

WIVES DEBATE USE OF MAIDEN NAMES

Professional Women Seek Advice as to Rights.

STAGE STARS INTERESTED

Actress May Register at Hotel With Husband Under Separate Names, if Desirable.

NEW YORK, May 22.—(Special).—Men and women alike displayed a deep interest at the first meeting of the Lucy Stone league in the rights and privileges which may be enjoyed by married women who wish to maintain their maiden names.

Among those who showed themselves avid for information at the gathering in the Hotel Pennsylvania was Elsie Ferguson, who asked numerous questions of Ruth Hale (wife of Heywood Brown), who presided.

Miss Ferguson didn't know that she could have a bank account under her own name and was relieved to hear that she could sign all her checks.

Miss Strange seeks knowledge. Another eager seeker after knowledge was Michael Strange, wife of John Barrymore and author of "Claire de Lune," the Broadway joint star piece at the Empire.

Miss Strange told with every manifestation of regret that she had signed Mrs. John Barrymore to her contract with Daniel Frohman. She said her lawyer advised her to do so in order that her rights should not be jeopardized.

Professional Names Valuable. There was some discussion of both the value and the validity of names that in the strictest sense of custom are not real.

Car Overtures; Woman Hurt. ROSEBURG, Or., May 30.—(Special).—Overtaking of an automobile near Dillard late yesterday afternoon resulted in the injury of Mrs. W. E. Chapman, of Glendale, one of the occupants of the machine.

Fall From Street Car Injures. T. J. Smythe, aged 69, of 652 Everett street, sustained severe injuries to his head when he fell from a street car on Harrison street yesterday afternoon.

RATES NOW ISSUE IN EAST. FRUIT GROWERS' PROBLEM IS PASSED ON TO HARKING.

Oranges Still Retail at 10 Cents While Coast Fruit Rots Because of High Rail Charges.

THE OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, D. C., May 20.—With good oranges on the fruit stands still retailing at 10 cents a dozen, members of congress are hearing from their constituents on the subject, and congressmen are inclined to pass the buck to President Harding.

PLANE HITS; 3 ARE HURT. (Continued From First Page.)

Mrs. Al Eisenberger, who escaped injury, crashed into a lighter machine driven by J. B. Dinsdale, 728 East Forty-fifth street north. Both machines were said by witnesses to have been traveling at a good rate of speed when they met at the intersection.

The machine driven by young Dinsdale, skidded on the curb on Siskiyou street and overturned, pinning the occupants beneath. Residents of the neighborhood lifted the automobile from the crushed and bleeding bodies and cared for the injured persons until ambulances and physicians arrived to take them to hospitals.

The Dinsdale machine was going east on Siskiyou street, and was said by persons near the scene of the accident to have had the right-of-way over Dinsdale's machine. The injured women were on their way to the

WRECKAGE AS IT APPEARED SOON AFTER ACCIDENT.

WRECKAGE RESULTING FROM AUTO SMASH IN WHICH THREE WERE INJURED.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

REMAINS OF CAR WHICH CAME OFF SECOND BEST IN COLLISION.

MEXICO'S TROUBLES ATTRIBUTED TO WAR

Oregon Discusses Present Relations With Nation.

GOOD INTENT ASSERTED

Conflicts Cause Regression to Inferior Stages of Civilization Is Declaration.

BY ALVARO OREGON, President of Mexico. (Copyright, 1921, by The Oregonian.) MEXICO CITY, May 30.—(Special).—How could the relations between Mexico and the United States be improved?

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

FREE DOM DEPENDS ON FINDING WIFE

Putative Murder Trunk Also Is Demanded.

VAULT OPENING ISSUE

Acknowledgment by Mate of Order to Enter Bank Compartment Wanted by Seattle Police.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 30.—(Special).—When James F. Mahoney, or his attorney, Lee Johnston, produces an old-fashioned, oval-topped, uncovered trunk, freshly painted, bound with a rope and weighing on the night of April 16, last, about 175 pounds, and then produces Mrs. Kate Mahoney whom he married last February and have her declare that she gave him a written order to open her safe deposit vault, the doors of the city jail will open for Mahoney.

So said Captain of Detectives Tennant today in reply to the suspected man's statement, made through his attorney Saturday, that "the trunk Tennant is searching for is not in Lake Union, and when it is all explained it will be a joke on Tennant."

The Tennant statement was the first formal admission by the chief investigator of Seattle's alleged murder mystery, as to the character of the trunk for which stragglers have been dragging and divers combing the bottom of the lake for the last week.

The detective chief elaborated his idea when he said: "All there is to this case is bound up in the production by Mahoney of the trunk and the woman whom he married last February. If he can produce the trunk as he intimates and if he can produce the woman and have her say she gave him the order to open her vault, he goes free of the forgery charge on which he is held."

Find Mrs. Mahoney, Is Advice. The trunk should be readily produced, if they know where it is, as they say. Mrs. Kate Mahoney could be found if Attorney Johnston got busy and started looking for her.

With all these things so readily established, as Mahoney intimates, he would abruptly terminate the case that must be irksome to him," said the detective chief, who added: "He could get out and enjoy his wife's motor car and his money, and generally while waiting for her to turn up or while waiting to join her, as he says he intended doing some time early in July."

Hour of Delivery Fixed. Captain Tennant would not admit the hour of alleged delivery of the supposed "murder trunk" to Mahoney about 11 o'clock in the morning at North Lake Union, the night of April 16, but through a chance remark dropped by another official of the police department, it was learned that the trunk was delivered at 11 o'clock.

The police would like to know just at what spot Mahoney was supposed to have dropped the trunk into Lake Union.

This, admittedly, was the link not yet forged, as Mahoney would not be searching Lake Union from the university bridge to the Lake Washington canal portage.

Other points were searching under a log boom in front of a mill at the foot of Brooklyn avenue, later moving out, but confining their labors largely inshore.

Marriage Held Unlawful. Captain Tennant alleged Mahoney was "unlawfully married" to Kate Mooers Mahoney. This information was conveyed in a telegram received from Chattanooga, Tenn., where a newspaper reporter "discovered" Irene G. Ford Mahoney, the suspected man's first wife. This fact was supplemented with a more detailed statement received this afternoon.

That Mahoney is a bigamist and in the cruel sort of man was the statement obtained from the first Mrs. Mahoney.

Irene Mahoney said she was the only wife James E. Mahoney ever had. The fact that Mahoney was married again was a surprise to her, she said, she said that she had no definite knowledge that she and he had ever been divorced.

Estate to Go to Nieces. Furthermore, he would not profit a penny by the death of Kate M. Mahoney, to whom it was charged he was unlawfully married in Seattle February 10, 1921, attorneys pointed out today. The estate would fall to nieces, Mrs. Kate Stewart of Vancouver, B. C., and Mrs. Carrie Hewitt of this city, at present in Wenatchee, and to a sister of Mrs. Kate M. Mahoney, Mrs. Carrie Wickert of Staten Island, N. Y.

Furthermore, Mahoney's power of attorney obtained, the police stated, through forgery, was an instrument the validity of which is open to conjecture, said attorneys today. They pointed out that the instrument reads: "I, Kate M. Mahoney, wife of James E. Mahoney, do hereby declare that I am sane and of legal age."

"Thank God I escaped from him," exclaimed Irene G. Ford Mahoney when informed by a Chattanooga newspaper reporter, acting on a telegraphic request from Seattle, of the accusation against Mahoney.

First Marriage Related. As she considered for a moment the theory of the Seattle police that the man murdered the woman whom he married last February, Mrs. Irene Ford Mahoney exclaimed: "He was that sort of a man!"

The interview with Mrs. Irene Ma-

MEXICO'S TROUBLES ATTRIBUTED TO WAR

Oregon Discusses Present Relations With Nation.

GOOD INTENT ASSERTED

Conflicts Cause Regression to Inferior Stages of Civilization Is Declaration.

BY ALVARO OREGON, President of Mexico. (Copyright, 1921, by The Oregonian.) MEXICO CITY, May 30.—(Special).—How could the relations between Mexico and the United States be improved?

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.

Neutralized Declared Foe. As regards the second point, notwithstanding the pro-illustrious sentiments of the thinking classes of Mexico, the country had to remain neutral during the great war because it was deeply engaged in its internal problems and also because in no case could it have taken part in a sufficiently decorous manner.

The direct motives calling it to war were not sufficiently forceful so large as to influence, even in an appreciable manner, the course of the war.

From the time of the declaration of war of Germany by the United States the neutrality of Mexico constituted another source of friction between the two countries, which foreign interests were able to intensify to the maximum possible degree.

Fortunately, the Mexican revolution campaign against it, and therefore exaggerating its methods and its acts and unjustly plotting Mexico, not as a country which struggles to the point of sacrifice in order to win its liberties and a place of honor in the civilized world, but as a band of outlaws incapable of regeneration.

It is also true that the Mexican people, mindful as it is of its sovereignty, suffered a violation of sovereignty in the occupation by American forces of the port of Vera Cruz and the "punitive" expedition, which reached the heart of Chihuahua.