

FOUR-CENT BREAD
RUMOR IN SPOKANE

Open-Shop Bakers Declared
Planning Price Cut.

UNIONS MAKE PROTEST

Report Circulated to Effect That
Employers of Organized Labor
Have Been Threatened.

SPOKANE, Wash., May 20.—(Special.)—Threats that bread will be sold at 4 cents a loaf by open-shop bakers unless other bakers employing union help join the open-shop movement were alleged to have been made by the Spokane bakery and other open-shop establishments in an answer filed today by the union bakers to the injunction suit of the Spokane bakery and other plants.

The bakers union returned in its answer that the open-shop bakers are fighting and attempting to destroy the business of bakeries employing union labor, and have threatened to boycott and to undersell bakery products.

The bakers' union also declared that the union bakers have been harassed by threats that their supplies of flour and other material will be cut off unless they join the open-shop association.

The answer asked a counter-injunction to restrain the open-shop bakers from blacklisting and refusing to employ union labor. The answer also sought to enjoin the Spokane bakery and other open-shop bakeries from circulating cards and circulars and placing advertisements in papers seeking to induce the public not to patronize union establishments.

LATH PRICE GOES UP $1.50

Marine Strike and Shortage Said to Be Cause.

There has been an advance of $1.50 per 1000 in the price of lath within the last 30 days. The rate formerly was $3.50, but yesterday's market quotation was a price of $5.00. The end is not in sight, apparently.

According to information obtained yesterday, there is a scarcity of lath. It was said that comparatively few are made in this vicinity, it being a sort of side line with the mills. Grays Harbor is the big lath section, and the shipping rates have been disturbed and rail rates are encountered.

The price of lath has been creeping upward for 30 days, said one mill owner. "We don't make many lath here, and there is really a shortage." The local building boom has something to do with the situation, but it is due more than anything to a shortage. There is a prospect of their going higher.

STILL HID IN HAYSTACK

Cleverly Concealed Outfit Seized and Owner Arrested.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., May 20.—(Special.)—The largest still ever seized in Walla Walla county was taken this morning on the Williams Russell farm near College place. Hugh Walker, employed by Russell, admitted ownership and is held under $500 bonds. No whisky was found. The still had a capacity of one gallon of moonshine every 11 minutes and represented an outlay of $2000.

The still was cleverly concealed under a specially constructed stack of hay. Entrance was gained through a tunnel into a room 10 feet wide and 30 feet long.

Sheriff Springer and a dozen deputies made the raid. Springer crawled through the tunnel and found no one in the place. It was then decided to destroy the outfit for fear it would be moved. Walker came out to investigate the disturbance and was arrested, readily admitting his guilt.

"You came about a week too soon," he said. "I was just getting it going."

BIG LIQUOR INFUX
IS DUE IN SEATTLE

Prohibition Director Says
Runners Will Stock Up.

FURLOUGH IS BLAMED

Laying Off of All but Two Agents in Washington Is Expected to Cause Heavy Wet Imports.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 20.—(Special.)—Thousands of dollars' worth of liquor will be stored in Seattle homes during the next 40 days, according to the prediction today of Prohibition Inspector Moore, in charge of the Seattle office.

This was Mr. Moore's comment on the conditions that will be brought about by the 40-day furlough ordered for all but two of the prohibition enforcement agents in the state, which begins at 5 P. M. today.

"Undoubtedly there will be a great flood of liquor into Seattle and the state as a result of the laying off of the agents," Moore said, "but the price will not drop. Liquor runners will accumulate great stores of whiskey and wines in private dwellings, against the time the enforcement agents are put back on the job."

Moore has pointed out that the liquor is practically immune from seizure in dwellings, because by ruling of the courts a federal search warrant cannot be obtained unless evidence of sale of the liquor is presented.

There will be no wild orgy of drinking here, Mr. Moore declared, because of the efficiency of local police and deputy sheriffs. Chief of Police Searing offered today to detail as many of his men as were needed to take over the local work of the federal prohibition officers during their enforced layoff.

Sheriff Matt Starwich declared that while he can spare no deputies for the special work, his force will be on the alert for liquor runners.

The customs and the coast guard service will operate in their customary manner, having no men available for increased activity against booze smugglers.

CALIFORNIA WETS ARE BUSY

Judge Finds Liquor and Narcotic Cases Numerous.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 20.—(Special.)—Prohibition is more or less unknown in California if a number of bootlegging cases that clutter the courts there are an indication, said Federal Judge Neterer, who returned to Seattle late last night after sitting on the bench in San Francisco for the last three weeks. Judge Neterer disposed of more than 200 liquor and narcotic cases during his stay in San Francisco.

Jurors, who admitted that they had well stocked cellars, were prone at first to acquit whenever possible, he said, but later turned about and began to return convictions. Judge Neterer ordered two men to be investigated by the federal grand jury on charges of perjury after they had testified in his court on their own behalf, he said. This had the effect of bootlegging cases that clutter the courts throughout the state afterward, he says.

"Bootlegging and dealing in narcotics is particularly bad in California, or it was when I first went there," he said. "The situation is being bettered, however, as the well-thinking people are beginning to decide that the laws should be enforced. One great handicap is that the state was a 'wet' state before national prohibition. State and public officials in many cases do not believe it is their duty to enforce the national law. A police commissioner brought charges against a policeman in San Francisco for attempting to enforce the dry law, considering that the policeman's sole duty was to attend to the city and local laws. Counter charges were brought against the commission, I understand."

Dry Law Agents to Go.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—Forty-one members of the district prohibition supervisor's staff tonight will be dismissed until July 1, on account of lack of funds. It was announced today. This will leave only 12 men in the district—three in California and nine in Washington, Oregon and Nevada.

Bootleggers Hard Pressed.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 20.—Bootleggers who contracted to supply rum-runners in Detroit with whisky have been so hard pressed for supplies since the law against importation of liquor from Quebec went into effect that they have resorted to organized raids on liquor stocks in private homes here, police department officials declared today.
