BY L. H. GREGORY.

Two goofy exhibitions of what might be termed baseball by those who keep yelling that what the people want is "more hitting," but which bore vastly more resemblance to one-old-cat, went to Seattle yesterday by scores of 5 to 0 and 10 to 6, and gave the Suds the series, six games to one.

The first battle was the better of the two, despite its lopsidedness. The Suds hopped on Syl Johnson for three runs in the first, when Rod Murphy smote one of his customary four-base knocks over the right field wall with two on, and took a couple of more in the second with the aid of a dropped throw at the plate by Baker. But after that it was something like a ball game.

The Beavers couldn't have hit Harry Gardner's spitter with half a dozen shovels. Not many other clubs could have done it, either, for the old boy was there with a raft of stuff. He allowed the Beavers only four blows all told, and two of them came in the ninth.

But the second game was another of those slambang, knock down and drag out, nightmare, heavy hitting spectacles that have become all the rage nowadays, but which a pair of bush league teams would have been ashamed to put on in the old days. The Suds did the hardest canonading when it counted and made fewer gook plays, so they won. And there was a time or two when they looked almost as rotten as the Beavers, which is going some. But they recovered, while the Beavers didn't.

Beavers Spotted to Five Runs.

The Suds were at their worst in the first inning of the second game when Geary spotted the home talent to a five-run lead. Everything he threw was smashed to all corners of the ball yard.

Genin began it by grounding past short. Then Wolfer Texas leagued to center and Hale spilled a bunt down the third-base line. Geary ran over and grabbed it, then turned around and threw the pellet in the general direction of the north star. Hale had it beaten, anyway, so it was a hit, but Geary got an error, because Hale went right on to third on the wild throw, while Genin and Wolfer scored.

Jimmy Poole thereupon busted a single past third and Hale tallied. Cox sacrificed Jimmy to second and Krug brought him in with a double to left. When Gus Fisher whacked the next pitch for a liner to center Geary threw up his hands and rushed from the field. Daily replaced him, and that was all of that.

The Beavers made another in the third on doubles by Cox and Fisher, but that ended their activity. In the meantime the Suds were pounding Kallio, so after they had rammed home a couple in the third and one in the fourth, and had two on with none out, McCredie yanked Kallio and sent in Sam Ross.

Sam got by with only one run for the rest of that inning and fooled the Suds in the fifth, but in the sixth Chief Kenworthy, the celebrated Iron Duke, exploded a couple of tons of TNT under the pitcher's box and blew Sam so high it took ten minutes for his fragments to settle.

Eldred led off with a single. The Duke himself was safe on his bouncer to short, while Eldred reached third. Then Cunningham smote one to Hale on which Samuel pulled a prize one. He had the batter at first by a mile but Eldred tantalized him by dancing off third and he suddenly dashed for the bag. Eldred beat him to it and nobody was out. The play went as a fielder's choice.

Stumpf added to the uproariousness of the afternoon by scoring Eldred on a hit to right. Tobin followed with a crash to center which Genin foozled after he got it, and three more hands tallied, all this with none out. When Tobin reached third on Middleton's out, Sam got so flustered that he wild-pitched him home, making it five for the stanza.

Incidentally Joe Dailey for Seattle pitched himself back into a job after having been released for losing Saturday's 2-to-1 combat. His release was all made out, but when the Beavers scored their five runs off Geary and the game seemed gone, Kenworthy told him to go in and work. Dailey did it so well that he is again a Sud in good standing.

Julien Mee, the University of Illinois shortstop sent Portland by Detroit, arrived yesterday. McCredie decided to let him rest after his long trip, but sent him in to replace Young in the ninth inning of the second game. Mee is a little fellow with a big pair of shoulders, built somewhat like Dave Bancroft. He had no chances to show what he can do in fielding or hitting. The score:

Hippodrome—May Allison, "The Last Card."
Globe—Maurice Tourneur's "Treasure Island."

FROM a position at the top of his profession down to the depths of degradation and then back again to the heights is the course followed by Dr. John Brandon, central figure in "When Dawn Came," at the Majestic.

L. C. Shumway, who visited Portland as a member of Priscilla Dean's company recently and who liked the city so well that he made plans with a local real estate firm for a permanent home here, has the leading role of the young surgeon. The part is one of the best things he has done in a long and varied career which has included work in vaudeville and stage plays as well as motion pictures.

As Dr. Brandon he presents a character study that is interesting throughout in its varied phases. When the story opens the young doctor is making a name for himself in the slums of a large city by his skillful surgery among the poor. He meets Norma Ashley, a society girl, and for her sake gives up his practice in the slums to become a partner of Dr. Thurston, who caters to wealthy clients.

Dr. Brandon finds his partner and Miss Ashley together one night, laughing over his "social unfitness." In a blind rage, Dr. Brandon knocks down his partner and chokes the girl into unconsciousness. Discouraged with life, he takes refuge in whisky and drugs, and denounces all religion.

In a pretty little town in California Dr. Brandon fights his way back to self-respect with the aid of a little blind girl, whose sight is restored by faith and his skill.

Further adventures of Bill and Bob, the boy trappers, are on the Majestic screen bill and prove a novel bit of film entertainment. Pathe news reels are also shown and Cecil Teague coaxes pleasing tunes from the Majestic organ.

Screen Gossip.

J. D. Spreckles' historic yacht, the Venetia, which succeeded in sinking two German submarines during its active war service, will be seen in the movies. The luxurious pleasure craft was borrowed for use in Viola Dana's newest starring picture, "The Match Breaker," the Dallas Fitzgerald production in which the diminutive star will be seen next.

A complete musical comedy will be shown on the screen in the picture William DeMille is producing from Rita Weiman's story, "The Stage Door." Several weeks have already been occupied in rehearsing the large chorus. Mr. DeMille has been confronted with the problem of securing girls who can dance and whose beauty will stand the exacting requirements of the camera.

The influence of Booth Tarkington on the screen version of his "Conquest of Canaan," recently completed with Thomas Meighan in the leading role, will be shown in both the titles and the action of the film. Tarkington is responsible for more than half of the titles in the picture and he also made many pertinent suggestions on the handling of the acting of the action of the story, which were followed by R. William Neill, the director.

The next screen offering in which Eugene O'Brien will appear, "The Last Door," in which Martha Mansfield will make her last appearance as a leading lady supporting a star. She will be starred on her own account this fall.

ANGELS BEAT SEALS TWICE

Scores 4-3 and 3-1—Series Is Won, Four Games to Three.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12. — Los Angeles won both games from San Francisco today, the first 4 to 3 and the second 3 to 1. Niehoff's infield out in the ninth, scoring Carroll, who had tripled, gave the Angels the victory in the first game. In the second contest the southerners bunched hits in the first inning and gained a lead which the Seals were unable to overcome.

With today's double victory Los Angeles won the series from San Francisco, losing three games out of the seven played. The Angels defeated San Francisco in a previous series this season also. Scores:

it's already Ground-ready for you

—when you make Chocolate Devil Cake

Take 1 cup sugar, butter size of an egg. Cream these ingredients together. 1 cup sour milk, 1 egg. Sift 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon soda and 3 tablespoons Ghirardelli's Ground Chocolate together four or five times; add the creamed butter and sugar; then the egg, well beaten, and the sour milk. Stir well. Bake in a moderate oven; when cool, cover with chocolate frosting.

You lose not a moment in grating or melting. That saves time. You measure off exactly what you need—no more, no less. That saves waste. And there's never a doubt as to how the cake will "turn out"—for Ghirardelli's is the chocolate of proved purity, the chocolate of certainty.

Ask your grocer for this super-fine chocolate, ready to use as it comes from the can; and write for the new Ghirardelli book of recipes—it's free!
