Confession Declares That Piano is Played by Woman to Silence Footsteps of Men Hired.

(Continued From First Page.) committing the crime, but that Mrs. Kaber declared she would not pay it unless her husband was killed with some weapon so she could collect an insurance policy. Five hundred dollars had been given to Mrs. Colavito, she said, in her alleged confession, to be paid the assassins in part. According to the officers who questioned Mrs. Colavito, her statement, in part, reads as follows: "It was on the Wednesday before the murder that we went to inspect the Kaber home, learn the arrangement of the rooms and find out where Kaber slept. Two men known as Sam and Tony, who were to do the work, were with me. "When we reached the home that evening we were taken through the halls and rooms. To help deaden the noise made, as we tramped through the house, Marian McArdle kept playing a piano. The two men were shown the door to Kaber's room. "It was arranged that the back door was to be open and Mrs. Brickel was to be on the porch at 10 o'clock the next night as a signal that all was well. "The murder was to take place the next night, Thursday. On Friday morning I received a call from the two men. They said they had been at the Kaber home the night before, but had found the back door locked and no woman on the porch. "I called the Kaber home on the telephone and Marian McArdle, the daughter, answered that she could not discuss the matter over the telephone, but asked me to meet her with the two men. That afternoon, Friday, Marian, Tony, Sam and I met on a street corner in the east end. "Marian said: 'Come out tonight and you'll find everything ready. "We then discussed new plans. It was then decided that the men were to hide and that Marian was to make the rounds upstairs. When everything was ready and the house quiet she was to drop some water from an upstairs window so that it would strike the ground near a case of the next morning I read of the murder in the newspapers."

From Out the Sunrise Came the White Strangers--

AFTER untold suffering and disappointment, the Spaniards, under the leadership of that brave soldier of fortune, Pizarro, reached Peru. Who has not thrilled to their subsequent adventures in the land of the Inca? Peru, more marvellous than their most lavish dreams! Peru, the golden! With fabulous wealth and wonderful temples, roads and aqueducts! But with all their splendor, all their culture, the Incas had no system of writing. Pizarro tells us that records were kept on quipus. These were merely bunches of brilliantly colored strings in which groups of knots of various sizes and intricacy were tied.
