

MAJESTIC FIGURE
MADE POLICE HEAD

Joe North, With Jail Record,
Elected at Victoria.

OLD ENEMIES TREMBLE

Often in Trouble With Authorities,
New Commissioner Promises
to Make Cleanup.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 7.—(Special.)—You would expect a conservative, easy-going city like Victoria to elect as police commissioner an almost notorious figure with a jail record here and in New Westminster and San Francisco, a man who has probably got into trouble with the police officer than any other individual in the city. You wouldn't expect it, but it happened.

Six candidates figured in the Victoria municipal election last Thursday. There was the former office holder, who happens to be a leading merchant in the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Visitors to Victoria can't help seeing or hearing Joe North. Sometimes he shouts through a megaphone as the boat steams into the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Now Tables Are Turned. And now he will be boss of the police department that has worried him almost ever since he can remember. Officers who have arrested him times without number must now take their orders from him. Even the chief of police will feel obliged to salute him.

Within a few hours, Joe North has been converted from roustabout to one of the most influential citizens of Victoria.

"I'm going to be the same Joe North, boys," he announced as soon as his election seemed certain. "I'll be the same as I've always been. I'll have a chance to do something worth while."

Joe's platform was not an original one. He claimed to have time for a cleanup in the police department and that he could bring about the necessary reform. He first thought of running for police commissioner six years ago. Continued "abuse" at the hands of the police put the idea into his head. But he decided not to run while his mother lived. His mother was feeble and fears for her Joe's safety would have killed her had he taken a chance then. That is his story, anyway. So he waited, and last year the old lady died.

Family Discouraged Him. Joe was discouraged by his family. They said it was ridiculous for him to enter the police force. His mother had hope to win and his defeat would be a disgrace. But Joe was determined. He spent hours trying to convince his family that he was the best man for the job. He argued that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

The people still smiled at Joe as they had smiled at him for years, but they voted for him and that was the main thing. He decided to take a chance and now that he has been given his chance the people expect him to make good. They consider that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

Forty-three years ago Joe North was brought to Victoria from Australia by his parents. He was just a child then. His father died when he was 13 and then Joe had to go to work. He hardly saw the inside of a school.

Feels Lack of Education. "That's the trouble with me," said Joe. "I never got much schooling. I used to play the cornet in a little orchestra on the roof of the Philharmonic hall. Bob Landers was the trombone player and when he went to Seattle later on he asked me to visit him. But I had my own mind, so I had to find a job and I got one in a brewery at three dollars a week. I made the money by my mother as I earned it and when it was time to go to Seattle I found it had been spent for groceries. I didn't go to Seattle, but I had my job and kept it."

When he was 17 he stayed a week one night wondering how he could get together a few dollars for celebration of the queen's birthday. He hit on the idea of getting out a programme of events with advertisements. It was a success and he made it an annual affair. Now it is a bulky, 120-page booklet and one of Joe's principal means of livelihood.

"I knew I'd win all the time," said Joe after the election. "I was elected at my meeting convinced me. It was wonderful when you think of it. I had no organization. Nobody would help me. I had to fight alone. But it wasn't all my victory. It was the truth that won."

Sheridan Gets Institute. WILLIAMINA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—Sheridan has been selected by the executive committee of the Yamhill County Teachers' association as the place for the next teachers' institute, which will be held April 7. According to the best opinion there is no reduction in teachers' salaries, but in many cases there will be a slight advance.

Astoria Chamber Secretary Named. ASTORIA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the executive committee this evening William E. Grady was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of C. I. Barr.

WE HAVE A
VICTROLA
in the desired model and finish
for you. Prices $25 and up.
Let us show why the
VICTROLA IS SUPREME
Easy Terms Given
Catalogue Upon Request
Seiberling-Lucas Music Co.
125 Fourth St., Near Washington

MAJESTIC FIGURE
MADE POLICE HEAD

Joe North, With Jail Record,
Elected at Victoria.

OLD ENEMIES TREMBLE

Often in Trouble With Authorities,
New Commissioner Promises
to Make Cleanup.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 7.—(Special.)—You would expect a conservative, easy-going city like Victoria to elect as police commissioner an almost notorious figure with a jail record here and in New Westminster and San Francisco, a man who has probably got into trouble with the police officer than any other individual in the city. You wouldn't expect it, but it happened.

Six candidates figured in the Victoria municipal election last Thursday. There was the former office holder, who happens to be a leading merchant in the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Visitors to Victoria can't help seeing or hearing Joe North. Sometimes he shouts through a megaphone as the boat steams into the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Now Tables Are Turned. And now he will be boss of the police department that has worried him almost ever since he can remember. Officers who have arrested him times without number must now take their orders from him. Even the chief of police will feel obliged to salute him.

Within a few hours, Joe North has been converted from roustabout to one of the most influential citizens of Victoria.

"I'm going to be the same Joe North, boys," he announced as soon as his election seemed certain. "I'll be the same as I've always been. I'll have a chance to do something worth while."

Joe's platform was not an original one. He claimed to have time for a cleanup in the police department and that he could bring about the necessary reform. He first thought of running for police commissioner six years ago. Continued "abuse" at the hands of the police put the idea into his head. But he decided not to run while his mother lived. His mother was feeble and fears for her Joe's safety would have killed her had he taken a chance then. That is his story, anyway. So he waited, and last year the old lady died.

Family Discouraged Him. Joe was discouraged by his family. They said it was ridiculous for him to enter the police force. His mother had hope to win and his defeat would be a disgrace. But Joe was determined. He spent hours trying to convince his family that he was the best man for the job. He argued that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

The people still smiled at Joe as they had smiled at him for years, but they voted for him and that was the main thing. He decided to take a chance and now that he has been given his chance the people expect him to make good. They consider that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

Forty-three years ago Joe North was brought to Victoria from Australia by his parents. He was just a child then. His father died when he was 13 and then Joe had to go to work. He hardly saw the inside of a school.

Feels Lack of Education. "That's the trouble with me," said Joe. "I never got much schooling. I used to play the cornet in a little orchestra on the roof of the Philharmonic hall. Bob Landers was the trombone player and when he went to Seattle later on he asked me to visit him. But I had my own mind, so I had to find a job and I got one in a brewery at three dollars a week. I made the money by my mother as I earned it and when it was time to go to Seattle I found it had been spent for groceries. I didn't go to Seattle, but I had my job and kept it."

When he was 17 he stayed a week one night wondering how he could get together a few dollars for celebration of the queen's birthday. He hit on the idea of getting out a programme of events with advertisements. It was a success and he made it an annual affair. Now it is a bulky, 120-page booklet and one of Joe's principal means of livelihood.

"I knew I'd win all the time," said Joe after the election. "I was elected at my meeting convinced me. It was wonderful when you think of it. I had no organization. Nobody would help me. I had to fight alone. But it wasn't all my victory. It was the truth that won."

Sheridan Gets Institute. WILLIAMINA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—Sheridan has been selected by the executive committee of the Yamhill County Teachers' association as the place for the next teachers' institute, which will be held April 7. According to the best opinion there is no reduction in teachers' salaries, but in many cases there will be a slight advance.

Astoria Chamber Secretary Named. ASTORIA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the executive committee this evening William E. Grady was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of C. I. Barr.

WE HAVE A
VICTROLA
in the desired model and finish
for you. Prices $25 and up.
Let us show why the
VICTROLA IS SUPREME
Easy Terms Given
Catalogue Upon Request
Seiberling-Lucas Music Co.
125 Fourth St., Near Washington

MAJESTIC FIGURE
MADE POLICE HEAD

Joe North, With Jail Record,
Elected at Victoria.

OLD ENEMIES TREMBLE

Often in Trouble With Authorities,
New Commissioner Promises
to Make Cleanup.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 7.—(Special.)—You would expect a conservative, easy-going city like Victoria to elect as police commissioner an almost notorious figure with a jail record here and in New Westminster and San Francisco, a man who has probably got into trouble with the police officer than any other individual in the city. You wouldn't expect it, but it happened.

Six candidates figured in the Victoria municipal election last Thursday. There was the former office holder, who happens to be a leading merchant in the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Visitors to Victoria can't help seeing or hearing Joe North. Sometimes he shouts through a megaphone as the boat steams into the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Now Tables Are Turned. And now he will be boss of the police department that has worried him almost ever since he can remember. Officers who have arrested him times without number must now take their orders from him. Even the chief of police will feel obliged to salute him.

Within a few hours, Joe North has been converted from roustabout to one of the most influential citizens of Victoria.

"I'm going to be the same Joe North, boys," he announced as soon as his election seemed certain. "I'll be the same as I've always been. I'll have a chance to do something worth while."

Joe's platform was not an original one. He claimed to have time for a cleanup in the police department and that he could bring about the necessary reform. He first thought of running for police commissioner six years ago. Continued "abuse" at the hands of the police put the idea into his head. But he decided not to run while his mother lived. His mother was feeble and fears for her Joe's safety would have killed her had he taken a chance then. That is his story, anyway. So he waited, and last year the old lady died.

Family Discouraged Him. Joe was discouraged by his family. They said it was ridiculous for him to enter the police force. His mother had hope to win and his defeat would be a disgrace. But Joe was determined. He spent hours trying to convince his family that he was the best man for the job. He argued that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

The people still smiled at Joe as they had smiled at him for years, but they voted for him and that was the main thing. He decided to take a chance and now that he has been given his chance the people expect him to make good. They consider that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

Forty-three years ago Joe North was brought to Victoria from Australia by his parents. He was just a child then. His father died when he was 13 and then Joe had to go to work. He hardly saw the inside of a school.

Feels Lack of Education. "That's the trouble with me," said Joe. "I never got much schooling. I used to play the cornet in a little orchestra on the roof of the Philharmonic hall. Bob Landers was the trombone player and when he went to Seattle later on he asked me to visit him. But I had my own mind, so I had to find a job and I got one in a brewery at three dollars a week. I made the money by my mother as I earned it and when it was time to go to Seattle I found it had been spent for groceries. I didn't go to Seattle, but I had my job and kept it."

When he was 17 he stayed a week one night wondering how he could get together a few dollars for celebration of the queen's birthday. He hit on the idea of getting out a programme of events with advertisements. It was a success and he made it an annual affair. Now it is a bulky, 120-page booklet and one of Joe's principal means of livelihood.

"I knew I'd win all the time," said Joe after the election. "I was elected at my meeting convinced me. It was wonderful when you think of it. I had no organization. Nobody would help me. I had to fight alone. But it wasn't all my victory. It was the truth that won."

Sheridan Gets Institute. WILLIAMINA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—Sheridan has been selected by the executive committee of the Yamhill County Teachers' association as the place for the next teachers' institute, which will be held April 7. According to the best opinion there is no reduction in teachers' salaries, but in many cases there will be a slight advance.

Astoria Chamber Secretary Named. ASTORIA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the executive committee this evening William E. Grady was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of C. I. Barr.

WE HAVE A
VICTROLA
in the desired model and finish
for you. Prices $25 and up.
Let us show why the
VICTROLA IS SUPREME
Easy Terms Given
Catalogue Upon Request
Seiberling-Lucas Music Co.
125 Fourth St., Near Washington

MAJESTIC FIGURE
MADE POLICE HEAD

Joe North, With Jail Record,
Elected at Victoria.

OLD ENEMIES TREMBLE

Often in Trouble With Authorities,
New Commissioner Promises
to Make Cleanup.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 7.—(Special.)—You would expect a conservative, easy-going city like Victoria to elect as police commissioner an almost notorious figure with a jail record here and in New Westminster and San Francisco, a man who has probably got into trouble with the police officer than any other individual in the city. You wouldn't expect it, but it happened.

Six candidates figured in the Victoria municipal election last Thursday. There was the former office holder, who happens to be a leading merchant in the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Visitors to Victoria can't help seeing or hearing Joe North. Sometimes he shouts through a megaphone as the boat steams into the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Now Tables Are Turned. And now he will be boss of the police department that has worried him almost ever since he can remember. Officers who have arrested him times without number must now take their orders from him. Even the chief of police will feel obliged to salute him.

Within a few hours, Joe North has been converted from roustabout to one of the most influential citizens of Victoria.

"I'm going to be the same Joe North, boys," he announced as soon as his election seemed certain. "I'll be the same as I've always been. I'll have a chance to do something worth while."

Joe's platform was not an original one. He claimed to have time for a cleanup in the police department and that he could bring about the necessary reform. He first thought of running for police commissioner six years ago. Continued "abuse" at the hands of the police put the idea into his head. But he decided not to run while his mother lived. His mother was feeble and fears for her Joe's safety would have killed her had he taken a chance then. That is his story, anyway. So he waited, and last year the old lady died.

Family Discouraged Him. Joe was discouraged by his family. They said it was ridiculous for him to enter the police force. His mother had hope to win and his defeat would be a disgrace. But Joe was determined. He spent hours trying to convince his family that he was the best man for the job. He argued that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

The people still smiled at Joe as they had smiled at him for years, but they voted for him and that was the main thing. He decided to take a chance and now that he has been given his chance the people expect him to make good. They consider that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

Forty-three years ago Joe North was brought to Victoria from Australia by his parents. He was just a child then. His father died when he was 13 and then Joe had to go to work. He hardly saw the inside of a school.

Feels Lack of Education. "That's the trouble with me," said Joe. "I never got much schooling. I used to play the cornet in a little orchestra on the roof of the Philharmonic hall. Bob Landers was the trombone player and when he went to Seattle later on he asked me to visit him. But I had my own mind, so I had to find a job and I got one in a brewery at three dollars a week. I made the money by my mother as I earned it and when it was time to go to Seattle I found it had been spent for groceries. I didn't go to Seattle, but I had my job and kept it."

When he was 17 he stayed a week one night wondering how he could get together a few dollars for celebration of the queen's birthday. He hit on the idea of getting out a programme of events with advertisements. It was a success and he made it an annual affair. Now it is a bulky, 120-page booklet and one of Joe's principal means of livelihood.

"I knew I'd win all the time," said Joe after the election. "I was elected at my meeting convinced me. It was wonderful when you think of it. I had no organization. Nobody would help me. I had to fight alone. But it wasn't all my victory. It was the truth that won."

Sheridan Gets Institute. WILLIAMINA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—Sheridan has been selected by the executive committee of the Yamhill County Teachers' association as the place for the next teachers' institute, which will be held April 7. According to the best opinion there is no reduction in teachers' salaries, but in many cases there will be a slight advance.

Astoria Chamber Secretary Named. ASTORIA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the executive committee this evening William E. Grady was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of C. I. Barr.

WE HAVE A
VICTROLA
in the desired model and finish
for you. Prices $25 and up.
Let us show why the
VICTROLA IS SUPREME
Easy Terms Given
Catalogue Upon Request
Seiberling-Lucas Music Co.
125 Fourth St., Near Washington

MAJESTIC FIGURE
MADE POLICE HEAD

Joe North, With Jail Record,
Elected at Victoria.

OLD ENEMIES TREMBLE

Often in Trouble With Authorities,
New Commissioner Promises
to Make Cleanup.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 7.—(Special.)—You would expect a conservative, easy-going city like Victoria to elect as police commissioner an almost notorious figure with a jail record here and in New Westminster and San Francisco, a man who has probably got into trouble with the police officer than any other individual in the city. You wouldn't expect it, but it happened.

Six candidates figured in the Victoria municipal election last Thursday. There was the former office holder, who happens to be a leading merchant in the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Visitors to Victoria can't help seeing or hearing Joe North. Sometimes he shouts through a megaphone as the boat steams into the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Now Tables Are Turned. And now he will be boss of the police department that has worried him almost ever since he can remember. Officers who have arrested him times without number must now take their orders from him. Even the chief of police will feel obliged to salute him.

Within a few hours, Joe North has been converted from roustabout to one of the most influential citizens of Victoria.

"I'm going to be the same Joe North, boys," he announced as soon as his election seemed certain. "I'll be the same as I've always been. I'll have a chance to do something worth while."

Joe's platform was not an original one. He claimed to have time for a cleanup in the police department and that he could bring about the necessary reform. He first thought of running for police commissioner six years ago. Continued "abuse" at the hands of the police put the idea into his head. But he decided not to run while his mother lived. His mother was feeble and fears for her Joe's safety would have killed her had he taken a chance then. That is his story, anyway. So he waited, and last year the old lady died.

Family Discouraged Him. Joe was discouraged by his family. They said it was ridiculous for him to enter the police force. His mother had hope to win and his defeat would be a disgrace. But Joe was determined. He spent hours trying to convince his family that he was the best man for the job. He argued that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

The people still smiled at Joe as they had smiled at him for years, but they voted for him and that was the main thing. He decided to take a chance and now that he has been given his chance the people expect him to make good. They consider that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

Forty-three years ago Joe North was brought to Victoria from Australia by his parents. He was just a child then. His father died when he was 13 and then Joe had to go to work. He hardly saw the inside of a school.

Feels Lack of Education. "That's the trouble with me," said Joe. "I never got much schooling. I used to play the cornet in a little orchestra on the roof of the Philharmonic hall. Bob Landers was the trombone player and when he went to Seattle later on he asked me to visit him. But I had my own mind, so I had to find a job and I got one in a brewery at three dollars a week. I made the money by my mother as I earned it and when it was time to go to Seattle I found it had been spent for groceries. I didn't go to Seattle, but I had my job and kept it."

When he was 17 he stayed a week one night wondering how he could get together a few dollars for celebration of the queen's birthday. He hit on the idea of getting out a programme of events with advertisements. It was a success and he made it an annual affair. Now it is a bulky, 120-page booklet and one of Joe's principal means of livelihood.

"I knew I'd win all the time," said Joe after the election. "I was elected at my meeting convinced me. It was wonderful when you think of it. I had no organization. Nobody would help me. I had to fight alone. But it wasn't all my victory. It was the truth that won."

Sheridan Gets Institute. WILLIAMINA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—Sheridan has been selected by the executive committee of the Yamhill County Teachers' association as the place for the next teachers' institute, which will be held April 7. According to the best opinion there is no reduction in teachers' salaries, but in many cases there will be a slight advance.

Astoria Chamber Secretary Named. ASTORIA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the executive committee this evening William E. Grady was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of C. I. Barr.

WE HAVE A
VICTROLA
in the desired model and finish
for you. Prices $25 and up.
Let us show why the
VICTROLA IS SUPREME
Easy Terms Given
Catalogue Upon Request
Seiberling-Lucas Music Co.
125 Fourth St., Near Washington

MAJESTIC FIGURE
MADE POLICE HEAD

Joe North, With Jail Record,
Elected at Victoria.

OLD ENEMIES TREMBLE

Often in Trouble With Authorities,
New Commissioner Promises
to Make Cleanup.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 7.—(Special.)—You would expect a conservative, easy-going city like Victoria to elect as police commissioner an almost notorious figure with a jail record here and in New Westminster and San Francisco, a man who has probably got into trouble with the police officer than any other individual in the city. You wouldn't expect it, but it happened.

Six candidates figured in the Victoria municipal election last Thursday. There was the former office holder, who happens to be a leading merchant in the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Visitors to Victoria can't help seeing or hearing Joe North. Sometimes he shouts through a megaphone as the boat steams into the harbor, advertising some hotel, or else you'll find him at the end of the dock promenade, distributing literature to incoming passengers. He assumes he lives around the city with a horse and rig and does some splicing for the baseball game. He has been a familiar character for years.

Now Tables Are Turned. And now he will be boss of the police department that has worried him almost ever since he can remember. Officers who have arrested him times without number must now take their orders from him. Even the chief of police will feel obliged to salute him.

Within a few hours, Joe North has been converted from roustabout to one of the most influential citizens of Victoria.

"I'm going to be the same Joe North, boys," he announced as soon as his election seemed certain. "I'll be the same as I've always been. I'll have a chance to do something worth while."

Joe's platform was not an original one. He claimed to have time for a cleanup in the police department and that he could bring about the necessary reform. He first thought of running for police commissioner six years ago. Continued "abuse" at the hands of the police put the idea into his head. But he decided not to run while his mother lived. His mother was feeble and fears for her Joe's safety would have killed her had he taken a chance then. That is his story, anyway. So he waited, and last year the old lady died.

Family Discouraged Him. Joe was discouraged by his family. They said it was ridiculous for him to enter the police force. His mother had hope to win and his defeat would be a disgrace. But Joe was determined. He spent hours trying to convince his family that he was the best man for the job. He argued that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

The people still smiled at Joe as they had smiled at him for years, but they voted for him and that was the main thing. He decided to take a chance and now that he has been given his chance the people expect him to make good. They consider that opportunity such as he has now will be "the makings" of Joe.

Forty-three years ago Joe North was brought to Victoria from Australia by his parents. He was just a child then. His father died when he was 13 and then Joe had to go to work. He hardly saw the inside of a school.

Feels Lack of Education. "That's the trouble with me," said Joe. "I never got much schooling. I used to play the cornet in a little orchestra on the roof of the Philharmonic hall. Bob Landers was the trombone player and when he went to Seattle later on he asked me to visit him. But I had my own mind, so I had to find a job and I got one in a brewery at three dollars a week. I made the money by my mother as I earned it and when it was time to go to Seattle I found it had been spent for groceries. I didn't go to Seattle, but I had my job and kept it."

When he was 17 he stayed a week one night wondering how he could get together a few dollars for celebration of the queen's birthday. He hit on the idea of getting out a programme of events with advertisements. It was a success and he made it an annual affair. Now it is a bulky, 120-page booklet and one of Joe's principal means of livelihood.

"I knew I'd win all the time," said Joe after the election. "I was elected at my meeting convinced me. It was wonderful when you think of it. I had no organization. Nobody would help me. I had to fight alone. But it wasn't all my victory. It was the truth that won."

Sheridan Gets Institute. WILLIAMINA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—Sheridan has been selected by the executive committee of the Yamhill County Teachers' association as the place for the next teachers' institute, which will be held April 7. According to the best opinion there is no reduction in teachers' salaries, but in many cases there will be a slight advance.

Astoria Chamber Secretary Named. ASTORIA, Or., March 7.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the executive committee this evening William E. Grady was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of C. I. Barr.

WE HAVE A
VICTROLA
in the desired model and finish
for you. Prices $25 and up.
Let us show why the
VICTROLA IS SUPREME
Easy Terms Given
Catalogue Upon Request
Seiberling-Lucas Music Co.
125 Fourth St., Near Washington

Read The Oregonian classified ads

Appropriations at Olympia
May Break Record.

GENERAL BILL $27,156,134

Delegation of Oregon Citizens Are Successful in Winning Coin for Exploitation.

OLYMPIA, Wash., March 7.—(Special.)—The general appropriation bill introduced in the house today by the joint appropriation committee carries appropriations from the general and trust funds totalling $27,156,134. Appropriations from the general fund amount to $10,840,951; fisheries fund, $297,528; accident fund, $4,216,335; medical aid, $1,130,297; public highway, $209,314; public service revolving fund, $159,000; motor vehicles, $249,400; reclamation revolving, $2,476,795; same, $215,000; oyster, $32,300; harbor improvement, $100,000; capitol building, $175,000; military, $235,810; University of Washington, $2,595,044; University of Washington construction, $499,757; state college, $1,804,194; Centralia normal, $238,600; Bellingham normal, $416,889; Ellensburg normal, $201,650; Cheney normal, $370,054.

In addition to the $27,156,134 carried in the bill, $10,840,951 differs from the preliminary announcement made by chairman Davis of the house appropriation committee that the general fund appropriation would be $10,840,951, or a reduction of $949,750 from that of two years ago. The difference is found in the fact that the bill does not include in his figures certain revolving funds provided for state departments, but which must first be established from the general fund and the $1000 price competition of the revenue to be raised by the general levy. A part of the apparent reduction from two years ago is also found in the fact that two years ago $500,000 was appropriated for the veterans' welfare commission for the relief of ex-service men, while this year the amount is $100,000.

The Pacific Northwest Tourist association is provided for with an appropriation of $50,000. This is the largest item in the bill and that it is included at all is largely due to the strong showing made before the committee by the officers of the association. It is the only item in the bill which is a delegation of Oregon citizens interested in the work, as the committee had previously determined to eliminate the appropriation for the relief of ex-service men, while this year the amount is $100,000.

Estimate in Exceeded. The general fund appropriation amounting to $