STANFIELD PREPARES FOR SENATE SESSION

Business Affairs Are Being Closed to Go East.

INTEREST IN CANAL KEEN

Oregon Senator-Elect Believes Free Tolls Will Bring Added Prosperity to Northwest.

Robert N. Stanfield, United States Senator-elect from Oregon, returned to Portland last week from eastern Oregon to close up his business affairs here, preparatory to departing for Washington, D. C., in time to be sworn in by March 4, and to attend the special session of the senate that convenes on that date and the special session of congress that will be called soon afterward.

Closing up his business has been no simple matter. Since his election, Mr. Stanfield's correspondence alone has been so heavy that it has required three stenographers. Mr. Stanfield has tried to give each communication his personal attention, but he has had to work overtime to do it. He was accompanied to Portland by E. L. Hopple, his traffic manager, and by E. C. Coulter, his Idaho attorney, who are assisting him in closing his business affairs.

Telegram Causes Haste.

A telegram from C. N. McArthur, representative in congress from the third Oregon district, is causing Mr. Stanfield to hasten his preparations. In the telegram Mr. McArthur said:

"President Wilson, in compliance with a suggestion from President-elect Harding, has called a special session of the new senate for March 4, and you should plan to be here on that date to take oath of office and get in on the ground floor on committee appointments."

One matter soon to come before congress in which Mr. Stanfield is intensely interested is the effort to be made, in accordance with a plank in the Republican platform under which Mr. Harding was elected, to permit American coastwise ships to pass through the Panama canal without payment of tolls.

"The Panama canal was built by American initiative and with American money, and as a matter of abstract right it is only just and proper that American ships should have the benefit of a remission of tolls through the canal," said Mr. Stanfield yesterday. "However, aside from that, the removal of tolls is a matter of the greatest import to the entire Pacific coast and in particular to the industries and people of the Pacific northwest.

Freight Tariffs Handicap.

"High overland freight tariffs at present are an enormous handicap to our prosperity in the northwest. Our lumber mills are idle and workers are out of employment, when they should be working overtime to supply the need for lumber in the east and middle west for housing purposes. High overland rail freight tariffs make the price of Pacific coast lumber so high in the east that there is no market for it, although lumber prices on the coast at present are lower than they have been in years.

"And lumber is by no means the only industry that free tolls would benefit. I have been interested in investigating the possibilities of water transportation, for example, to relieve the wool growers from the high tariffs. The wools of eastern Washington, northern and western Idaho and eastern Oregon can be shipped to Portland and transshipped by water through the Panama canal to Boston even under present conditions at considerable saving to the wool growers, the water rates from Portland being 90 cents a hundred for baled wool, and $1 a hundred for wool in the original bag, which is considerably under the overland tariffs. Removal of Panama canal tolls would give the northwest an added advantage."

Mr. Stanfield also discussed his views as to the immediate needs of the United States, and particularly of the Pacific northwest, to make positive the "return to normalcy" movement that began with the election of Mr. Harding.

Adversity Is Experienced.

"All American industries are looking forward hopefully to the republican administration, for they are realizing adversity that is the result of the inactivity of American industry because of the competition of foreign importations of products that have been dumped on our markets," said Mr. Stanfield. "These foreign importations have been sufficient to create a supply greater than the ability of the American market to absorb.

"This necessitated a curtailment of production, which has thrown millions of American wage earners out of employment. The people are conscious that employment and prosperity can only be restored by elimination of this disastrous competition from foreign countries.

"The farmers of the Pacific northwest are suffering from the effects of this competition of importations of farm products such as sheep, mutton, wheat, eggs, wool, butter and other agricultural products from China, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South America, where they are produced by labor which has not experienced or does not enjoy the American standards of living. Consequently, it does not demand a wage that is necessary to the American laborer.

Importations Held Surplus.

"These importations are a surplus that displaces an equal amount of American production. American industry is competent and able to supply all American requirements. So long as this surplus is permitted to come into competition with American products, it will result in the inactivity of that much of American industry, and to that extent will add to the army of unemployed labor.

"Our only hope for the restoration of prosperity," he continued, "is the enactment of a tariff equal to the difference in the cost of production by our foreign competitors and that of the American producers.

"It is to be hoped that for the purposes of temporary relief, the Fordney tariff schedules may be enacted and become law at this session of congress, and that these will be succeeded by the enactment of tariff protection schedules which will be worked out on a scientific basis by the special session of congress to be called by President Harding shortly after his inauguration."

Upward Trend Believed Noticed.

Mr. Stanfield said he feels much encouraged by the prospects for improvement of conditions in the Pacific northwest. He believes the upward trend has been started already through the election of Mr. Harding and the confidence this has engendered. He continued:

"Production of the industries of the northwest is depressed by reason of the fact that the market values are less than the cost of production, and so a shortage of requirements has been inevitable. But by operation of the inexorable law of supply and demand, a shortage of production will take place and higher prices will be commanded for northwest wool, northwest beef, northwest mutton, northwest lumber and northwest wheat.

"However, the northwestern industries are not looking forward to higher prices alone to give them prosperity. The lessened cost of production that is resulting from less costly labor and other elements of production will give to them a substantial profit.

"The livestock, agricultural and kindred industries have perhaps experienced a readjustment that places them in a sound financial position and the profits of this production will soon alleviate the natural embarrassment of the recent past."

Labor More Efficient.

Still another important factor in a return to normalcy and prosperity, according to Senator Stanfield, is the greater efficiency of labor. That has come, he declares, there is no doubt. And with labor giving its greatest efficiency, costs of production automatically are returned nearer to the normal level.

Mr. Stanfield has not yet decided as to the exact date he will leave Portland, but it will be in plenty of time to enable him to reach Washington by March 4. He will be joined in Washington next September by Mrs. Stanfield and their daughter Barbara, who will continue her schooling in the east.

Tuesday of this week Senator Stanfield, in response to a joint resolution passed unanimously by both houses, will address members of the Oregon legislature in the house chamber. At noon the same day he will attend a luncheon meeting of the Oregon land settlement commission, of which he is a member, in the Marion hotel at Salem.

UNITED STATES SENATOR-ELECT, WHO IS SETTLING HIS BUSINESS AFFAIRS PREPARATORY TO GOING TO WASHINGTON.

Mignon Chorus Makes Hit in Auditorium Concert.

Pipe Organ Solos by Francis Richter Also Feature.

PIPE ORGAN solos by Francis Richter, and choral numbers and individual solos by members of the Mignon chorus and quartet, formed the bill of musical attractions yesterday afternoon, at the public auditorium regular Sunday afternoon municipal concert. The number of paid admissions was 1291.

Mrs. Ella Hoberg Tripp and her singers of the Mignon chorus presented quite a treat in the line of choral music, and her 26 young women, neatly dressed in white, sang with that ease and finish that come from long and faithful vocal training under the direction of a competent authority. The vocal programme was entirely from memory, and the exquisite vocal shading in the rendition of "In the Time of Roses" (Reichardt), and "Springtime" (Woller), was much admired. Bertha Ellingbo and Josephine Knutson sang two solos, with chorus added, and sang so excellently that they won hearty applause, especially in the deep contralto appeal of that old American song "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny." Josephine Lofquist, soprano, was quite successful in singing "At the Dawning" (Cadman), and for an extra number sang an amusing ditty "He Kissed Her"—being a recital of the love experiences of a 35-year-old woman and a boy just 5 years old. The Dixie quartet—Mrs. Tripp, soprano; Jessie H. Hammond, contralto; Gilbert H. Charters, tenor, and Earl H. Abbett, baritone, sang with stirring effect, "Song of the Vikings" (Fanning), and for an extra number "Dixie."

Mr. Richter won golden opinions of emphatic approval for the masterly manner in which he rendered a programme of pipe organ solos. His rendition of Wagner's overture to "Tannhauser" was dramatic, powerful, and finished in every particular. Two other organ numbers from Liszt and Gounod were especial treats, both in registration and performance. Mr. Richter has a large and enthusiastic following in this city that likes to attend whenever he gives an organ recital, and they gave many signs of delighted approval of his work yesterday.

Hood River Chief of Police Idol of Fair in France.

Perfumed Notes From Mademoiselle Flood Oregon Postoffice.

HOOD RIVER, Or., Feb. 6.—(Special.)—The incident of the primary of 1920, when local democrats cast a complimentary vote for William Hart, local chief of police and a Kentucky bourbon of the old school, is now being re-echoed in letters to Mr. Hart from France.

The admirers of Mr. Hart, in writing in his name, designated him merely as Bill Hart, as he is familiarly known here. When the ballots were being canvassed by the office of the secretary of state, some one concluded that Hood River county democrats had nominated William S. Hart, motion picture star, as their candidate for sheriff.

Bill Hart, the bad man of the movies, when interviewed at Los Angeles, accepted the nomination. The news item was printed in Paris editions of American newspapers and motion picture magazines, and the Hood River police chief has been receiving letters from the fans, mostly of the gentler sex, of the silver screen.

Yesterday Mr. Hart received a letter from Mademoiselle R. Broche, of Paris, who asked for an autographed photograph. The correspondent also desired a dissertation on the manner of living of the American women with special emphasis on how she assumes her responsibility of the ballot. Mlle. Broche declared that she had a very high regard for Monsieur Hart and expressed the hope that she would never be disillusioned.

CORVALLIS BANQUET GIVEN LEGISLATORS

Agricultural College Work Discussed by Speakers.

MORE THAN 200 ATTEND

Mayor Acts as Toastmaster at Gathering of Faculty, Townspeople, Visiting Lawmakers.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, Feb. 6.—(Special.)—More than 200 persons, including members of the state legislature, faculty and townspeople, attended the big banquet Saturday night in honor of the inspecting party from Salem. The affair rounded out a busy day for the senators and representatives, who visited nearly every department of the college.

N. R. Moore, mayor of Corvallis and a regent of the college, acted as toastmaster and addressed the gathering in behalf of the city. J. K. Weatherford, president of the board of regents for the college, followed with the declaration that Iowa State college is the only land-grant institution in the nation that compares with Oregon Agricultural college and urged that the state continue every branch of the college work.

Increase Is 125 Per Cent.

"The Oregon Agricultural college has an enrollment of 3520 regular long-course resident students, an increase of 125 per cent during the last three years, said Dr. W. J. Kerr, president of the college. "When a college exceeds the 3500 mark, it is no longer a small institution. There are 2468 men and 1052 women in the college, and of these 3138 are high school graduates, the remainder being mostly mature students who are taking special vocational work.

"Speaking of standards, 151 students came here this year from other colleges and universities," continued Dr. Kerr. He explained the financing of the college, bringing out the fact that the resident or regular college work, the extension work and the experiment station division are all under separate provision, and that funds for one cannot be used for the others.

Representative Gallagher Speaks.

"The college brings its work so close to us in eastern Oregon that I've never had to go to Corvallis," said Representative Gallagher of Malheur county. "Even way out in the hills one finds the influence of the college through its work in establishing boys' and girls' clubs, its county agents and specialists. It reaches into every branch of daily life. The home and farm alike are put in daily touch with Oregon Agricultural college."

"You have a grand institution and need have no fear as to its future," said Representative Davey of Salem.

Senator Ellis of Harney county declared that the college should be proud of its student body.

C. E. Spence of Oregon City, master of the Oregon state grange, and Senator Staples of Multnomah county were others on the programme. Music by the college orchestra under the direction of Miss Isabelle Steele of Portland, and several vocal and instrumental solos, furnished diversion for the evening. The party left immediately after the banquet for Salem.

University Museum Moved to Vacant Basement.

Space Occupied by Relics Will Be Used by Classes.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Feb. 6.—(Special.)—The ancients are going back to their tombs. Stone-encased skeletons of prehistoric animals which once roamed the palm-covered hills of eastern Oregon yesterday took their places in the funeral procession which wended its way toward the dim recesses of Deady hall and other places of Stygian darkness. Oregon camels and three-toed horses; engravings of flying fish on petographic prints; Pelle's pyroclastic whiskers; tonsorial implements used by aborigines—all these again retreat to the sunless regions.

For the geology museum in Johnson hall is being worked over into a laboratory. The curio cases are being removed to make room for the expanding geology department.

"We could not stand the crowded conditions one day longer," said Dr. Packard, head of the geology department, as he directed the funeral arrangements of his fossilized pets. "Some of the cases will be left in the room, along the sides, but we must utilize the center for a geology laboratory. The cases taken out will be stored in the basement of Deady, or in any place where we can find a secluded vacancy."

Dr. Packard said that the crowded conditions of the geology department would not be relieved for several years yet, according to the university building programme, so he had decided to make use of the geology room for his classes. But in four or five years, as estimated by Dr. Packard, the strange stony skeletons will again come out of their dungeons and bask in the light of a new science building.

NEW TERM STARTS TODAY

Increased Enrollment for Oregon Institute Indicated.

The new semester of the Oregon Institute of Technology, operated by the Portland Young Men's Christian association, starts today. Prospects indicate an increased enrollment, because of a desire of many business men to enroll for courses in various commercial branches. To meet the increased demand for accountancy training, a freshman class in accounting will be taught by R. J. Leo, manager of the Portland branch of Haskins & Sells, certified public accountants.

New classes will begin in salesmanship, public speaking, business correspondence, economics, banking, law, income tax procedure and other subjects. Among the new instructors added is Ivan W. Elder, assistant editor of the Pacific Banker, who will instruct classes in business economics and money and banking.

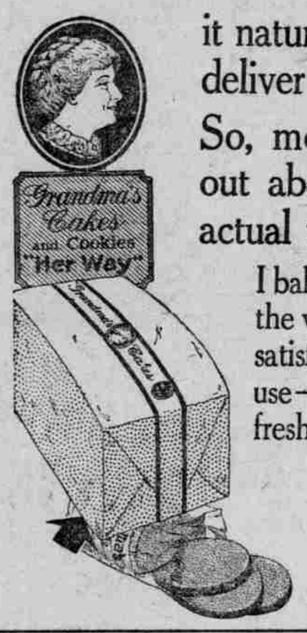
Throughout this week a lecture course will be given in all business classes, and Portland business men have been invited to attend. The talks will be given by Portland business and professional men on subjects in which they have had experience. Practical demonstrations in salesmanship, which have proved of great interest, will be continued.

Obituary.

The funeral of Albert J. Fellows, 66 years old, Portland resident who died at the Marine hospital, Port Townsend, Wash., January 29, was held yesterday at 3 P. M. at the Portland crematorium. Mr. Fellows was born in California, but spent most of his life in Oregon. He was an engineer by trade. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. E. B. Fellows, and a son, Ashton Fellows of Portland.

ROSEBURG, Or., Feb. 6.—(Special.)—The body of Mrs. Mary Elinor Bond, a pioneer resident of this county who died at Astoria Friday, will arrive here tomorrow. Mrs. Bond was 83 years of age and was born in Missouri. She is survived by three children—W. H. Bond of Bend, Or.; Mrs. J. A. Buchanan of Astoria and Mrs. James A. Perry of Klamath Falls, Or. Sixteen grandchildren and six great-grandchildren also survive.

EUGENE, Or., Feb. 6.—(Special.)—James Wesley Adams, a well-known farmer of Elmira, died at the home of his brother, Elias Adams, near that place yesterday at the age of 61. He was a widower. Besides his brother he leaves three daughters and a sister in Idaho.



Dear Folks:
To those who have never tried any of my cakes, it naturally seems impossible for me to bake and deliver a good cake for 25 cents.

So, most people are surprised when they find out about their really delicious character thru actual test.

I bake them just like the housewife does at home—with the very best of everything—and you'll find them very satisfactory for all purposes and very convenient for use—always ready for you—at your dealer's—baked fresh daily, in all varieties, for 25 cent each

Cultivate Your Own Mailing List

IT is now a pretty well established fact that it will pay any business concern to have an accurate, up-to-date mailing list of its customers and "prospects" on file.

With such a list you can get in touch quickly and effectively with everybody who may be interested in your product. You can talk to them all in a day at a cost of a few cents a "call."

Many Portland concerns keep their mailing lists in our list files so they can readily use our facilities for printing and mailing their advertising literature.

If you haven't such a list of your own we will gladly help you compile and classify it.
