decided to occupy the Ruhr.

British and Belgian forces on the Rhine will join with the French. Orders for the mobilization of the 1815 class were dispatched to Paris today. A joint Anglo-French naval council has been called to meet here tomorrow.

The reparations commission will notify Germany within four days of the sums payable and the conditions of payment. Germany's reply must be acceptance without reservations or discussions. If such affirmative reply is not received by the evening of May 12 the occupation will begin.

The question of guarantees is a perplexing one. The council was engaged four hours trying to harmonize the views on the form of guarantees, which will include the establishment of a commission of debt. This commission will be charged with observation of the German revenues. The allies will also ask for participation in the profits of German revenues. Results of today's meeting are regarded by the French delegation as measurably satisfactory. They would rather have occupied the Ruhr first and then informed Germany of the allies' minimum requirements, but in deference to Mr. Lloyd George's conviction that British public opinion would not willingly support occupation until Germany had had another chance, M. Briand yielded. But he is Reconsidered.
