

Foreigners Declared to Be Making Every Effort to Drive Boys of United States From Sea.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 20.—(Special)—W. G. Grambs, manager of the Puget Sound Power & Light company, who in 1917-18 organized for the government the officers' training schools throughout the northwest and the training station at West Seattle for the training of crews, stated in a communication received by the chamber of commerce that at the present time 36 per cent of the crews of American ships sailing from this port are aliens, and 75 per cent of the officers are not American born.

He urged endorsement of a memorial to have congress provide funds to maintain the training service of the shipping board.

He wrote in part: "To appreciate the situation, one must know the conditions existing on our ships at the time the training service was instituted. Only 10 per cent of the seamen sailing on American ships were American born, and only 30 per cent were naturalized citizens. Ninety per cent of the officers were of foreign birth."

"During the two and one half years of its existence, the recruiting service at Seattle has reduced the percentage of alien seamen to 36 per cent and of alien officers to 75 per cent. In spite of this, it is still the experience of graduates of the training station who are placed on board our ships that they are persecuted by the alien seamen and by the seamen of foreign birth who have been naturalized, and by the foreign-born officers. Every effort is made to drive these American boys from the sea."

Do You Buy LOAN VALUES or LIFE INSURANCE?

Some people buy loan values with part of their life insurance money. Others buy Pure Life Insurance from Guarantee Fund Life at a fourth less cost.

Both are safe insurance—both kinds are supported by adequate reserves—both are sold at a price containing a 30% margin of safety—both are sold at a price sufficient to meet any experience of insurance history in the class of risks which they insure—both sell for a little more than necessary, but that is conservative and safe in life insurance.

Pure Life Insurance promises no loan values. It is sold for enough less money to have the equivalent of loan values in your savings account under your own name. You don't borrow such savings, they are yours.

See that your insurance provides for no loan and surrender values. They encourage lapses and endanger your protection. At best, they reduce your insurance and increase its cost, whether you use them or not.

Pure Life Insurance without loan values encourages thrift and saves you money—yet it is safe—we can even show you that it is safer.

Your name and address by phone or letter will bring a specialist to recommend a method of improving your insurance plan and perhaps saving some of its cost.
