PLAYGROUNDS OPEN TODAY FOR SUMMER

Use for Family Picnics Will Be Encouraged.

BIG CROWDS EXPECTED

21 Men and Like Number of Women to Take Charge of Work for Bureau of Parks.

Eighteen public playgrounds will be opened in various parts of the city by the bureau of parks today.

Trained men and women directors will be placed in charge of the activities of each playground during the entire season, which closes on Labor day, September 5.

The play under the instructors will consist of both organized and unorganized games, the usual athletics for boys and girls, and series of inter-playground contests after the work has been thoroughly organized. Special attention will be given this year, according to Miss Corin Begermark, director in charge, toward developing the use of the playgrounds for family diversion. Efforts will be made to interest parents in making use of the playgrounds for picnics and for family or neighborhood gatherings.

Directors to Be Named. Temporary assignments of directors will be made for today and Sunday from a waiting list of about 60 applicants for the positions. Permanent selections and assignments will be announced Monday morning at a special meeting of playground directors in Peninsula park at 10 o'clock.

Twenty-one men and a like number of women will be chosen to take charge of the work in the 18 playgrounds. Rules and regulations for the work will also be considered at the meeting.

Members connected with the playground work in the past year anticipate that the attendance this summer will set a record for the Portland playgrounds. Last year, with 17 playgrounds, the total attendance reached more than 340,000. It was estimated that with the additional playground and the increased activities planned the total attendance will pass 400,000 this summer.

Playgrounds Are Listed. The list of playgrounds follows: Brooklyn, Columbia, Dunlavy, Forestry, Irvington, Johnson creek, Kenilworth, Laurelhurst, Lents, Lincoln, Mount Scott, Mount Tabor, North Park, Peninsula, Sellwood, Terwilliger, Vernon and Washington.

Anteater Nips Boy's Leg. Albert Haine Gets Scare at Circus. Not Seriously Hurt.

Noah Webster evidently lacked information on the subject when he declared anteaters were "any of several mammals which feed largely or entirely on ants." Sometimes, it has been joked, they feed on boys.

This was demonstrated yesterday morning when Albert Haine, aged 10, of 113 52d street, north, placed his left leg a trifle too close to the cage of an anteater in a circus holding forth in Montavilla, and thereby lost a small piece of flesh.

Albert, according to playmates, was watching the animal when Webster's definition was proved inadequate. The animal stuck its long, pointed head through the cage and took hold of Albert's leg.

Albert was not seriously hurt—just a trifle scared—and the merit of this story rests in the fact that the anteater that bit Albert was not the same type of mammal that Noah Webster wrote about.
